MUST NOT LET DOWN ON STEEL OUTPUT

Mill Owners Told That Production Will Be Consumed More Rapidly as War Goes On.

PRODUCERS GIVE PLEDGE

Will Ship Commercial Steel Only When It Is Not Applicable to Filling War Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, May 4.—Under the agreement made by representative steel manufacturers at the meeting late last week, with J. Leonard Repogle, Director of Steel Supplies, and the pledges subsequently circulated among all manufacturers by the President of the American Iron and Steel Institute, no steel is being shipped for so-called "commercial" uses except steel that is not applicable to the filling of war orders. This steel, hundreds of thousands of tons a month, stands in the way of reports being correct that no steel except for direct war purposes is to be shipped. There are, for instance, the ingots rejected as not coming up to the stringent Government specifications, and then there are the crops required to be taken in making shell steel, while finally there is the Bessemer steel, not involved in making tinplate or in filling rail orders of the Railroad Administration.

It is understood that the arrangement now in force whereby the steel mills ship all steel possible for war account is adopted as an alternative to a proposition whereby the Washington authorities would undertake the distribution of all steel. They have already been regulating precisely the distribution of war steel, and would then add to their activities the distribution of the so-called "commercial" steel. There is a double object—to increase the supply of war steel and to see that the commercial steel is distributed where it will do the most good as an indirect aid to winning the war.

Already two priorities in commercial steel have been decreed, one in favor of steel for oil development and transport, and the other in connection with steel destined to stimulate agriculture. When there is a case of a steel manufacturer having any steel left he is expected to place it where, in his judgment, it will do the most good.

A month ago many of the steel makers were disposed to expect the supply of steel to become plentiful in a short time, but such expectations have been dispelled by the Washington authorities, who point to the large amount of steel the Government has already on order, and undelivered, the fact that orders being placed are exceeding shipments, and that many of the war activities are constantly speeding up, so that week by week they consume more steel. Shipbuilding and shell manufacture may be mentioned as two important illustrations.

Shipbuilding Is Picking Up.

The Shipping Board reports the completion in April of vessels of 236,000 tons deadweight capacity, this comparing with 187,000 tons completed in March, and as two-thirds of the April completions were in the second half of the month it is clear that shipbuilding is proceeding faster and faster. Since the steel now being shipped will be put in ships completed five or six months hence, it is obvious that the rate of shipping must be much greater than the quantity that would be suggested by recent vessel completions. Much the same observation applies to shells and various other items.

Iron and steel production in April was at a slightly better rate than the March rates, when pig iron was at 38,640,000 gross tons a year and steel ingots at 42,000,000 gross tons a year. Production in the last week has been at better than the average rate for April. Capacity is in the neighborhood of 43,000,000 tons in pig iron and 47,000,000 tons or more for ingots.

The United States Steel Corporation's report for the first quarter showed earnings as follows: January, $13,176,247; February, $17,313,883; March, $26,471,294; total, $56,961,424, after deduction of $21,885,138 as tentative allowance for Federal income and war excess profit taxes and payment of interest on bonds of subsidiary companies. The total for the quarter exceeded practically all the forecasts, but the sharp increase during the quarter, whereby March earnings were double those of January, was fully expected.

Production was very light in January, and much of the product could not be shipped, holding over and swelling the February and March earnings. Second quarter earnings will not necessarily be at a higher rate than those of March, though it is possible they will be. The fairest forecast for the June quarter seems to be about $75,000,000. The corporation has been operating since March 1 at between 85 and 90 per cent. of capacity, but with the new by-product coking capacity now nearing completion it may do better. The Cleveland plant will begin making coke next week, Lorain, and Clairton following, probably late in June. The Clairton plant will make 50,000 tons of coke when in full operation, and the Cleveland and Lorain plants nearly half as much more.

The War Industries Board has ruled that consumers of iron and steel scrap may pay recognized dealers a commission up to 3½ per cent., the commission not to be split with any one, and prices, apart from the commission, not to exceed the set limits. This meets the urgent wishes of the scrap dealers, and they expect a more active market. Prices are quoted as follows: Heavy melting steel, $29, Government price; hydraulic compressed steel, $26@$27; bundled sheet, $24@$25, and the rest at the set prices.

The average prices of pig iron have been announced at $35.20 for Bessemer and $32 for basic, or precisely the Government limits. The decline from March is the official reduction of $1 in basic and $1.10 in Bessemer. The bi-monthly iron mill wage adjustment shows a settlement price of $3.30, against $3.10 at the preceding settlement. Shipments last July and August were at $2.75, while the Government price is $3.50, so that deliveries have been gradually working up toward the Government price. The puddling rate goes up $1 a gross ton to $10.05. With the granting of the 3½ per cent. commission on scrap sales, opportunity will be afforded to see if this experiment produces an active movement of scrap in accordance with predictions made in various quarters. The Pennsylvania Railroad scrap list is out with about 10,000 tons of various descriptions and no large items. Bids are to be in by May 7, and awards mailed by May 10.

Tinplate Mills' Books Closed.

There is no prospect of the tinplate mills opening their books for second-half contracts in the very near future. The Washington authorities are engaged in a fresh survey of the various uses of steel, as mentioned last week, and a more comprehensive system of steel distribution probably will be laid down in the near future. Hitherto priority has been given to very little steel except that ordered directly by Government account, but it looks now as if it will be parceled out in detail. However, it is hardly possible that an attempt will be made to allot contract tonnages of tinplate for the second half of the year.

It must be remembered, furthermore, that while the tinplate price is $7.75, this is set only to June 30, and any new price made at that time would control all deliveries made July 1 and later, against contracts made since Dec. 20. Production has been substantially as large in April as in March, when it was computed to be 92 per cent. of capacity. The final statement for April is not due for several weeks.

Shipments of tinplate throughout April have been very heavy, very nearly eliminating the stocks at mills. While the objective of all the mills is 100 per cent. operation, they do not count upon running full at any time this year. Breakages and necessary repairs are against that more than ever.

The Carnegie Steel Company two days ago blew in its Niles, Ohio, furnace, also one stack at the Ensley, Ala., plant, giving it fifty-nine furnaces in blast out of a total of fifty-nine. For several weeks previously, or since about the middle of March, it had been operating forty-nine stacks almost every day, the furnace operations, in point of tonnage, being figured at about 90 per cent. of capacity. The company's steel ingot production remains at about 85 per cent. of capacity.

In the immediate Pittsburgh district both furnace and mill operations are much higher, the general average being pulled down by the company's plants in the valleys and elsewhere. The National Tube Company continues to operate eleven stacks. The American Steel and Wire Company will begin making coke at its new by-product plant at Cleveland, 180 ovens, next week, and in about two months the plant is expected to be in full operation, practically releasing all the Connellsville coke hitherto being shipped to the plant.

Labor shortage is still an important factor at blast furnaces and mills, although it is not so much of a drawback here as the inferior railroad facilities. There is still complaint about insufficient car supplies in the Pittsburgh coal district. The apportionment of car supplies at coal mines for the movement of coal required by munition plants and railroads has been a success, but the diversion of these cars has left a big hole elsewhere. While the supply of coal is sufficient for all purposes there is no stocking-up going on, which the Fuel Administration is urging on all dealers, owing to the transportation facilities not meeting the requirements.

Coke production is showing no increase due to shortage of cars. A number of plants failed to secure cars one day, still others being without cars for two days, and continued operating only to stock their coke. This week proved no exception to the rule, having begun with a full car supply on Monday, dropping to 70 per cent. on Tuesday, 50 per cent. on Wednesday, and about the latter figure for the rest of the week. The actual movement of coke by rail last week cannot be determined, scale records not having been given out, but the shipments very probably ranged between 305,000 and 310,000 tons. For the week ended April 27 the production is estimated to have been 348,854 tons, a gain of 6,989 tons over the previous week.

PROPOSE NEW WAY TO FINANCE COTTON

W.P.G. HARDING INDORSES IT

Shippers Say New Plan Would Greatly Increase Working Capital of Mills.

New methods for financing the nation's cotton crop, due to price and war conditions, were discussed yesterday at a conference held at the Hotel Biltmore, participated in by representatives of Northern cotton mills, bankers of the North and South, cotton brokers, and planters. Randall N. Durfee of Fall River, Mass., Chairman of the Cotton Buying Committee of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, presided, and outlined the pressing need for reform at this time in purchasing cotton. W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, was the principal speaker.

The Northern cotton mills under the existing system, for the most part, are required to pay for cotton on sight draft, which means that they, as a rule, pay for the raw commodity weeks and even months in advance of receipt of the product. It is now proposed to substitute for the sight draft system ninety-day bankers' acceptances, which would be rediscounted by the Federal Reserve banks. The new system would not affect prompt payment to the shipper, as he would get his money from his bank, while a big advantage would be that the acceptance plan potentially would increase the working capital of the mills about 20 per cent.

Mr. Durfee said it appeared to him that with the Federal Reserve system and the preferential rate allowed by the system the proposed change in method would prove less expensive rather than more expensive.

Governor Harding reviewed the status and procedure followed by the various elements in the raising and marketing of raw cotton at considerable length, and ended by giving it as his belief that the suggestion to introduce the ninety-day draft to be accepted by the banker was "a most excellent one."

"Now, I assume at the outset," he said, "that there is no intention on the part of any one to deprive the producer of cotton of his cash market. That would be most unjust. The cotton producer as a rule is a man of small means. The production of cotton is distributed over a wide area and among a great many individuals. Most cotton producers have been obliged to arrange for their lines of trade in the Spring of the year.

"The Southern banks have loaded themselves up with loans to enable the Southern farmers to produce this crop, and I take it that it will be considered, withal, that it is fair and just that the Southern farmer, having obligations to pay in the Fall of the year, is entitled to cash for his product when he brings it to the market."

After reviewing the financial operations involved in moving cotton to the chief markets of this country, Canada, Great Britain, and other foreign countries, together with the part played by the local cotton buyers and the Southern banks in the use of the sight draft system, Governor Harding continued:

"As far as the domestic arrangements and shipments are concerned, these drafts have been sight, which in all States, except Massachusetts, means on demand. The bill of lading leaves a Southern bank, with the draft attached, goes to Boston, for instance, if it is a Massachusetts sight draft, and the Treasurer in the mill will accept it, and gets three days, and then he has to pay it.

"If he gets a bill of lading he has got to negotiate that with some bank in the North or East. That cotton may be three weeks or two months in transit. There is a dead load which these mills and their bankers have to carry. I am very much impressed with the proposition that some change should be made in the method of financing our cotton crop, and I believe that the suggestion to introduce the ninety-day draft to be accepted by a banker is a most excellent one.

"I think in the interest of the cotton broker, in the interest of the Southern broker, in the interest of banks in the country at large, and in the interest of the Federal Reserve system, it is well to introduce this new plan if it can possibly be done. There may be some objections to it, but I have not received any communication from any one protesting against it."

BUILD STEAMER WITHIN 28 DAYS

New York Shipbuilding Co. Establishes Record in Speedy Construction.

READY TO SAIL IN 15 DAYS

Emergency Fleet Corporation to Give All Workers on the Vessel a Medal.

LAUNCHING THIS MORNING

Chairman Hurley's Daughter to Name the Craft—Yard Ready to Duplicate Achievement.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., May 4.—All previous records for speed in ship construction made anywhere in the world, with steel, wooden, on concrete ships, will be completely cast aside by the New York Shipbuilding Corporation tomorrow morning, when a 5,500-ton freight steamer slips into the Delaware River at 10 o'clock, exactly 27 days 2 hours and 45 minutes from the hour the first plate was laid for her keel.

The best previous record for ship launchings was made a few weeks ago by the Skinner & Eddy yard at Seattle, Wash., when an 8,800-ton freighter was launched in fifty-five days. The New York Shipbuilding Corporation yard has thus more than cut that record in two, and to show that this performance is not a freak one they expect to complete the ship and deliver her, ready to take her first cargo, to the Emergency Fleet Corporation in not more than fifteen days after the launching. It is as certain as anything can be that the ship will be delivered complete in less time than the fastest built previous boat was launched.

The launching of the freighter tomorrow of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation. Miss Helen Hurley, daughter of Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, is to name the vessel, and speeches will be made by Mr. Hurley and Charles M. Schwab, Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The officers of the corporation have received a personal letter from President Wilson, thanking them and congratulating them in the warmest terms upon their achievement, and this will be read to the men who actually built the ship, gathered upon the ways where the record was made.

Medals to Ship Workers.

Practically all the members of the Shipping Board, the executive officers of the American International Corporation, and W. R. Grace & Co., the two corporations which between them own the New York Shipbuilding Corporation; Senator David Baird of New Jersey, and several other high officers of the State and nation, will be among the guests of honor. Another feature of the occasion will be the presentation to each man who actually worked on the ship, in the shops or on the ways, of a handsome silver medal specially prepared for the purpose by the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

The steamship is a single-screw collier, with triple-expansion reciprocating engines and Scotch boilers, and is expected to have a speed of about ten and one-half knots. She will carry a crew of about thirty-five men. Her exact deadweight tonnage is 5,548. She is 332 feet 6 inches over all, with 49 feet 6 inches beam, and molded depth of 29 feet 6 inches.

Despite the fact that the ship is smaller than the ships which have been built in such rapid time on the Pacific Coast, shipbuilding men say that the record is every bit as remarkable as though it had been made on a bigger one, for the simple reason that the bigger the ship the more men can be put to work on her, and within limits, consequently, a big ship can be built as fast as a small one.

Another point which officials of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation are anxious to make clear is that the launching record was not made by manipulating the work on the freighter. It would have been possible to make an even more remarkable record in launching her by leaving as much as possible of the work until after she was in the water, as one of the officers said, "riveting her up to the waterline and gilding her in."

Ship Is 85 Per Cent. Completed.

Instead, the construction of the ship has been carried on, if anything, farther than is the usual shipbuilding practice. The ship will go into the water at least 85 per cent. completed, with decks in, boilers and engines in place, funnel and masts up, bridge and gun platforms on board, and all but ready to go off under her own steam.

The decision to go after the record was made by officials of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation last March. At that time, owing to the course of material shipments, which had caused unavoidable delay on some of the other ships building in the yard, it was possible to concentrate a larger proportion of the working force than formerly upon this one shipway, and to put on three shifts, which cannot be done on all the work in the yard until accommodations have been completed for more workmen.

All the officers of the corporation say they never saw men work the way the gangs on the freighter have gone every minute of the past twenty-seven days. To one standing at the head of the ways the rat-tat-tat of the riveting hammers blended into one continuous roar, that seemed to rise from day to day—each day, louder, fiercer, and more impressive.

"We only hope that every shipyard in America beats this record before Summer is over," say the officials of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation.

APPROVES AMERICAN IDEA.

German Paper Suggests War Stamps Be Sold at Home.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, May 4, (via London.)—The Frankfurter Zeitung says that America is following Germany's example in repeated war loans, but has built up an extensive system for collecting money between loans by war savings stamps, which are sold at Post Offices and banks.

The paper declares that tremendous propaganda has been organized and the American "sporting spirit" has been appealed to by competition between States and towns. The paper speaks of propaganda in the American press and quotes an appeal by "Captains of American Industry" as typically American.

The Frankfurt paper says similar schemes have already been tried in Germany, as in the Frankfurter Savings Bank, but suggests that the possibility of attempting a similar scheme on a big scale with the help of Post Offices might be worth while, especially as it need not compete with big war loans.

SWEDES FIGHT STARVATION.

Minister Condemns Opposition to Compact with the Allies.

STOCKHOLM, May 4.—The Swedish Government is striving to the utmost to obtain food for the Swedish people "who literally are fighting against starvation," F. W. Thorssen, Minister of Finance, declared in a speech Friday at Nystad. He outlined the agreement with the Entente Powers for the supply of foodstuffs and other vital necessities against Swedish tonnage, and complained that certain interested parties in Sweden were opposing the agreement, thus increasing the difficulties of the Government.

Minister Thorssen said that if the agreement was overthrown the social machinery which was fed by the Treasury Department could not bear the new burdens which would be thrown upon its shoulders. He continued:

"The main thing is to get bread. The price is a secondary consideration."

The Finance Minister mentioned the shortage of coal as one of the most burdensome difficulties, and said that the cost of coal was oppressive. Sweden had to pay last year 375,000,000 kroner for half the quantity which previously cost 100,000,000 kroner.

"Moreover," he added, "foreign countries insist on loans as a condition for the exportation of their goods. For coal, Germany exacts a loan of 6,000,000 kroner monthly from Sweden. The price of the mark has sunk and accordingly Germany wants to help out by loans. In other words, a loan from Sweden is exacted for payments on goods for Sweden."

Minister Thorssen also cited other difficulties which, he said, were straining the country's resources severely and were contributing to the depreciation of Swedish money.

PAPER MILL'S PLANT BURNED

Sulphite Mill of International Paper Company Is Wrecked.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., May 4.—The International Paper Company's sulphite mill on Sewells Island, this city, was wrecked by fire early this morning. The plant is valued at $200,000, and the loss probably will be half that sum, covered by insurance.

The plant supplied sulphite for other mills of the company here, but no shutdown will be necessary. It is expected that the plant will be rebuilt at once. Poor water pressure hampered the firemen.

The bodies of two men were discovered this afternoon by firemen searching the ruins. The bodies are badly charred, and identification was almost impossible.

BARTHELME TALE LAID TO TUMULTY

Ex-Correspondent Tells Alleged Source of Message Indicating War Indecision.

INFORMATION SECOND HAND

Cologne Gazette Version of Senator Stone Weeping Over Declaration of War.

The inspiration of the famous wireless message with which Dr. Georg Barthelme, former Washington correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, tried to convince the German Government that the action of the American Government in breaking off relations with Germany on Feb. 3, 1917, was only a bluff and that there probably would be no war with the United States if the Kaiser held the submarines in leash for a while and sought to open negotiations, came from Joseph P. Tumulty, the Secretary of President Wilson, according to a statement made by Dr. Barthelme in the Cologne Gazette of April 6, a copy of which has just reached here.

As reported in a special cablegram printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES of April 7, Dr. Barthelme seized the occasion of the anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the war to display his alleged knowledge of American affairs. After asserting that President Wilson had dragged this country into the war by the use of sneaking devices and against the will of Congress and the people, Dr. Barthelme goes on:

"Even his own Cabinet was so at sea regarding his ultimate aims that his Secretary of the Navy, Daniels, placed the wireless tower at Sayville at my disposal as late as Feb. 5, 1917, for the purpose of sending a message across the water indirectly inspired by Mr. Tumulty, the President's secretary—that is, Tumulty had told a friend that Wilson was inconsolable over the break with Germany, but that, in the face of the Berlin threat of unrestricted submarine warfare, he could not have done otherwise. What Wilson most regretted was the fact that now it would be impossible for him to communicate any longer with Germany. He would be glad to negotiate over the whole question once again if Germany would consent to modify some of the most drastic conditions and in the meantime to hold its submarines in leash.

Alleges Wilson "Allowed Delay."

"This friend of Tumulty, who by chance was also a friend of mine, informed me what Wilson's private secretary had said, and I resolved to put Wilson to the test and also to deprive him of the last pretext for alleging that he was being forced into war with us. Germany should know that Wilson had allowed delay and new negotiations to be asked for. This was the origin of that dispatch to the Cologne Gazette that was regarded by Secretary of the Navy Daniels as so important that he lifted the bars on its account.

"In London it was at once recognized who really stood behind the message that had been picked up, and the comments in New York attached to the dispatch cabled from London led to the conclusion that on the Hudson, too, Wilson was accused of being at least partly responsible for this attempt to prevent, or delay, the declaration of war.

"As I, however, insisted to all questioners that I was the sole author, which was indeed the truth, neither Wilson nor Tumulty could be held responsible. Nevertheless, it was evident that the Government must have had a hand in the matter, as without its co-operation the transmission would have been impossible. And it was to be supposed that the dependent Daniels would not have lifted the bar unless Wilson and his Secretary of State had given their approval. In any case Wilson tried to win a delay, this only shows the peculiar statesmanship of this leader of a Government in a new phase, and it shows furthermore, that he had not yet succeeded in perfecting his preparations for influencing Congress."

At the time of the stir here over the sending of the Barthelme message it was intimated that former Secretary of State Bryan was one of the high sources referred to in the dispatch, but this supposition proved unfounded. That Barthelme sent his wireless dispatch especially for the information of the German Government and not as a news story seemed confirmed by the fact that a search of the files of the Cologne Gazette made by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent at The Hague on Feb. 13 showed that the message had not been published up to that date.

In beginning his article of April 6, Dr. Barthelme gives the following version of the events immediately preceding the declaration of war:

Story of Stone Mission.

"Let's go back some twelve hours. On the night of the Thursday before Good Friday a man returned to Washington who three days before had been sent to the Stock Exchanges of Philadelphia, New York, and Boston in order to calm the highly excited feelings and to warn the people there against rash acts. Woodrow Wilson, the preacher's son, had himself sent him out to tell the high priests in the brokers' rooms that the deliberations that had been going on during the last few days under the cupola of the Capitol in the Federal capital at a special session of Congress were not to be taken tragically.

"Wilson merely wanted to obtain the power to declare war for the purpose of putting pressure upon Germany. He would, nevertheless, make no use of the authorization. And when the emissary had again reached Washington he breathed a sigh of relief, because his message had been everywhere greeted with joy by the majority of his hearers, although not by all. He believed the disaster had been averted from his country.

"Senator William Stone, Chairman of the Senate Committee for Foreign Affairs, had, in spite of his old age, borne the inconveniences of this journey of pacification and in its result he found himself fully rewarded for all that he had done during the last three and a half years for the maintenance of peace between the two nations. But when Senator Stone picked up the afternoon papers he read there that the President had just signed the declaration of war on Germany!

"'Wilson, the preacher's son; Wilson, who only three days before had sent him out to declare that he did not think of doing what he had just now done! And Senator William Stone buried his face in his hands and wept bitterly and moaned over and over again: 'Now I am branded as a liar before all those before whom I appeared in the last couple of days!' So I was told at that time by one who certainly knew."

SOLDIERS' FAMILIES IN UNIT.

Regiments of Relatives to be Organized for Welfare Work.

The first regiment of the Soldiers' Families of America, organized in this city, is the first unit of this recently organized national organization, the purpose of which is to strengthen the morale of American soldiers in France by protecting and providing for the welfare of their dependents at home. The unit is the model after which other units in all parts of the United States will be organized.

Judge William H. Wadhams, who is one of the leaders in the movement, is now in Europe visiting France and England in behalf of the organization. He is outlining the plan and scope of the organization to the soldiers over there and is also making a careful study of the needs of the fighting men. He will shortly return to this country. Each unit in the national organization will correspond in civil life with some regiment in the army.

The project as contemplated by Mrs. Walsron Hill, the National President, Judge Wadhams, and other leaders in the movement may be described as follows:

"Establishment of a Regimental Family Unit for each regiment in the service of the United States, dividing the families into companies corresponding in personnel to the companies of the regiment, each company of the Regimental Family Unit to have as its Chairman the wife, mother, or sistor of the Captain of the corresponding company in actual war service. The Executive Committee of the Regimental Family Unit is made up of the Chairmen of the various companies and the wives or near relatives of the Majors.

"The company Chairmen are to appoint the heads of two committees, the Soldiers' Needs Committee and the Home Welfare or Family Needs Committee. The duty of the first is to do everything possible to send cheer and comfort to the soldiers at the front. The second committee requires that each member look out for the welfare of at least ten families of soldiers, make personal friendly visits, and operate with all the beneficence of fraternity and not cold charity.

"The unit which has been organized in New York corresponds with the troops of a regiment at Camp Upton, L. I., and has the indorsement of the Colonel commanding that regiment, according to the organizers."

TO ABANDON GERMAN TYPE.

Philadelphia Morning Gazette Will Be Printed in English.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—The Philadelphia Morning Gazette, one of the oldest German language newspapers in this city, announced last night that beginning with next Thursday it will appear in English type.

"With this innovation," the announcement said, 'we will not drop the German type entirely, by reason of a Government suggestion that we allot a certain amount of space to local and telegraphic news and such official Government information as food, fuel, Liberty bonds, conscription and other important notices to readers of the German language who cannot be reached by any other method."

FIRE TRUCK RUNS WILD, DAMAGES STORE FRONTS

Two Wrecked, Four Firemen Hurt, and Woman Badly Injured by Auto.

Two firemen operating the steering wheels of a heavy fire truck on its way to a fire lost control of the apparatus yesterday while they were trying to turn into Broadway from Hamilton Place. The truck wrecked the fronts of two stores near 136th Street after hurling several pedestrians to the pavement. Four firemen were injured, and a woman was taken to the Knickerbocker Hospital in a serious condition with a fractured skull and internal injuries.

When the truck left the house of Hook and Ladder 23 in 139th Street near Amsterdam Avenue the fireman at the wheel turned the apparatus to run down the incline through Hamilton Place, so that he would pass into Broadway at 135th Street, and then make his way easily to the alarm box at 132d Street. The machine gathered great speed as it rushed down the three blocks toward Broadway and Policeman William Weekener, on traffic duty, sounded an alarm because he thought the apparatus was beyond control of the firemen.

As the long apparatus reached Broadway the firemen worked frantically at the brakes to slacken the pace, so that they could make the turn into Broadway. Apparently the brakes failed to work, and the truck dashed across Broadway and crashed into the glass front of the grocery store of Watkins & Banseth at 3,358, and the store of the Hygrade Wine Company.

Hundreds of women and children fled when they saw the heavy apparatus plunging across the curbstones, but Mrs. Mildred Jenkins of 610 West 135th Street was hurled to the pavement and her dress caught in part of the truck's mechanism. As the heavy machine crashed into the store she was thrown through an opening in the sidewalk into the basement under the store. She was unconscious when she was taken to Knickerbocker Hospital.

Charles Juna, a fireman standing on the truck, was also hurled through the small opening to the basement, and he remained unconscious for several hours, although surgeons said they thought he would recover from his injuries. As the truck rebounded after striking heavy iron supports in the building its wheels settled into a small excavation where the pavement was being repaired and it turned over. Three other firemen were injured slightly when it fell. They were Michael Sheridan of 1,068 Woodycrest Avenue, Charles Marquard of 541 East Eighty-fifth Street, and Morris Spencer of 560 West 144th Street.

The name of the driver of the truck was not given out by the police, but it was said that both the Police and the Fire Departments were investigating to fix the blame for the accident. It was learned that this truck was responding to a false alarm. A box had been affected by the vibration of heavy motor trucks passing and the wires became disconnected.

ACCEPTS CREEL INVITATION.

Publishers to Investigate Work of Public Information Bureau.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Frank P. Glass, President of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, today accepted the invitation of George Creel to send a committee representing the association to inquire into the work being done by the Committee on Public Information, of which Mr. Creel is Chairman.

In a letter addressed to Mr. Creel, Mr. Glass declared that he was impressed that "there should be a more thorough knowledge on the part of the public of your committee's function and work," and that he was convinced that "such a knowledge would be most beneficial to the country, and especially to the newspapers."

At the recent meeting of the Publishers Association in New York Hopewell Rogers, its retiring President, denounced Mr. Creel as both incompetent and disloyal. Mr. Creel at once wrote to the association demanding an investigation of his work. Mr. Glass in his reply assured Mr. Creel that he did not entertain the view that Mr. Creel had been disloyal to the country in any of his utterances or work.

FORESEES OIL CRISIS.

Secretary Lane Urges Adoption of Leasing Bill at Once.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Secretary Lane predicted today that ships, railroads and war industries would be unable to obtain fuel oil after sixty days if the Leasing bill was not passed by Congress.

Early agreement on the bill was forecast today by Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, Chairman of the Public Lands Committee, which is considering the bill. The agreement will give the bill the status demanded by the Administration and favored by President Wilson and the Department of the Interior, as against the proposals of oil men seeking Government patents to land already developed. Under the Administration bill royalties would be paid the Government under the leases.

A majority of the House Committee favored amendments which would give larger privileges to those now engaged in oil production on public lands, and which was opposed by the Administration.

Secretary Lane's prediction was made in a letter to Mr. Ferris. It said:

"I trust you will press for immediate action upon the leasing bill. It is nothing less than a national war necessity that the supply of fuel on the Pacific Coast be at once increased. I am in touch with the situation through the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines, and the facts before me justify the prophecy that within sixty days railroads, airplane factories, shipyards, ships, and many industries will be unable to secure oil or fuel of any kind if a bill is not passed under which the producing lands will be open to the fullest development."

DEDICATE K. OF C. BUILDING.

Home for Men at Pelham Bay Open to All Creeds.

Stating that the time of sectarian bigotry, animosity, and superstition had gone forever, and that Catholic, Protestant, Jew, and Gentile, all Americans, were welcome under its roof, William P. Larkin, on behalf of the Knights of Columbus, yesterday afternoon formally turned over to the Government at Pelham Bay naval cantonment the Knights of Columbus building, which was erected by that organization to serve the men at the cantonment as a recreation centre. More than 2,000 persons attended the dedicatory exercises.

Rear Admiral Nathaniel P. Usher accepted the building on behalf of the United States Government. The building was blessed by the Right Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, who has just been appointed by the Pope Bishop to the Catholic soldiers in the American expeditionary forces in France.

The building is a frame structure containing a hall 40 by 90 feet, a writing room, library, and various other rooms, and cost $15,000. Mr. Larkin said this building is one of a hundred similar ones that have been erected in various army and navy camps and cantonments throughout the country. He added that the Knights have erected forty huts in France and have 250 field secretaries in service there.

It was announced that the building would be turned over every Friday night to the sailors of Jewish faith. A letter of thanks from the Hebrew War Committee was read. Lieutenant Thomas S. McGrath, U. S. N., Catholic chaplain at the station, is in charge of the building.

Columbia for Whitman.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 4.—Word was received at the Executive Chamber today that the Republican organization of Columbia County adopted resolutions last night recommending the renomination of the entire list of Republican State officers, headed by Governor Whitman. It was said at the Executive Chamber that Columbia was the first of the sixty-two counties in the State to take such action.

CHICAGO, May 4.—The Federal Grand Jury which reported today recommended that the sale of newspapers printed in German be prohibited by law, and further that English language newspapers refrain from "unduly agitating the public mind" by alarming headlines.

CHEMISTS BAR GERMANS.

Club Takes Questionnaire to Eliminate Enemies.

The Trustees of the Chemists' Club have sent a letter and questionnaire to each member of the club for the purpose of eliminating from the membership all persons not heartily in accord with the attitude of the United States in the war.

The letter says that the German language shall not be used in conversation in the club; that all disloyal citizens of the United States or its allies must avoid the club, and that any member of the club, of whatever descent, and whether an American citizen, whose sympathies favor the enemies of this country, must resign forthwith. The questionnaire, when the returns are in, will make a complete record of each member's birth, and other antecedents.

"Chemistry is something that has for so long been intimately connected with things German," an officer of the club said last night, "that it was natural that Germans or German-Americans should feel an interest in the club and apply for membership. When this country entered the war last year, however, many of these left the club. The recent letter of the Trustees has resulted in a few resignations, but the Chemists' Club is, and always has been, in the front rank as a patriotic institution, this being emphasized especially at this time when so many of its members are performing invaluable assistance to the Government and American war industries."

GERMANS IN PLOT TO ESCAPE

Dig 50-Foot Tunnel Under Their Barracks at Fort McPherson.

ATLANTA, May 4.—An apparent attempt at a wholesale delivery of the German prisoners at Fort McPherson was foiled late yesterday, when the guards discovered a fifty-foot tunnel leading from under one of the prisoners' barracks toward the double wire fence which incloses the prison camp, it became known today.

The discovery of the underground passage followed an investigation of a disturbance among the prisoners. In quelling the disorder, the guards had to advance with fixed bayonets before the crowd of angry Germans would disperse. They had been engaged in a heated discussion, and blows had been passed.

When the disorder had been quieted, guards began a systematic search of the prisoners' quarters, and soon discovered the tunnel. The excavation work evidently had consumed many days, the Germans having used all possible means to hide evidence of their work.

Several prisoners suspected of complicity in the attempt to escape have been placed in close confinement.

SEEK DESERTER PHILLIPS.

Failure to Answer Call Makes Objector Liable to Court-Martial.

Charles Francis Phillips, the former Columbia student, who had described himself as a conscientious objector, was classed as a deserter from the United States Army when he failed to respond yesterday to the second call sent to him by Draft Board 129, after Adjt. Gen. Crowder had ruled that his conviction of a conspiracy to obstruct the operation of the draft law did not reject him automatically as a felon. His name has been sent to the Federal agents as a deserter and a reward is offered, as in the case of every deserter, for his return to the authority of the army, where the heavy penalties for desertion may be imposed in trial by court-martial.

Phillips was one of sixteen called by the Draft Board, and fifteen who had no objection to serving their country reported at the Draft Board headquarters in the Museum of Natural History at the hour set for them to be sent to Fort Slocum for training. It had been expected that Phillips would fail to respond to the call, and he was listed immediately as a deserter. Before the ink on the documents marking him as a deserter was dry a man had volunteered to take his place in the quota and was on his way to camp.

It was reported to the Federal authorities several days ago that Phillips had left New York for the Mexican border with his wife, who was Eleanor Parker, a Barnard student, who was acquitted of the charge of conspiracy. It was said that their intention was to evade the immigration authorities and the border patrols and cross into Mexico without passports.

About 500 men were sent to Fort Slocum yesterday in the contingent forming the second call in the second draft. Police and Federal authorities reported that more than half the men classed as delinquents under the draft law had enlisted and merely had overlooked notifying their draft boards that they were already in service.

Money Order Service to Mexico.

Those sending money to Mexico were warned by Postmaster Patten yesterday not to send either banknotes or money in letters. He said that in view of the resumption of the money-order service between the two countries the postal authorities requested that the public make use of the money-order service for the transmission of funds.

SHOWS HANDICAPS TO AIRCRAFT OUTPUT

Expert Says Manufacturing Cannot Be Speeded as Rapidly as Public Expects.

MANY DIFFICULT PROBLEMS

James Hartness Asserts More Than Capital Is Required to Produce New Intricate Machinery.

James Hartness, ex-President of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and President of the Jones & Lamson Machine Tool Company of Springfield, Vt., has returned to this country after making a study of aircraft production in Great Britain, and has submitted to the society a review of the major difficulties encountered in creating practically a new industry in this country, without passing judgment on the success or failure of the efforts of the United States Aircraft Board.

Mr. Hartness was one of the American delegates at the Inter-allied Conference held at London for the purpose of establishing standards. He himself is an aeronautical engineer of standing. He asserts that critics of the aircraft production in this country have generally failed to take into account that, however vast the wealth, resources, and labor supply commanded for the creation of a new manufacturing industry, it cannot be speeded up at the beginning beyond a pace which appears extremely slow to the onlooker. He said:

"Men who have been through the mill of organizing new industries, or making changes in the personnel or the product of an industry, know that the element of time is one for which there is no equivalent. Unlimited capital cannot quickly produce one of the most highly developed and intricate machines of the present time.

Importance of Specialization.

"The airplane as a whole stands preeminent as one in which every element of design, workmanship, and material must be the best; in fact, the present contest in the air is one that makes a supreme test, and can only be satisfied by a supreme effort of each one of the designers, managers, and skilled workers on the production side, combined with the ablest military aeronautical direction and skill. We all recognize the importance of specialization for both the individual and the industrial plant, but we sometimes fail to give this matter sufficient weight in dealing with industrial problems.

"We frequently make changes in the personnel or product of a plant without calculating the handicapping effect of such changes. Changes in either personnel or product must be warranted by very important demands. The degree of handicap of such changes is measured by the degree of special ability or skill that is required in the production of the product.

"The airplane engine stands at the highest point that has been reached by man in his production of a machine in which each of the elements is subjected to the highest possible stresses. This approach to perfection can only be attained by the highest degree of special ability and skill; hence the delay in production. This applies to the refinements of the design as well as precision of workmanship.

"If many blunders have not been made in reaching the present stage of development, then our achievement at the present time will go into history unparalleled. We have had available the best men in each field of endeavor, but since this is a new art 90 per cent. of these men have had no previous experience in this line of work.

"The recent change in which the highest executive ability has been made head of the entire production plan is in keeping with the fundamental needs of the aircraft production plan. It gives it that stabilization in which alone stands our hope of success. It will prevent the disturbance of that natural evolution of the industrial plant that takes place when there is the minimum shifting in personnel and product.

Advocates Only a Few Changes.

"This is particularly well known to industrialists, but difficult to explain to an investigating committee. The industrialist knows that the best way to obtain results under present circumstances is what we may call the natural way. The natural way makes the minimum changes in the personnel and the working methods of each individual. It uses men as they are found in the organization.

"A new industry always goes through two phases that are seldom fully anticipated. The first one, in which the aircraft industry is at present, is one that brings most serious disappointment. The second one, which is ahead of us, brings a happy surprise. Both are due to the same fundamental element and cannot be wholly forecast.

"Experience tells us that it takes a great deal longer time to get a new industry established than is expected. This is due to the fact that industrial life rests on the functioning of the individual and the co-ordination of all the men in the organization, and although this is a fact borne out by many examples, yet the average board of directors in an industry is disposed to make important changes in the personnel of its executives, and this in turn frequently results in changes throughout the entire plant; and it is at this point that we must not blunder at the present time. No greater menace to our success in this war stands facing us than the mere possibility of our disturbance of the natural evolution that is going on in the aircraft industries.

"In the aircraft work I am confident that no such blunder is impending. The purpose of this, however, is not only to pay tribute to those who have been working effectively in this great program, but also to spread the gospel of stability of organization, the value of specialization, and the ultimate supremacy that will come to us if we will only follow along the lines that have been well established by our greatest industrial successes in this country.

"To bring this matter closer to a concrete example, close observers of industrial economics know that in the machine building industry it is practically impossible to design and quickly construct a satisfactory machine. They know that such new machine can only reach a satisfactory stage after it has been made in numbers and through a period in which each of the workers will have had an opportunity to work up a precision of operation and skill in the performance of each of the tasks.

"This makes it impossible to make a successful machine in a short period, even if all the workers of the plant were available. The fact, that repetition of operations is essential, is the key to the whole situation; and they know that the condition in an industrial organization in which the work flows quickly through the plant without congestion at any one point is brought about by experience. It is aided by practical supervision and handicapped by impractical interference."

Find Missing Mutuart Girl.

Word was received in West New Brighton, S. I., yesterday that Emma Mutuart, 15 years old, who disappeared from the home of her father, Henry Mutuart, on Tuesday, was at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. John Mossart, in Hudson Falls, N. Y. District Attorney Albert Fash said he thought the girl was taken away to prevent her from testifying at the trial of Charles Sprang and his wife, who are charged with branding their two children. Mr. Fash said that the Sprangs would be tried in the Court of Special Sessions as soon as the girl is brought from Hudson Falls.

3 Captains and 7 Lieutenants Are Named in Gen. Pershing's List of 86 Casualties

CASUALTIES IN THE MARINES.

Gen. Barnett nnounces Four Deaths —Five Wounded.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Major Gen. Barnett today gave out nine casualties in the marine contingent attached to General Pershing's army in France. Following the example of the War Department, General Barnett also gave out the emergency addresses. The casualties follow:

Killed in Action—1.

CROW, RAYMOND FRANKLIN, private, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Deaths from Shell Wounds—3.

CONROY, FRANK, Sergeant, Chicago, Ill.

CLARK, HARRY ELTON, private, Tacoma, Wash.

MANNING, JAMES BEVERLY, private, Detroit, Mich.

LESLIE TWICE WOUNDED.

Flushing Officer, Who Won War Cross, Is Again Disabled.

The name of Lieutenant J. Langdon Leslie of the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division, who was reported as slightly wounded about two weeks ago, again appears in the casualty list received from General Pershing yesterday, and friends of Lieutenant Leslie are of the opinion that the officer has suffered his second wound in action. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Leslie of 77 Sanford Avenue, Flushing.

Mrs. Leslie said yesterday that the family received a telegram from the War Department Friday night announcing that her son had been wounded. She received a letter from him yesterday, dated April 11, in which he wrote that he had been wounded on March 20, but that he had recovered and gone back in the trenches.

Lieutenant Leslie recently won the French War Cross for gallantry under fire. His father is a member of the New York Stock Exchange. He is a Plattsburg training camp graduate, and joined the 165th Infantry last September.

Lieutenant Louis W. Prescott of the Royal Flying Corps, who is a Passaic (N. J.) man and a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is reported as missing by the British authorities. He failed to return from a flight he made in Picardy on April 22. A cablegram announcing that he has not been accounted for was received by relatives in Passaic yesterday. Lieutenant Prescott was 26 years old, and joined the Royal Flying Corps last Fall.

William F. King, reported in yesterday's casualty list as among those slightly wounded in action, is a gunner in one of the regular army field artillery units now fighting in France. He enlisted in the regulars in 1910 and was with one of the units which went to France with the first division of regulars. King is an orphan, and lived when in New York with his aunt, Mrs. Katherine Clavin of 46 East Avenue, Long Island City. He has a brother who is also in the regular army.

Stricken with pneumonia when on his way to France to join the special French-speaking unit of General Pershing's headquarters, Cedric Alley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Alley of Vauxhill Road, Union Township, N. J., died on April 5, according to a telegram from the War Department received by his parents Friday night. The body is now at Newport News, having been brought back on the same ship on which he died. Alley was a former member of the Essex Troop, and when war was declared went to Anniston, Ala. He was later picked as one of twenty to go over as a special French-speaking unit, and was sent to Camp Green, N. C., for instruction.

Lost with Torpedoed Ship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The Navy Department was informed today that Milton Leon Lewis, a seaman in the National Naval Volunteers, who was detailed as signalman on board the Greek steamship Asimina, lost his life when that steamship was torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean on Jan. 28, and that his body was washed ashore in Sicily. His mother, Mrs. Jennie Theresa Lewis, lives at 32 Bond Street, Rochester, N. Y.

12,000 MORE DOCTORS NEEDED FOR WAR WORK

State Committees to Make Personal Appeal—That Failing, Washington Will Do So.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Thousands of doctors and surgeons throughout the country will be urged to enroll for service to meet the growing demands of the army and navy, under a plan decided upon today at a meeting here of practically all State Committees of the General Medical Board of the Council of National Defense. The cities will be called upon to furnish most of the medical men needed, and it is expected that 7,000 will respond to the call by July 1, and 5,000 more before the end of the year.

State Committees, after canvassing their home conditions, are to name twice the number of men in the quota of each State, and half will be expected to answer the call. Medical men who decline commissions will be called on personally by the State Committees for an explanation, and if they persist in declining their names will be referred to the board here, which will again appeal to them.

The plan was announced by Major Edward Martin of Philadelphia, Chairman of the meeting. None of the 400 representatives of the State Committees present suggested any other plan.

Major John D. McLean, Secretary of the General Board, in announcing the State quotas, which are to be apportioned among counties by the State committees, said that the cities must provide most of the doctors, as county communities could not spare many.

The quotas follow: Alabama, 140; Arizona, 30; Arkansas, 300; California, 200; Colorado, 100; Connecticut, 150; Delaware, 20; District of Columbia, 50; Florida, 20; Georgia, 200; Idaho, 20; Illinois, 300; Indiana, 300; Iowa, 350; Kansas, 100; Kentucky, 100; Louisiana, 200; Maine, 100; Maryland, 75; Massachusetts, 300; Michigan, 100; Minnesota, 70; Mississippi, 200; Missouri, 300; Montana, 20; Nebraska, 20; Nevada, 5; New Hampshire, 50; New Jersey, 100; New Mexico, 50; New York, 500; North Carolina, 100; North Dakota, 50; Ohio, 500; Oklahoma, 100; Oregon, 50; Pennsylvania, 400; Rhode Island, 50; South Carolina, 150; South Dakota, 45; Tennessee, 200; Texas, 150; Utah, 30; Vermont, 50; Virginia, 100; Washington, 50; West Virginia, 100; Wisconsin, 100; Wyoming, 30.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma, addressing the meeting regarding his bill to increase appointments of officers in the military medical service, declared that the general staff of the army "is always opposed to give additional dignity to the medical men." The bill provides for 20,000 officers in the medical corps. He said these men should have equal rank with line officers, because without such authority the medical corps cannot enforce its regulations.

Medical problems related to the war were discussed today at a meeting of delegates of State committees, which preceded the annual meeting of the General Medical Board of the Council of National Defense. The Surgeon General of the army, navy, and the Public Health Service were among the speakers.

Surgeon General Gorgas, addressing the meeting, announced the receipt of a cable from General Pershing last night, calling for 500 more medical men fur service in France immediately.

"The need for men will be very great," he said. "The Medical Reserve Corps of 20,000—an increase from 1,400 since the beginning of the war—is good for the present, but 5,000 more must be added this year."

The navy also needs 1,000 more doctors this year, said Joseph Murphy, Medical Inspector of the Navy.

"It will never be necessary to invoke a draft to get a competent force of medical men," said Lieutenant Colonel Bert Caldwell of the Surgeon General's office. Within a year, he said, more than 18,000 men were enrolled in the reserve corps by purely voluntary effort.

9,824 NURSES IN OUR ARMY.

5,757 Enrolled Since Last January 24,000 Needed Before 1919.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Surgeon General Gorgas of the army today authorized the statement that the strength of the Army Nurse Corps of the Medical Department yesterday was 9,824 nurses. They are divided as follows:

In Europe or awaiting transportation, 3,488.

In the United States, 6,288.

Philippines and Hawaii, 48.

Total, 9,824.

These nurses are all women, and are all on active duty; 1,448 of them are regular army nurses, which means that they have been enrolled directly from civilian life into the Army Nurse Corps. The other 8,376 are reserve nurses, or nurses who were nominated by the Red Cross to the Surgeon General's office for enrollment in the Army Nurse Corps.

On Dec. 31, 1917, there were 4,067 nurses, regular and reserve, in the Army Nurse Corps; therefore, 5,757 is the strength added to the corps between January and May 3 of this year.

On the basis of the present size of the United States Army, the Surgeon General's office computes that at least 24,000 nurses will be needed in service by Jan. 1, 1919. The rate of increase since Jan. 1 last, if continued throughout this year, will furnish only 21,538 nurses. "The prospective deficit may be partly met," said General Gorgas, "by a plan for nurses' aids—women who, though not graduate nurses, will have special training fitting them to relieve nurses of many of the simpler tasks involved in caring for the sick and wounded in hospitals. It is estimated by the Surgeon General's office that, even for the present size of the army, the rate of enrollment into the army nurse corps should be increased, and large additional needs will result from the large increase in the size of the army which is being planned. These needs cannot yet be definitely computed."

$1,800 for Armenian War Sufferers.

Eighteen hundred dollars for the Armenian war sufferers was raised last night by the concert and dance held at the Majestic under the auspices of the Persian-Armenian Educational Society of America. Vera Smirnova, billed as a Court singer to Nicholas, formerly the Czar of Russia, sang. The Persian Consul here, Kahn Kelekian, was present, also many other prominent Persians. Persian decorations were used in the ballroom, and many Oriental costumes were seen.

PRESIDENT PARDONS CONDEMNED SOLDIERS

Saves Two Who Slept at Sentry Posts—Commutes Sentences of Two Others.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—President Wilson today pardoned two soldiers of the American expeditionary force who had been condemned to death by a military court-martial in France for sleeping on sentry duty and commuted to nominal prison terms the death sentences imposed on two others for disobeying orders.

The action was viewed by many army officials as approval by the President of Secretary Baker's stand against the imposition of the death penalty in the army except in special cases.

Privates Forest D. Sebastin of El Dorado, Ill., and Jeff Cook of Lutie, Okla., were the men pardoned. In reaching his decision, the President took into consideration their youth—Sebastin being 20 years old and Cook 19—and concluded that they did not realize the seriousness of their offense and its possible disastrous results upon the unit to which they were attached.

Privates Olon Ledoyen of Atlanta, Ga., and Stanley G. Fishback of Connelton, Ind., were convicted of disobeying orders. Their sentence was commuted to three years in the Federal Penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and they will be brought to this country for imprisonment. Details in these cases have not been made public. The two soldiers are 19 years old.

All four of the men were volunteers in the regular army.

The President's action was in line with recommendations made by Secretary Baker, who made a full investigation of the cases after the sentence of the court had been reviewed and approved by the Judge Advocate General's Department.

Secretary Baker previously had gone on record against the adoption of any general rule for the imposition of the death penalty for military offenses, when this was recommended by a National Guard commander as necessary to stop the growing number of desertions from his division.

The bulk of the new American Army had been too recently taken from the individual homes and home influences to permit a thorough understanding by the soldiers of the stern justice of the army, Str. Baker held, adding that it never had been proved that this punishment would act as a satisfactory preventive. The recent execution of sixteen negro soldiers in Texas after conviction on the charge of rioting resulted in President Wilson's issuing instructions that cases in which similar sentences were imposed should be sent to him for final approval.

Army regulations give General Pershing full authority to order the carrying out of death sentences, but in these cases he sent the record to the War Department for consideration. Unusual interest has been shown in the four cases, as they were the first of their kind among the troops in France.

MOSLEMS OF INDIA LOYAL TO THE BRITISH

Bishop Warne Reports That Germany's Outrages Acted to Prevent a Holy War.

The German outrages against holy places of Christendom destroyed the possibility of their rousing the Mohammedans of the world to a holy war through the Sultan of Turkey, as they tried to do early in this war, according to Bishop Warne of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has returned from thirty years' service in India for the Methodist Centenary.

The Mohammedans have a deep reverence for their own holy places, and have been favorably impressed by the respect for their mosques which has been shown by the British authorities in India. When, then, the Germans through the Turks called for a holy war, Indian Moslems looked the matter over. The bombardment of Rheims Cathedral had just been made known and had aroused horror among Indians of all religions.

"The Mohammedans are tremendously intelligent," said Bishop Warne. "When they heard that the Germans were capable of any outrage against the shrines of their own religion they reasoned that the Germans had no reverence for God or religion, and that they would as soon destroy Mohammedan shrines as Christian—an attitude in marked contrast with that of the British. Hence the idea of a religious war under German guidance made no headway.

"After the bombardment of Rheims Cathedral an Indian Mohammedan National League was formed in Lucknow, where I was living, and these Indian Mohammedans sent many cable messages to the Turks urging them to keep out. When finally it was announced that Turkey had joined Germany, Mohammedans in India said, 'Well, this is a political war, it is in no way a religious war, and we will not be drawn in.'

"It is an interesting proof of their loyalty to England that they not only failed to join their brother co-religionists in war, but that they have turned out so enthusiastically under the British flag to fight against them. It is an irony of fate that it should be a Mohammedan Army, under British officers which is today taking, winning the Holy Land away from the Turkish Mohammedans."

Suffragist Citizenship Rally.

A meeting, to be called a citizenship rally, will be held under the auspices of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party on Thursday evening, May 16, at Aeolian Hall, 34 West Forty-third Street. Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the City Suffrage Party, will preside. The main feature of the program will be a party symposium to be participated in by men representing the four dominant political parties. Senator Robert F. Wagner will speak for the Democrats, Ralph Meyers for the Prohibitionists, Morris Hillquit for the Socialists and Senator Albert Ottinger for the Republicans. The meeting is to be held for the purpose of assisting the women voters who are to enroll on May 25 to make a decision as to the party principles they wish to indorse.

GIVES OPEN TRIAL TO HEALTH OFFICIAL

Commissioner Copeland Says Brown Can Be Represented by Counsel.

DR. HARRIS TO HOLD HIS JOB

Report That Office of Civil Service Commissioner Will Also Be Investigated.

Lucius P. Brown, Director of the Bureau of Foods and Drugs, will have a public trial, according to an announcement made yesterday by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, the new Health Commissioner. Mr. Brown was suspended several days ago following a public statement he made in reply to accusations filed against him, with Dr. Copeland, by James E. MacBride, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission. Mr. Brown will thus be entitled to call witnesses and be represented by his counsel, George Gordon Battle.

It was pointed out yesterday that usually an official was served with charges before being suspended, but when asked whether he would take up the legality of his client's suspension, Mr. Battle said he would waive that legality. "All we want is a fair, speedy, and open trial," he said.

Commissioner Copeland denied yesterday the report that he was planning to abolish the Bureau of Public Health Education, of which Dr. Charles F. Bolduan is Director.

"I certainly have not at the present time any formulated plan to abolish this bureau or to make any changes in its personnel, but I want to assure you that it will be the policy of this bureau to work along every possible line to teach the people of New York how to live, eat and sleep better," he said.

"However, at the present time it is not clear in my mind just how public health education should be handled. I believe in popular education, for I have been a school teacher and have taught medicine for the last twenty-five years. Believe me, the future will see no less activity in this bureau than in the past. The question, of my mind, is regarding the best way public health education can be disseminated."

In this connection it was pointed out by persons closely in touch with the situation that the Health Commissioner might literally follow his promise and refrain from abolishing the Bureau of Public Health Education. But it was also indicated that there was a strong likelihood that the Health Commissioner would take over the functions of the bureau in his own office and announce that he felt capable and was sufficiently interested in and qualified to conduct the work in addition to the duties of his own office.

There is little likelihood that Dr. Bolduan will be retained, even if the move is made to place the bureau under Dr. Copeland's wing, it was said.

That Dr. Copeland will also assume personal charge and responsibility for the Division of Industrial Hygiene of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases was also forecast by persons in contact with the situation. As backing up their claim they pointed to the keen interest already evidenced by Commissioner Copeland in that division. The director of the bureau is Dr. Louis I. Harris, an employe of the Health Department since 1907. Considerable interest has always been manifested in the division by labor unions because of the knowledge concerning occupational diseases.

Commissioner Copeland, however, said that the bureau would remain under their present chief. "I am confident of the ability of Dr. Harris, and greatly pleased with the work he has accomplished," he asserted. Asked as to whether he would make the same statement regarding Dr. Bolduan and the latter's bureau, the Commissioner said he would not.

Told of a report in labor circles that money appropriated for the Bureau of Industrial Hygiene for the purpose of improving health conditions among laborers was being used for another purpose, the Commissioner said: "An appropriation of $63,000 has been made to be used among the laboring class, and I can assure you that every cent of it will be used for that purpose."

A rumor was current yesterday to the effect that in the near future David Hirschfield, Commissioner of Accounts, would undertake an investigation of the office of the Civil Service Commission, of which James E. MacBride is Chairman. Although Mayor Hylan appointed Commissioner of Accounts Hirschfield a member of the committee ordered to investigate the Health Department, Mr. Hirschfield did not appear at any of the public hearings. It was reported, however, that he took considerable interest in the examination of witnesses at the secret session of the committee, and that he asked many searching questions.

Dr. Harris reported to Dr. Copeland yesterday that five women arraigned and convicted in the Women's Night Court on Friday as vagrants and vagrancy were detained for physical examination tomorrow. The new law, which has a provision calling for the examination of any suspect or convicted vagrant to determine their physical condition, went into effect on Friday. The bill was passed for the specific purpose of protecting soldiers and sailors.

A conference on the new law will take place in the office of Health Commissioner Copeland tomorrow. The District Attorney, the Police Commissioner, the Commissioners of tha Charities and Correction Departments, and a representative of the Surgeon General's office were invited to be present.

STRATFORD HOME FAVORED.

London Paper Urges Provision for American Troope on Leave.

LONDON, May 4.—The Weekly Dispatch tomorrow will feature an editorial urging the establishment at Stratford of a central "home" for American soldiers on leave.

"In the heart of England," says the paper, "there is a spot hallowed forever in the hearts of all who speak the English tongue, namely, Stratford, the birthplace of Shakespeare. Is there any reason why a rest home for the American soldiers on leave should not be in this spot?

"The American soldier does not want merely to see our towns, our historical monuments. To him, as to the British soldier, there is no place like home. Let us give him a worthy one. He is here to help us; he may be here for a long time to come. But when he does go home, what then? As we sow, we shall reap, and if we sow well today we know that when he goes home he will sow the seeds of everlasting concord."

FOG STOPS FLACHAIRE.

Forced to Land at Port Royal, Penn., He Is Lionized.

PORT ROYAL, Penn., May 4.—Lieutenant George Flachaire, the French flying ace, on his way from New York to Pittsburg, landed on the Port Royal Fair Grounds late today. He left Harrisburg intending to fly to Altoona, but a heavy fog compelled him to land after he had traveled forty-five miles.

The unexpected appearance of the noted flier created much excitement, and tonight Flachaire was made the here of a great demonstration. After being feted by the townspeople he addressed a crowd in the town hall.

The flier's machine was housed on the fair grounds. Tomorrow, if the weather is favorable, Flachaire will resume his journey, stopping at Altoona.

NECKLACE AS BOND BONUS.

"All I Have Left," Says Grandmother of Two Boys in France.

A woman who said she was the "grandmother of two boys," in the American Army in France subscribed for a $1,000 bond at the Liberty bond wagon yesterday, at the north side of The Times Building, Forty-third Street and Broadway, and then she unclasped a necklace and offered it as a gift to the next person who should help the Government by a similar purchase. W. T. Wetmore, President of the Minuto Men of America, who is in charge of the wagon squad of bond sellers, reached over the side of the vehicle to take the necklace, but withdrew his hand when the old lady continued:

"Next to my two grandsons, who are fighting for their country, and my love for the United States, this necklace is as dear as anything in the world to me. But I give it willingly. Take it."

"Madame, I think you have done your share in buying a large bond, and I would suggest that you retain your jewelry, and accept our thanks for what you have done for the loan," said Wetmore.

"I wish it were possible for me to do more—it will take nearly all my money to pay for this bond I've just bought; this jewelry is all I have left to give to the cause for the sake of my two boys."

Wetmore still hesitated to take the chain when the owner again tried to hand the necklace to him. However, she quickly decided the question for herself by tossing the necklace into the vehicle and walked swiftly toward the nearby subway entrance. Some of the men, moved by this object lesson in patriotic self-sacrifice, raised their hats. There were tears in their eyes, but the last they saw of her was a smiling face, turned a moment in a glance backward, and then she disappeared down the subway stairs.

This incident occurred just before noon, and Mr. Wetmore, obedient to the wishes of the donor of the necklace, offered it to the next purchaser of a $1,000 Liberty bond. Many smaller amounts were sold, but there was no award for the larger amount until late in the evening, when along came Samuel R. Rosoff, a contractor at 198 Broadway, who bought a $1,000 bond in the name of his wife, Mrs. S. R. Rosoff, 235 Eighty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, and the necklace was accordingly given to him.

Rosoff took the necklace to a jeweler, and was surprised when the latter told him it had an intrinsic value of at least $250.

"It is an antique and is probably more than 150 years old," the jeweler told him. "It probably cost $500 to make." The necklace contains thirty-three stones and a pendant, set in gold of intricate design and workmanship. Rosoff went back to Wetmore and, when he had heard the story of the donor announced that he intended to return the gift. But her subscription blank, together with all others, had been sent to the General Liberty Loan Committee, and all trace of her was lost.

"Well, take it and give it to someone who will buy $2,000 of bonds," said Rosoff. This suggestion was tried by Wetmore. There was no sale for that amount, however, so Rosoff bought another bond for $1,000, and he received the necklace again.

"I suppose the bond buyers thought the necklace was of no value—in fact I at first thought so," said Rosoff. "But I won't keep it," he told Wetmore. "Try to find the owner and tell her she may have the necklace by applying to my wife. I believe the necklace is a cherished heirloom, which nothing would have induced the owner to part with but an excess of patriotic zeal under unusually emotional circumstances, and for that reason it would please me better to restore it to the giver and make her happy."

The committee will try to trace the owner through the subscription blank she signed.

BONDS FOR BAIL AND FINES.

Gov. Whitman Signs Bill Which Goes Into Effect on Sept. 1.

The Board of City Magistrates was notified from Albany yesterday that Governor Whitman had signed a bill which permits the courts to accept Liberty bonds as security for bail and fines and for other purpoees on and after Sept. 1. This bill was introduced by Assemblyman McElligott to amend Section 588 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The Governor also signed a measure introduced by Assemblyman McDonald, amending Section 196 of the Penal Law, giving discretionary power to agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and of other humane organizations, and to the police to issue summonses instead of making arrests of drivers of lame or otherwise disabled animals.

Chief City Magistrate McAdoo received a letter yesterday from Justice B. J. Shove of the Court of Special Sessions, at Syracuse, describing the success attained in his court in dealing with habitual drinkers among working people by applying new conditions to probation cases of persons released under suspended sentences. These conditions require the defendant under penalty of being recalled and sentenced or fined, to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors for the duration of the war and to invest money thus saved in Government securities. Justice Shove wrote:

"Although I have employed this system for but six weeks I am surprised at the result. The investment in Liberty bonds or war stamps by these men already amounts to $75 a week. The Chief of Police is a Government agent for the sale of war stamps, and the men under suspended sentence and on probation report to him weekly for their stamps.

"I have found it a very easy matter to awaken the loyalty and patriotism of these men. They are ashamed of themselves as soon as they realize their position and apparently eager to get in with the rest of us to help the boys over there. Of course, the effect upon the men themselves is excellent, as many of them are saving for the first time in their lives."

The New York State Association of Magistrates, of which City Judge Harold L. Hart of Binghamton is President and Chief Justice Frederic Kernochan of the Manhattan Special Sessions is Vice President, will be asked to consider these plans for adoption and practice in all the criminal courts.

CLUBS DISCUSS DRESS.

Standardized Styles Advocated and Opposed at Women's Convention.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 4.—Standardized dress for women was discussed today before the fourteenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. M. D. C. Crawford of New York, an art editor, spoke against a "uniformed womanhood."

"When the boys come back they will want to see charm, and beauty, and loveliness," he said, referring to the return of America's victorious army. "They will not want to see a uniformed womanhood."

Miss Helen Louise Johnson of Watertown, N. Y., advocate of the standardization idea, told the women that, like the men, they should have several styles, but that, once they had found the becoming style, it should "not be changed with every varying whim of a manufacturer's designer." Miss Johnson wore one of the gowns she has adopted as a piece of standardized dress befitting her style.

War Halts Yale Dormitories.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 4.—Because of conditions created by the war work on the new $3,000,000 Harkness dormitories at Yale has been stopped. An entire city block of buildings was torn down to make room for the buildings. Because they would be of stone it was believed the work would not interfere with any war plans, but now the abandonment of the work until after the war is announced.

'DRY' FORCES SPLIT OVER LEGISLATURE

Anti-Saloon League Will Oppose Calling of an Extraordinary Session.

CIVIC LEAGUE IS FOR IT

While Republicans and Democrats Would Like to Avoid the Issue the Fall Prohibitionists Will Fight.

Neither the Republican nor the Democratic leaders are very keen about having prohibition brought in as an issue in the gubernatorial campaign this Fall. On the other hand, advocates of the ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment and a "dry" State, headed by the New York Anti-Saloon League, are preparing to make a determined fight for the election of a Senate and Assembly that will vote "dry."

With the object of making ratification of the Federal amendment the dominant issue in the State campaign, Supt. William H. Anderson of the Anti-Saloon League will go to Albany tomorrow to head off a movement started with a view to forcing Governor Whitman into calling an extraordinary session of the Legislature to consider again the resolution to ratify the "dry" amendment submitted by Congress. This movement, begun by the Rev. O. R. Miller, head of the New York Civic League, will culminate tomorrow in a conference at the Capitol of the so-called allied forces, a body composed of representatives of various prohibition and temperance organizations.

The Rev. O. R. Miller has stated that the Legislature has never voted directly on the question of ratificatoin and that Governor Whitman has not done his full duty to the prohibition cause which he so warmly espoused in not forcing the lawmaking body to have the ratification resolution debated and voted upon in open session of both houses. In some circles the move has been regarded as one started in favor of the political advancement of Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet of the Assembly, who, during the legislative session, came out openly for the course advocated by the Rev. Mr. Miller. Speaker Sweet, who has been talked of as a possible candidate for Governor and who is not at present on friendly terms with the Governor politically, has been invited to address tomorrow's conference. Speaker Sweet, however, according to report from up-State, has gone fishing.

When calling the conference, the Rev. O. R. Miller, in support of his plea for an extraordinary session, suggested that immediate action would be expedient because Governor Whitman, openly committed to ratification, might be succeeded by a Democrat and the Republican Legislature by a Legislature controlled by the Democrats, which in all likelihood would prove even less amenable than the present to arguments advanced by advocates of the prohibition cause. This suggestion is taken very lightly by Superintendent Anderson, who maintains that the advocates of prohibition can submit their case to the voters of the State with perfect assurance of a verdict favoring their cause.

Superintendent Anderson, in discussing the plans of the Anti-Saloon League for the campaign, said the league was prepared to assume the leadership in the fight for prohibition this Fall. In the local option elections, held in thirty-nine cities up-State last month, the league kept in the background, and after providing for a supply of literature, some expert organizers, and four perambulating scientific exhibits to demonstrate the evils of alcohol, left it to local committees to run the campaigns in their respective communities. In preparation for the fight this Fall the league has engaged larger headquarters and made provision for a greatly enlarged staff of workers.

"There is no doubt that the result of the local option elections in up-State cities have had the effect of cooling somewhat the ardor of active Republicans who, before they were held, were preparing to jump on the prohibition band wagon to improve their political prospects next Fall. While the Legislature was in session and before the elections the advocates of ratification kept dinning it into the ears of the up-State lawmakers that the "drys" would make a clean sweep in practically every city where there was a test. When the votes were counted it was found that one-half of the cities where local option elections had been held, even with the women voting, still remained in the "wet" column. Some very prominent Republicans who outwardly had shown pronounced "dry" tendencies, then began to voice their regret that Governor Whitman had "gone so strong to the 'dry' end" of the fight.

Superintendent Anderson said that 100 townships in this State went dry in the elections last Fall. Two-thirds of the territory in the State is now "dry" under the exercise of local option. Where there were fifty-nine "wet" cities in the State prior to the local option elections last month, now only thirty-nine cities are "wet."

"When are you going to carry your fight to New York City?" Mr. Anderson was asked.

"We could do it next year, but I do not think it will be done," was his reply. "In my opinion there will be no need for it. The entire country will go dry as a result of ratification of the Federal amendment a great deal earlier than we could get a decision on the question in New York City."

To Discuss Inheritance Tax Laws.

An important conference of lawyers and appraisers of the State Controller's office will be held in this city on May 9 and 10 to discuss the enforcement of the new inheritance tax laws, which are of a radical character and are expected to increase the State revenue by hundreds of thousands of dollars. Deputy Controller Boardman will preside and State Controller Travis and City Controller Craig will speak. Among the other speakers will be State Treasurer Charles L. Burrill of Massachusetts.

LABOR DELEGATES IN PARIS.

Inform Frenchmen of Our Determination to Win the War.

PARIS, May 4.—The American labor delegation which has been visiting England arrived at the Metropolitan Station in Paris late last evening and was welcomed by Minister of Labor Colliard on behalf of the French Government. Minister Colliard told the Americans they would find the entire French nation at work in the fields, laboratories and factories. M. Colliard added:

"Everywhere you will meet but a single hope—hope of victory—and everywhere behind the noise of the guns and the machinery and midst the silent fields you will see the heart of France beating for the single ideal of brotherhood and justice which you will recognize as being yours also. I wish to take the opportunity of saluting the name of he who symbolizes so firmly that ideal—President Wilson."

"We will beat the Germans first and speak to them afterward," declared Chairman James Wilson and George L. Barry of the mission on their arrival. "We take the position that we will not meet them in conferences under any consideration. We will not be swerved from our main job—beating Germany—by any talk of conferences with them until they have been driven behind their own frontiers. We know the German purpose is to dominate civilization, and we shall make every effort to thwart it."

Messrs. Wilson and Barry declared they were delighted with their stay in England. They said they had expected to find a people weary of war after four years of struggle, but, on the contrary, had found the leaders and rank and file of British workmen as fully determined to pureue the war to a successful conclusion as the American people.

"Even the pessimists do not talk peace, but are willing to carry on the war to a bitter end," they added.

The delegation made the usual tourist round of Paris this morning, visiting the Louvre, Notre Dame, the Pantheon and other points of interest. After luncheon the delegates were taken to Versailles and spent the afternoon in that vicinity. In a statement to the press on behalf of the delegation Mr. Wilson said:

"American workingmen want to say to the French that they recall the day when Frenchmen came to help America when she was fighting for liberty. We went to thank France and prove our gratitude. We propose to put at the disposition of the Allies our last dollar."

Mr. Wilson said that the nine representatives of the labor party on the delegation were sent by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, to present to the French people a message of hope and a fraternal salutation. The speaker repeated the determination of American workingmen not to enter into contact with German workingmen until the German armies had been chased out of France.

"Recognizing the fact that German workingmen have raised a barrier between themselves and others we have decided," Mr. Wilson said, "by a unanimous vote that we will not consent to meet them until they shall have removed the barrier they raised."

DISPUTE OVER GERMAN.

New Jersey Board Discusses Abolishing Course from Schools.

TRENTON, N. J., May 4.—A bitter discussion over an attempt to abolish the teaching of German in the New Jersey public schools took place between Colonel D. Stuart Craven of Salem, and John P. Murray of Jersey City, members of the State Board of Education, at a meeting of the Board in the State House today.

Colonel Craven introduced a resolution for the elimination of the German language course after Sept. 1. Mr. Murray charged Colonel Craven with being unpatriotic. Colonel Craven retaliated by declaring that Mr. Murray was doing only destructive work. Mr. Murray demanded Colonel Craven to submit specific charges in writing, and demanded a formal trial by the board. He said either he or Colonel Craven would have to leave the board.

Professor John C. Van Dyke of New Brunswick protested against the resolution. He declared resolutions would not kill Germans. "It takes bullets to do that," he said.

Action was deferred until the June meeting.

GREAT LAKES SEAMEN THREATEN TO STRIKE

Government Operation of Vessels Urged to Settle Difficulty of Training Men.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Government operation of all Great Lakes vessels has been asked by the seamen's unione in an effort to avert a strike, which union leaders today told the Chipping Labor conference was inevitable otherwise.

The seamen are ready to strike, the leaders said, because of the refusal of the Lake Carriers' Association to join with the Shipping Board and the union in the conference to consider means of recruiting new men for the merchant marine, and because of bitterness growing out of the alleged repudiation by the association of an agreement made with the union last year.

"Nothing is left for us to do but to go back and clash," said Thomas Conway, representing the marine firomen. "We want it understood that we have offered the Government our co-operation in every way and that we are not responsible for what will happen in the near future."

Victor Olander of the Lake Seamen's Union said the unions demanded that the Lake Carriers' Association follow the example of Atlantic ship owners in permitting the training of new men.

"Until that is done the lakes will not develop their own men and will continue to drain the Atlantic coast," he said.

"The Kaiser captures some of the seamen going east, the Lake Carriers' Association gets them going west."

Telegrams from Seattle saying that two American ships were about to sail for Atlantic ports under command of fallen officers drew renewed protests from union men against the practice of giving foreignere provisional licenses. Captain John H. Pruitt of Seattle told the conference he had been assured by President Wilson that the executive order permitting provisional licenses was not intended to permit the replacement of Americans or tha use of foreigners when Americans were available.

The conference adjourned with the assurance that all tho questions raised would have the immediate consideration of the Shipping Board.

CLEVELAND, May 4.—An official of the Lake Carriers' Association today gave out the following statement:

"This association operates under the open shop principle, and has no dealings with unions. We made no arrangements with the unione last Fall, consequently there was nothing to repudiate. The vessel owners, following the lead of the allied industries, voluntarily advanced wages at the opening of the season approximately 15 per cent. Last Fall the vessel owners arranged to take all the men they could house on their ships for the Naval Reserve to give them practical training, and are doing the same thing this year. Except for the period that we be'ieve will train during this season about 3,000 men for the Government. Members of the association appeared before the Shipping Board in Washington yesterday, and again pledged themselves and their ships to work in the closest co-operation with the Government and its neede."

DETROIT, Mich., May 4.—"The statement attributed to Victor Olander of the Lake Seamen's Union to the effect that the lakes will not develop their own men and will continue to drain the Atlantic Cosat is absolutely incorrect," said William Livingstone, President of the Lake Carriers' Association, when shown the Washington dispatch telling of a threatened strike of lake seamen.

"We have agreed with the Government to take men on all our ships and train them for seamanship. Furthermore, we carry as many as we can provide accommodations for and without a cent of cost to the Government."

Concerning the request of the seamen's unions that the Government operate Great Lakes vessels, Mr. Livingstone said he was not in a position to comment at present. Illness, he said, had prevented his attending the conference in Washington. He emphasized, however, that the Lake Carriers' Association has pledged its fullest co-operation with the Government, adding that no consideration had been allowed to stand in the way of moving on the Great Lakes this year every possible pound of tonnage. "We aim," he said, "to move 100,000,000 tons of shipping in the 1918 season."

Mrs. Max Hart Wins Heavy Verdict

Mrs. Madge Hart, known on the vaudeville stage as Maude Fox, and wife of Max Hart, booking agent yesterday won her suit against her husband to compel him to fulfill a contract under which she was induced to withdraw a suit for divorca and an action for an accounting of her husband's booking business, in which she claimed a half interest. Justice Newburger gave Mrs. Hart judgment for $20,000 in cash, a half interest in the business earning more than $50,000 a year, a weekly payment of $75 a week out of her husband's interest in the firm of Feiber & Shea, and possession of half his holdings.

BUYS AUGUSTIN DALY BIBLE.

H. E. Huntington Adds Famous Volume to His Collection.

Henry E. Huntington has added the famous Augustin Daly extra-illuetrated Bible to his library. It wae in the recent sale of books from the collection of the late John D. Crimmins, and was bought by George D. Smith for $6,250. It was obtained by Mr. Crimmins at the sale of Mr. Daly's books and autographs for $5,500.

It is a translation from the Latin Vulgate, the Old Testament from the Douai version of 1609, the New Testament from the Rheims version of 1582. It was published in Dublin in 1792. The work has been extended to forty-two volumes and is in binding by Blackwell, with the Daly monogram. It is the most extensively extra-illustrated copy of the Douai Bible known. The text is inlaid and more than 8,000 prints and drawings have been inserted. The specially printed title pages are decorated with watercolor embellishments by Eugene Grivaz, and the plates where necessary have been mounted or inlaid. About all the published sets of plates to illustrate the Bible are included, from the colored woodcuts of the Koberger Bible, Nüremberg Chronicle and other early works of this character, to the illustrations by Doré. Among these are the Macklin, Bida, Luyken and other series, reproductions of the paintings by the Florence, Turin and Crozet galleries, the plates by Strang, Blake, West, Martin, Bartolozzi, Lucas van Leyden, Riccius, De Vos and others, and various collections to illustrate Milton's "Paradise Lost."

Many of the engravings and etchings by Dürer and Rembrandt, either in originale or copies, are among the early specimens, and steel and copper engravings by Raphael Morghen, Muller, Porporati, Sharp, and others. Brilliant proofs and portfolio specimens by Valentine Green, Murphy, Turner, Earldom, and others and illuminated pages from ancient manuscripts add beauty and color to the collection.

The original drawings include a specimen by Raphael from the collection of Sir Joshua Reynolds, and other examples by Cipriani, Paul Veronese, Cario Maratti, Lairesse, and others of equal interest and value. The above selection gives but a slight idea of the riches of pictorial art assembled by the late Augustin Daly for the illustration of the text of this Bible. It is necessary to examine the volumes themselves to fully understand the completeness with which the task has been accomplished.

ANNA HELD CRITICALLY ILL.

Blood Transfusion to be Made Tonight to Relieve Myeloma.

Anna Held, the actress, was in a critical condition last night at the Hotel Sevoy, where she had been suffering for some time from a rare disease of softening of the bone tissue and known as multiple myeloma. Dr. Donald McCaskey decided on an operation for blood transfusion in an attempt to relieve her condition, and it was expected that the operation would be performed at 7 o'clock tonight.

Since Friday last Miss Held had suffered intense pain, and she was conscious all the time except for brief intervals of sleep, Dr. McCaskey said. Her blood agglutination and other tests were taken yesterday, and the resort to blood tranafusion was decided on. At midnight it wae said the patient was very weak.

SEEKS WOMEN OF COURAGE.

Miss Drake Wants Those Who Will Drive Ambulances at the Front.

American women are needed to drive ambulances in France, and it is the intention of Miss Ethel Drake and Mrs. Mary E. Symons, who are now at the Ritz-Carlton, to recruit a number to assist them in their work. Miss Drake heads the ambulance service on the Drake Section Sanitaire, and Mrs. Symons's ambulance is known as the Ambulance Symons. She has a son who is an officer in the British Army now in the thick of things in Flanders. Miss Drake is an American and her companion is an Englishwoman. Both went to France in 1914 and took up work among the French wounded. Mrs. Symons wears the Croix de Guerre and the gold medal Le Ministre des Affaires Etranger, both of which she was awarded for valorous work under fire.

"We must be very particular about the type of women we bring back with us," said Miss Drake. "They must possess two pre-eminent qualities, they must be of the right physique and with a well-balanced mental equipment. Again, they must be financially able to pay all their expenses. It is to be a strictly volunteer work and there can be no financial return for labor. We want women between the ages of 23 and 55; they must be in the pink of condition, and must have poise and that essential capacity for individual action at the right moment. We want no neurotic women nor women to whom the romance of the cause is the first appeal. We went over at the commencement of the war, and we have been working on the front since the very beginning. Unfortunately the poor polu is not always in as good physical condition, nor as well fed as our own boys, and they are in a pathetic state when they are brought back wounded. Because of the need we were permitted to work very close to the lines and finally to give our services under direct fire at the dressing stations. We have, therefore, been getting the wounded as they have been brought from the trenches or field with only the slightest previous treatment."

MRS. WILSON GIVES THIMBLE

Her Contribution for Aviators Will Be Delivered by Air.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's gold thimble, which abe has used for several years, is the latest contribution to the fund of gold and silver ornaments and table service which the National Special Aid Society is collecting for its work for aviators, and which has now reached $60,000. Ex-President and Mrs. William Howard Taft have contributed thirty-three pieces of silver, ranging from forks and spoons to large bowls, trays, and baskets, many of them articles received on their silver wedding anniversary in 1911, when they were in the White House. Ex-President Roosevelt contributed, through the Girl Scouts, silver desk articles which he had used for many years.

Mrs. Wilson's thimble is to be sent about the middle of this month by the first airplane of the aerial mail service to be inaugurated between New York and Washington. All the money received from the sale of the articles or metal is used to supply needs of aviators going to France which have not been filled by the Government. On the committee are Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson, Mrs. William G. McAdoo, Mrs. Newton D. Baker, Mrs. Josephus Daniels, Mrs. H. P. Davison, and others.

LOAN RALLY AT SPRINGS.

Herrick's Appeal at White Sulphur Brings $20,000—Total $157,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 4.—The Liberty Loan campaign closed at the Greenbrier last evening following an address by ex-Ambassador Herrick, who made an eloquent appeal to the sojourners. More than $20,000 was subscribed within a few minutes, making White Sulphur's total more than $157,000. Six stars are now on the honor flag which hangs at the entrance to the restaurant. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who arrived from Washington yesterday with Mrs. McAdoo, complimented J. Howard Slocum on his work.

Carl R. Gray, Director of Transportation, United States Railroads Administration; William S. Carter, Director of Labor, and Walker D. Hines, assistant to Director General McAdoo, arrived this morning from Washington for a short stay. Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the War Industries Board, and Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane are expected to arrive in the morning for a few days. Ernest A. Hamill, President of the Corn Exchange of Chicago, and Mrs. Hamill arrived this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Liggett of New York have arrived for a stay of several weeks. En route from Washington to White Sulphur, Mr. and Mrs. Liggett rode on a train carrying three cars of troops. Mrs. Liggett purchased all the cigarettes and cigars she could obtain at the stations and presented them to the soldiers.

Captain J. B. Montgomery, Jr., U. S. A., has come for a short stay. Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Madden and J. J. Knowles of New York, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Boshart of Toledo, Robert Clark of San Antonio, and Charles A. Bray of Detroit are arrivals today.

WOMEN OPEN FARM CAMP.

Workers from Professional and Leisure Classes Employed.

One of the first farm camps to be opened this year by the Woman's Land Army of America in the neighborhood of this city is in Union County, New Jersey. It opened with twenty workers the first day of May and will have seventy-five girls for the three following months. The women workers come from the professional and leisure classes. Miss Alice Darrow, the Land Army Secretary of the camp, is a Smith College graduate of 1914 and a professional musician. Miss Betty Youngs and Miss Ethel Thompson are Summit High School girls, and Miss Edith Thompson, the Camp Director, is a teacher of biology in the South Side High School, Newark. Miss Elsie Gilman, House Manager, is a kindergartener; Mrs. Rosa Ackerman of Brooklyn is a soldier's wife, her husband being a Lieutenant with General Pershing.

There is a special Class A in the farm service, and Union Camp has one girl belonging to this class whose members as known as the "huskies" and can do unusually heavy work, anything that is asked of them. No one is under Class B, to which the normal girl of average health belongs.

MISS LUCY HILTON A BRIDE

Wed to Lieut. John S. T. Strong in Old Trinity—Nuptial of Capt. H. de Y. Dyke and Miss Polly Guy.

The wedding of Lieutenant William Jay Schieffelin, Jr., Field Artillery, U. S. A., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Schieffelin and a great-grandson of the late William H. Vanderbilt, and Miss Annette Markoe, the daughter of Dr. James W. Markoe and Mrs. Markoe, was solemnized at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Centennial Chapel of St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, by the rector, the Rev. Karl Reiland.

The bride walked with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a soft, white satin robe with a long skirt arranged to give a panel effect in the front. The corsage was cut low and old point lace was carried over the shoulders and down the corsage, being caught in at the waistline, and then fell in scarf-like folds to the hem of the skirt. She carried an armful of sprays of small white orchids and wore a string of pearls and a diamond pendant.

She was attended as maid of honor by Miss Pauline Bacon, in mauve satin and chiffon, and the bridesmaids in pink were the Misses Mary Jay Schieffelin and Louise Schieffelin, sisters of the bridegroom; Elizabeth Schuyler Howard, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Howard, and Pauline Morgan.

Lieutenant Schieffelin had Dr. Morton Fremont Smith of Washington as his best man, and the ushers were Lieutenant Hamilton Armstrong, Emerson Tuttle, William Walter Phelps, and Howard Schieffelin, a brother of the bridegroom. A small reception for the relatives and a few intimate friends was held at the residence of the bride's parents, 12 West Fifty-fourth Street.

Strong-Hilton.

Miss Lucy Hilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hilton of Nyack, N. Y., and Savannah, Ga., was married yesterday at noon in Old Trinity Church to Lieutenant John S. Templeton Strong, eldest son of George T. Strong of Lausanne, Switzerland. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ralph Pomeroy of the General Theological Seminary. The chancel was decorated with ascension lilies and yellow snapdragons. The bride wore a gown of dark blue, with a white hat, and carried white orchids.

Lieutenant Strong is with the 314th Field Artillery R. C., and is stationed at Camp Lee. His grandfather, the late George T. Strong, was for many years Controller of Trinity Church Corporation.

Miss Guy Weds Captain Dyke.

The marriage of Captain Harold de Yoe Dyke, 104th Field Artillery, U. S. R., stationed at Camp Dix headquarters, and Miss Polly Guy, the only daughter of Justice Charles L. Guy and Mrs. Guy, were married at 3:45 yesterday afternoon in the chapel of the Union Theological Seminary, 120th Street and Broadway, by the Rev. Gaylord White, head of the Union Settlement. The bride wore white georgette crepe, with a satin court train and tulle veil. Captain Dyke had Charles Walden as his best man, and there were no ushers and no reception other than that held at the chapel, the wedding being hurriedly arranged.

Owing to the uncertainty of war moves, after the honeymoon is over Mrs. Dyke will return to spend some time with her parents at 335 Convent Avenue, this city.

Miss Anna P. Van Pelt a Bride.

Miss Anna Powell Van Pelt, daughter of Mrs. Harry Robinson of San Francisco by a former marriage, and James Matthews Faust, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Faust of Florence, Italy, were married yesterday afternoon in the chantry of Grace Church by the Rev. Edward H. Garbutt.

The bride, who is a granddaughter of Gilbert S. Van Pelt of New York, was attended by Miss Katherine Montgomery of Erie, Penn., and Miss Dorothy Hubbell of this city. Mr. Faust had Oscar G. Cornfelt as his best man. The ushers were MacPherson Kennedy and Harold Dunning.

Wed to Leavitt J. Hunt.

Mrs. Bayard Redfield of Cos Cob, Conn., daughter of Mrs. Franklin Kerfoot Sowers, and Leavitt J. Hunt, a lawyer of New York, were married yesterday in St. Paul's Chapel, Riverside, Conn. The bride was the widow of Bayard Redfield, son of the late George Snowden Redfield. Mr. Hunt is the son of the late Colonel and Mrs. Leavitt Hunt, and is with the law firm of Hunt, Hill & Betts of this city. He is a member of the Metropolitan, Racquet and Tennis, Tuxedo, and Piping Rock Clubs.

Lieut. Gates Marries Miss Stein.

The marriage of Lieutenant Wilton John Gates, U. S. Signal Reserve Corps, stationed at Camp Vail, N. J., and Miss Marguerite Stein, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stein of Dansville, N. Y., was celebrated at 3:30 yesterday afternoon in Old Trinity Church, Broadway and Wall Street, by the Rev. Edward Lake Reed. Miss Stein's sister, Miss Hildegarde Stein of Chatham, N. Y., was her only attendant. Lieutenant Gates, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Belcher Gates of Nyack, N. Y., had Eugene Beach, U. S. N. R., of Bridgeport, Conn., as his best man. Lieutenant Gates was a member of the 1913 class, Columbia.

Hall—Hubbard.

The marriage has been announced of Miss Elizabeth A. Hubbard, daughter of Ralph K. Hubbard of Yorktown Heights, N. Y., and Percy Arden Hall of this city, which took place on the evening of April 30, in St. Matthew's Church, in West Eighty-fourth Street. The Rev. Percy F. Hall of Washington, D. C., and the Rev. Arthur Judge were the officiating clergymen.

Reginald F. Hall of Annapolis, Md., was best man for his brother.

A small reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's uncle, L. B. Nutting, 1 West Eighty-fifth Street.

Miss Martha V. Seggerman Weds.

The wedding of Ernest William Boley, U. S. R., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Boley of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Martha Virginia Seggerman, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor A. Seggerman of this city, took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the ballroom of the Hotel Gotham, and was followed by a small reception. The Rev. Dr. William E. Walsh of St. Luke's Episcopal Church officiated. The bride, in a blue traveling costume, was attended by her sister, Miss Ruth W. Seggerman. Walter Boley, a brother of the bridegroom, was his best man.

Bride of John A. McKesson.

Miss Mildred Warner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hopkins Warner of 316 West Seventy-ninth Street, and John Alexander McKesson were married yesterday in the Thompson Chapel at the Broadway Tabernacle. Mr. McKesson is in the Y. M. C. A. service and expects to sail shortly for France.

John Winslow Marries.

The marriage of John Winslow, Head Inspector of the Standard Shipbuilding Corporation, building merchantmen, and Miss Helen Woodward of Lexington, Mass., took place at 6 o'clock last night in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the Rev. Mr. Task officiating. Miss Woodward was her sister's only attendant and Ensign James Winslow, U. S. N. R. F., was his brother's best man. Mrs. E. B. Winslow, the bridegroom's mother, was one of the witnesses. The bride is an orphan.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Joseph McGuire of 235 West Seventy-fifth Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary L. McGuire, to Lieutenant Louis Connick of the Field Artillery, O. R. C., and son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jackson Connick of 328 West Seventy-second Street. Lieutenant Connick is a graduate of Yale, class of '12, and of the Columbia Law School. He is at present stationed at Camp Upton.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Nix of Rockville Centre, L. I., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alma Nix, to Lieutenant Walter Le Roy Saunders, U. S. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Saunders of Washington, D. C., where he is now stationed. Miss Nix is a graduate of Hollins College, Virginia. Her fiancé was graduated from Cornell, class of '17, and was for some time with the Signal Service at the United States School of Military Aeronautics at Ithaca, N. Y.

Mrs. C. A. Nelson of Plainfield, N. J., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Isabelle Florence Nelson, to Chief Yeoman Gillman Snow Jackson, U. S. N. R. F., at present attached to the Navy Electrical School at the New York Navy Yard.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Johnson of 24 East Thirty-second Street announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Irene Lorette Bowman, to Charles S. Earl of Waterbury, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey Olendorf of 110 Riverside Drive announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edna Olendorf, to Sergeant Maurice L. Shern, O. R. C., now stationed at Camp Wadsworth.

NEWSPAPER MEN HONORED.

French Bestow Legion of Honor Cross on Six Correspondents.

PARIS, Friday, May 3.—Robert Berry, who for two years has been correspondent of The Associated Press at the French Army Headquarters, has been decorated on the battlefield with the Cross of the Legion of Honor by General Antholne, acting on behalf of the Commander in Chief General Pétain, whose urgent duties prevented him from bestowing the decoration in person.

Two other American and four British correspondents also were decorated. General Antholne spoke of the invaluable work of the American and British press, and said the decorations were awarded as coming from soldiers for soldiers.

FRIEDA HEMPEL TO MARRY.

Singer's Wedding to W. B. Kahn Will Make Her American Citizen.

Just before Miss Frieda Hempel of the Metropolitan Opera Company left yesterday on a concert tour, she and her fiancé, William B. Kahn of 178 East Seventy-fourth Street, obtained a marriage license at the City Clerk's office. Neither has been married before.

Miss Hempel, who gave her age as 32, was born in Germany, and is an enemy alien. The marriage will make her an American citizen. Mr. Kahn is a New Yorker by birth, and is with the International Silk Company. He is 35 years old. Their engagement was announced some time ago, while Miss Hempel was in Los Angeles. She has been singing soprano rôles at the Metropolitan for six years.

No date has been announced for their marriage, although it was said that it would occur in June.

Jacobsen and Powell in Concert.

Sascha Jacobsen, a violinist of New York's own, who already has challenged some of the young foreign stars, appeared yesterday with John Powell, the pianist, in a Carnegie Hall matinee of the Humanitarian Cult, which will soon hold its hundredth meeting there. The program yesterday was in part a rally for the Liberty Loan, and during the afternoon it developed that Mr. Jacobsen had volunteered to play while so ill that he was obliged to leave before his closing numbers. He was heard early in a Brahms-Joachim "Hungarian Dance" and the Sarasate "Malaguena," and "Zigeunerweisen," while Mr. Powell gave his own sonata, "Virginianesque," and some pieces from Chopin.

Michalis-Campbell Wedding May 11.

The marriage of Miss Helen Gordon Campbell, daughter of Dr. Clarence G. Campbell and Mrs. Campbell, now residing at the Biltmore, to Captain Clarence G. Michalis, 104th Field Artillery, U. S. N. A., now stationed at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, May 11, in the Church of the Heavenly Rest. Mrs. John Pierrepont Constable, Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes, Jr., and the Misses Juleste Shardy, Marion Perry, Muriel Ashwell, and Evelyn Walker will be the bride's attendants.

GUIOMAR NOVAES PLAYS.

Pianist Charms Capacity Audience at Her Farewell Recital.

Guiomar Novaes, at a farewell piano recital for the season yesterday in Aeolian Hall, gave new evidence not only of her great popularity with this public, for there was a capacity house that overflowed even the stage, but she also brought to more thoughtful hearers something of that sense of beauty that distinguishes all her playing, with quiet hands raised to the keyboard, as in benediction. Miss Novaes is a remarkable artist, who produces legitimate effects often seemingly apart from their mechanical means.

Her performance yesterday was without extravagance of manner, never a mere gesture—no "pussyfooting"—to mar interpretations of poetic charm. Her program, all Chopin, had for its central feature among nine numbers the more familiar sonata, with the "Funeral March," its main episode, done as simply as if birds sang its melody. The pianist, gowned in flame-colored gauze, a changeable crimson edged in gold, appeared against a background of towering palms, suggesting the "Green Mansions" of her native Brazil.

Raymond Burt, Pianist, Makes Debut

Raymond Burt, a young American who looks like Percy Grainger, made a New York début as pianist last evening in Aeolian Hall, playing Grieg's sonata in E minor, and pieces by Chopin and Schumann, Schubert-Liszt, Rachmaninoff, and Rubinstein. In Grieg's music, he showed good qualities, freedom of style, and a firm left hand, though he sat too low at the keyboard to command its full volume of tone.

Tiny People Aid Babies of Soldiers.

To raise funds to endow two beds in the Post Graduate Hospital for the babies of soldiers and sailors, children of well-known people gave a benefit performance of "A Miniature Performance by Tiny People" last evening in the Colony Club ballroom. There were songs, dances, and recitations. Among the children taking part were the Misses Leta Clews, Marjorie Oelrichs, Cynthia Pratt, Margot Barton, Gloria Gould, Lillian Emerson, Elsie Benkard, Marion Wilson, Winifred Loew, and Leonard Thomas, Dudley Davis, Harry Peters, Ashley Chanler, and J. Borden Harriman. The entertainment was directed by Mrs. A. D. B. Pratt.

HIGGINSON SAYS FAREWELL.

Boston Symphony Founder Receives Ovation at Orchestra's Last Concert

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 4.—Major Henry L. Higginson made a farewell address at tonight's closing concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which he has maintained single-handed during thirty-seven years, and an audience representative of the public of Boston joined in a memorable ovation to the founder in Symphony Hall, which was crowded for the occasion. It had already been announced that the orchestra would be incorporated under the direction of a board of nine trustees, already named.

Major Higginson said that the Boston Symphony originally "was set up from the conviction of my youth that our country should have great and permanent orchestras," and that "to achieve this object it was necessary to give to the conductor the sole artistic responsibility as an essential to success."

He said the concerts had been to him "a great joy, not only because of the music, but chiefly because of the refreshment and enjoyment of the multitude of people unknown to me, who, leading gray lives, have needed this sunshine, and who have written to me a mass of warm letters full of gratitude for the past and of urgent requests for the future."

The war had brought troubles this year, he said, which had exhausted his strength and nerves, and therefore his part in the orchestra ceased tonight, except for the remaining popular concerts of the year.

Turning to the orchestra, of which he said he liked to think himself a member, Major Higginson bespoke for the incoming trustees the same intelligent devotion which his men had shown toward him. Finally, he asked the same support of the audience, which rose, and applauded for many minutes after the speaker closed.

for the best examples of Truck Operating Efficiency

Attention is called to the following announcement recently made by the Council of National Defense:

"The Council of National Defense has given its formal approval to all measures designed to facilitate the use of the motor truck in transportation wherever it can be utilized. It is urging all communities as far as possible to adapt the motor truck to their local needs and encourage its use in any way to help existing transportation problems."

To promote maximum results in motor transportation, the Packard Motor Car Company offers a total of $5,000 in awards to owners and drivers for greatest efficiency in hauling. The awards will be based on certified records of Packard truck operation over a period of three months, beginning June 1. Best results are obtained through full loads, careful routing and proper maintenance of the trucks. To win the awards records must be kept in accordance with the National Standard Truck Cost System. Transportation experts not connected with the Packard organization will be the judges. Full particulars will be furnished by us or any Packard dealer. Every Packard truck owner and driver is invited to compete for the awards.

EFFICIENT HAULING is now a patriotic duty. It will release railway cars for government use.

ADDED NEWS OF YESTERDAY'S HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST IN THE WORLD OF OUTDOOR SPORTS

TIGERS ARE NOSED OUT BY YALE NINE

Blue Gets Four Runs in the Fourth and Princeton Puts Over Three in the Sixth.

OTHER INNINGS FRUITLESS

Crowd Sees Spectacular Battle, Abounding in Fielding Gems, Between Traditional Rivals.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 4.—Five thousand people saw the Princeton baseball nine bow in defeat before Yale here this afternoon by the score of 4 to 3. The game was close and exciting throughout, and the Tiger nine fought until the last man was retired in the ninth inning. The game abounded in brilliant fielding feats, and time and again the crowd rose to its feet to applaud a spectacular bit of work.

Yale won the game in the fourth inning, when Moore weakened and passed Boyd. Lyman was safe at first on an infield error, and Moore passed Parker, filling the bases. Boyd was caught off third base, but a moment later Sawyer was hit by a pitched ball. Holmes scored two runs with a hard hit through short, and Prainn followed with a single through second that scored two more. Taylor relieved Moore at this point, and put an end to the Yale scoring.

Princeton came back in the sixth and very nearly tied the score. Strubing singled and advanced to third when Bauhan's sacrifice bit was fumbled. Strubing crossed the plate when Lyman juggled Bade's hard grounder, and Bade and Bauhan both scored on Madden's hit after Trimble had advanced them with a pretty sacrifice hit. Madden was out trying to stretch his hit into a double, and Horne ended the rally by flying out.

Princeton wasted a golden opportunity to score when Strubing was caught at home on an attempted squeeze play in the eighth inning. Talcott passed Strubing, who had previously made two hits. Strubing then stole second and third, but was trapped between home and third when the squeeze play failed. In the second inning, after two men were out, Horne hit a long triple to left field, but he was left there, as Rogers filed out.

Yale threatened to score several times, but each time the brilliant work of the Tiger defense prevented a further score. In the eighth inning Yale had men on second and third, with only one out, but Bade made a pretty stop of Talcott's roller and threw him out at first, and Trimble completed a double when he tagged Sawyer at the plate.

The work of both teams on the defense was of a high order. Thompson and Rogers fielded their positions faultlessly, while the infield backed up Talcott with excellent support.

Madden, the Tiger Captain, furnished the real fielding feature of the game in the fifth inning, when he rushed over close to second base and made a remarkable catch of Sawyer's drive that looked good for a hit.

With the exception of the sixth inning Talcott had the Tiger batsmen well in hand. Taylor pitched himself out of several bad situations. The work of both catchers was commendable. Trimble played great ball, and Holmes was extremely fast in covering foul flies.

The victory gives Yale the edge on the Bulldog-Tiger series and strengthens the hopes of the Eli admirers that their team will remain undefeated through the season.

Baseball Team Defeats Trinity Nine by 17 to 5.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., May 4.—Lack of control by Goldstein, the Trinity pitcher, resulted in the worst defeat Wesleyan has administered to the Hartford College in years, in a game on Andrus Field this afternoon, the score being 17 to 5.

In the first two innings he gave seven free passes. With singles by Green, Tomlinson, and Rames, and a double by Woodruff and a home run by Boote, these two innings netted Wesleyan a total of 14 runs. The score:

Wesleyan	9 5 1 0 0 2 0 0 .—	17	11	7

Batteries—Woodruff, Hall, Pease, and Boote for Wesleyan; Goldstein and Butler for Trinity.

SETON HALL IS WINNER.

Defeats City College in Fast Game by Score of 5 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., May 4.—Seton Hall beat C. C. N. Y. here today by 5 to 1. Vin Haley, who beat Fordham on Wednesday, won again, striking out fourteen men. He pitched six hitless innings. C. C. N. Y. got a run in the first on base on balls and on an error. Seton Hall got two runs in the first on a hit by Brennan, a passed ball, and an error.

Hackley Hitters Active.

By a three-run margin the Hackley School baseball team defeated the De Witt Clinton High School nine in an interesting game yesterday at Tarrytown, N. Y. Thirteen hits were registered for Hackley.

LEHIGH TURNS TABLES.

Defeats Its Ancient Rival, Lafayette, by Score of 9 to 7.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., May 4.—Lehigh today avenged last Saturday's defeat, beating Lafayette, 9 to 7. The series now stands at one game each. A feature of today's game was the length of time it took to play the contest, which was three hours.

The score by innings:

Lehigh ....3 0 1 0 2 0 1 2 .—9

Batteries—Pfeiffer, Mould, and Herrington; Moyer and Buchner.

ST. JOHN'S BEATS RESERVES

Scores Victory Over Naval Baseball Team by 9 to 7.

The St. John's College nine hit hard and opportunely in defeating the strong nine of the Third Naval District Reserve Force, 9-7, yesterday afternoon at St. John's Field. The collegians collected eleven hits, including a pair of triples, off the deliveries of Horle and Schoenbaum.

Waters pitched fine ball for the Brooklynites and, besides being backed up with heavy hitting he was also supported with fielding of a high order.

St. John's began to bombard the Reserve pitcher in the opening chapter, three tallies being scored on a triple by Hafner with the bases full. Horle was withdrawn in the fifth and Schoenbaum took his place. The latter's pitching was also to the liking of the collegians.

The score, by innings:

		R.	H.	E.

EASY FOR STUYVESANT.

Trounces Townsend Harris Hall on Diamond by 20 to 5.

Stuyvesant High School triumphed over the Townsend Harris Hall nine yesterday afternoon in the City College stadium by 20 to 5. The game was very loosely played and the Red and Blue lads had little difficulty in hammering Scoville for twenty hits.

The score by innings:

JUDGES NAMED FOR SHOW.

List of Arbiters for Exhibit of Ladies' K. C. Announced.

The judge's slate of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America for its dog show, to be held on the grounds of the Meadow Brook Club at Westbury, L. I., on June 4 and 5, had been completed with the exception of the judge of American and English foxhounds and beagles, which will be announced later. It is made up almost entirely of amateurs, prominent among dog fanciers, including such well known lady authorities as Mrs. Amzi Dodd, Mrs. Altmore Robinson, Miss Margaret Brigham, Mrs. M. M. Van Beuren, and Mrs. Vernon Castle.

Captain A. H. Hall of the British Remount Commission, who judged so ably at the Pomeranian show, has been asked to take several breeds. Captain Hall is one of the leading judges of England and it is anticipated that he will receive a record entry. George S. Thomas and G. Muss-Arnolt have been invited to do the all-round judging.

The complete slate is as follows:

G. Muss-Arnolt, Great Danes, bloodhounds, otter hounds, mastiffs, Newfoundlands, Russian wolfhounds, Irish wolfhounds, deerhounds, greyhounds, Eskimos, Norwegian elkhounds, retrievers, wire haired pointing Griffons, Chesapeake Bay dogs, whippets, dachshunds, Samoyedes, boxers, Doberman pinschers, schipperkes, Japanese spaniels, Chihuahuas, and miscellaneous; Mrs. Amzi Dodd, St. Bernards; Dr. H. J. Gnubenud, pointers and setters; Rev. T. Moore-Smith, sporting spaniels; John H. Blackwood, collies; Paul Huhn, Belgian and German sheep dogs; George S. Thomas, Old English sheep dogs, chows, poodles, Shetland sheep dogs, Sealyham, Welsh, Skye, Dandie Dinmont, Bedlington and Manchester terriers and toy poodles; Mrs. Attmore Robinson, Dalmatians; John F. Feder, Boston terriers; Miss Margaret Brigham, Scottish, West Highland white and Cairn terriers; Captain A. H. Hall, fox terriers, Pomeranians, English toy spaniels, Yorkshire terriers, pugs, Maltese and toy black and tan terriers; Mrs. M. M. Van Beuren, Pekingese; Mrs. Vernon Castle, Brussels Griffons; Captain A. H. Hall and George S. Thomas, variety classes and unclassified specials.

KRAMER TO RACE SPENCER.

Cyclists Will Compete at Newark Velodrome Today.

Frank L. Kramer, sixteen times national cycling champion, who lost his title last year to Arthur Spencer, the speedy Toronto boy, will meet Spencer in a mile match race, the best two out of three heats, at the Velodrome in Newark this afternoon. This will be Kramer's second appearance of the season. Last Sunday he defeated Bob Spears.

Kramer is in excellent condition and declares that he expects to beat Spencer. Kramer has been dividing his time this last week between the golf links and the cycle track. In the morning he rides and in the afternoon he is at the Forest Hill Golf Club.

Besides the match race today, there will be a three-mile handicap, one-mile open, and two-mile invitation race for the professionals, and an Australian pursuit race, two-thirds mile handicap and a half-mile novice for the amateurs.

SWEDE SETS NEW RECORD.

Establishes Interscholastic Mark of 9:51 2-5 for Two Miles.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—A national interscholastic track record toppled at Franklin Field today when Allan Swede, Mercersberg Academy's crack distance runner, covered two miles in 9 minutes 51 2-5 seconds and won the Middle Atlantic States interscholastic title. The former mark was established at the Princeton interscholastics of 1914, when Boughton of Newark Central High School was timed at 9:51 3-5. Unfortunately for Swede, the competition was extremely poor. Otherwise he might have clipped the record to much finer dimensions. As it was, Nulty of St. Benedict's Prep. finished far in the rear, and during the course of the race was never able to challenge for the lead.

Team honors were easily Mercersburg's, for Jimmy Curran brought up a formidable band of athletes. Six first places were scored by the Cumberland Valley lads, these being accounted for by Swede, Woodring, Angell, and Davis. When the last event had been run off the scores stood: Mercersburg, 55; St. Benedict's Prep, 18; Harrisburg Tech, 17; Baltimore Polytechnic, 16; Flushing High, 12; Girard College, 9; Perkiomen, 8; Port Jervis, 6; Ridgewood High, 5, and Stuyvesant, 5.

Beck of Harrisburg Tech. was the individual star, with 17 points. He captured both hurdle events with ease; won the shot put honors by a heave of 46 feet 2¼ inches, and was placed second in the broad jump.

MURPHY'S MISPLAYS DEFEAT DARTMOUTH

Shortstop Makes Four Errors, Which Help Brown Nine to Win, 6 to 4.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 4.—Dartmouth was a 6-to-4 victim for the Brown baseball team here today. Murphy, the Dartmouth shortstop, was largely responsible for the Brown victory. He made four errors.

Misplays figured largely in all of Brown's runs. Harris's three-base hit, the longest drive of the day, sent two Dartmouth runners across the plate. Martin's stop of Mannex's drive was the fielding feature of the game.

The score:

PLAY ON NEARBY LINKS.

Thrift Stamps Used as Prizes at at Baltusrol and Siwanoy.

A number of golf clubs in the metropolitan district held week-end competitions yesterday, and at all of them the events attracted good-sized entries. The spirit of the times was manifest in two of the club events, namely at the Baltusrol Golf Club and the Siwanoy Country Club, where Thrift Stamps were the prizes gained by the successful golfers. This form of reward has found popularity with the golfer, as was shown by the fact that at both clubs large fields competed.

Four events were held at Siwanoy, all eighteen holes medal play handicap. The winners who received Thrift Stamps were J. H. Burton, 96—20, 76; F. A. Hodgman, 102—24, 78; C. H. Speakman, 93—14, 79, and K. S. Congdon, 89—15, 74.

Baltusrol's seventy-one golfers answered the call, each entrant being assessed 50 cents. The return of cards for the round, however, was of a nature to keep the club officials busy late into the night determining scores, and no winner was announced.

The attraction at the Upper Montclair Country Club was qualifying rounds for the Governor's Cup and the House Committee Cup over eighteen holes. These two cups will be played for at match play, beginning next Saturday. Two sixteens qualified, and there were prizes for best gross and best net. The gross award went to W. Reekle, whose card of 78, 3—75 gave him the place of honor in the Class A section. For the low net laurels two golfers tied, each with scores of 71. They were listed in the Class B group, and were N. Davidson, 89, 18—71, and J. W. Stone, 101, 30—71. The scores follow:

Class A.—W. Reekle, 78, 3—75; T. J. Carlon, 89, 12—77; H. Mackie, 85, 8—77; W. S. Wood, 87, 8—79; A. E. Betteridge, 89, 8—81; A. Armagnac, 94, 12—82; W. McLaughlin, 91; 8—83; C. D. Halsey, 99, 16—83; C. Farley, 93, 9—84; D. H. Cookfair, 102, 16—86; R. Sanderson, 90, 8—88; A. S. Bentley, 101, 12—89; J. J. Adams, 110, 16—94.

Class B.—N. Davidson, 89, 18—71; J. W. Stone, 101, 30—71; G. E. Bradley, 92, 20—72; W. C. Jones, 102, 27—75; C. H. Miller, 95, 18—77; F. G. Smith, 105, 27—78; J. W. Morse, 105, 25—80; C. H. Briner, 107, 25—82; A. W. MacDonald, 102, 18—84; J. D. Horseford, 100, 15—85; H. D. Fernald, 116, 30—86; R. Wilson, 109, 23—86; A. M. Seiby, 112, 25—87; E. H. Fulger, 116, 28—88; T. W. Mayes, 111, 19—92.

In a ball sweepstakes, N. Davidson's card of 89, 18—71 gave him premier laurels, while Reekle, with 78,3—75, was second. Other scores were: C. H. Briner, 107, 25—82; R. M. C. Glenn, 93, 9—84; J. B. Crandall, 116, 29—87, and F. H. Barr, 119, 28—91.

The familiar Kicker's Handicap attracted a field of forty golfers to the Wykagyl Country Club's links, and the competition resulted in a tie. The number drawn was 76, and as no golfer was credited with a net score at this figure, the next highest and lowest nets were selected, creating a tie between Harold Herrick, 92; 15—77, and W. K. Kreeps, 98, 23—75.

At the Ardsley Club sixty golfers competed in the qualifying round for the May Cup, the scores in which also counted for a ball sweepstakes event. Eight golfers qualified for match play. The net prize went to L. C. Willy, with 87, 18—69. J. W. Raymond also had a 69 net, but as he returned the best gross of the day, he received the gross prize. His card was 79, 10—69. Other scores were: A. K. Wood, 93, 19—74; G. E. Hapgood, 86, 10—76; H. A. Plummer, 98, 20—78; A. B. Meacham, 89, 11—78; F. J. Hobson, 103, 25—78, and I. L. Bigelow, 106, 27—79.

H. E. Van Horn led the Class A golfers in a red card tournament at the Dunwoodie Country Club in which seventy-five golfers participated. Van Horn's card was 82, 11—71. In Class B, T. Jackson Higgs, with 91, 16—75, was the leader, while Class C honors fell to John H. Murphy, whose card showed 101, 30—71.

A large field contested in a ball sweepstakes event on the links of the Montclair Golf Club. The play was in two classes, A and B. The leader in the Class A division was W. L. Conwell, with 84, 9—75. The Class B leader was C. H. Loftus, Jr., who had a card of 95, 22—73. The scores:

Class A.—W. L. Conwell, 84, 9—75; F. W. Egner, 80, 10—79; R. B. Neff, 88, 7—81; R. B. Stewart, 90, 8—82; P. Harrison, 88, 5—83; E. J. Ridgway, 89, 6—83; W. H. Loftus, Sr., 94, 11—83.

Class B.—W. H. Loftus, Jr., 95, 22—73; W. H. Hodgkin, 92, 17—75; John Reis, 94, 18—76; D. T. Wilcox, 97, 18—79; E. B. Stearns, 95, 14—81; E. L. Allen, 100, 18—82; R. S. Carmichael, 98, 15—83; E. J. Swords, 100, 15—85.

Play was also held in the first round of the Spring tournament, the survivors being:

Class A—H. M. Robinson, R. B. Stewart, C. J. Turner, F. W. Egner, R. B. Neff, and J. E. Noyes.

Class B—J. C. Platt, E. L. Allen, E. B. Stearns, W. R. Hodgkin, F. T. Gates, John Reis, C. J. Cairns, and R. S. Carmichael.

Class C—C. B. Harrison and F. H. Kingsbury.

ELEVENS BATTLE TO DRAW.

Bethlehem and Rovers Deadlocked at Soccer After 30 Minutes Extra.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., May 4.—The Fall River Rovers, champions of the United States Soccer Football Association, and the Bethlehem Steel Company's team battled to a 2 to 2 draw in the finals for the Sir Thomas Dewar Championship Cup here today. All the scoring was in the first half.

Radigan tallied for Bethlehem in the first two minutes of play, and Sullivan of Fall River evened matters fifteen minutes later. Bethlehem again drew ahead on a goal by Fleming, but Sullivan once more evened the match. After the regulation 90 minutes of play had left the game a draw, the teams played half an hour overtime without scoring.

BLUE LADDIE WINS EASILY.

Has No Trouble Taking Pimlico Nursery Stake.

PIMLICO, Md., May 4.—Fine weather and a card that would do credit to one of the New York tracks served to attract a large crowd to the Maryland Jockey Club course today. It was the first real good turnout of the meeting, which has many good programs in reserve before it closes on May 17. There were three events in the feature class, the Pimlico Nursery, for two-year-olds; the Merchants' Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward, and the Mount Washington Steeplechase.

Harry Payne Whitney gave further evidence that he will have to be reckoned with in the juvenile division during the coming season, for his Cylgad gelding, Blue Laddie, had no difficulty in capturing the Nursery, which had among the starters the best youngsters that have been seen under silk this year. Blue Laddie is trained by Albert Simons, and is one of the Whitney second string. Judging from the easy manner in which he disposed of his field this afternoon there must be some fleet youngsters held in reserve at Brookdale for the big stakes in New York.

Neither Omar Khayyam nor Hourless put in an appearance for the Merchants Handicap at a mile and sixty yards, but the event did not lack class, as the spectators were treated to a sterling performance on the part of J. K. L. Ross's Cudgel, which carried 130 pounds and won as he pleased after giving lumps of weight away to a dozen fair handicap performers. Cudgel's performance was impressive and indicated that he is well worth the $30,000 which Commander Ross gave for him last Fall.

He was in no hurry to keep pace with his field, but Lyke kept him clear of the other contenders. Rounding the lower turn Cudgel was sent to the outside, and apparently it caused him little effort to go to the front. He was moving smoothly and easily as he passed the winning post a length and a half in front of H. P. Whitney's Johren in the good time of 1:43 4-5. Johren might have caused the former Western crack a little more trouble, but for early interference. As it was the Whitney candidate finished strongly, and outgamed S. Ross's Crank for the place.

In the Nursery the pace was set by J. W. McClelland's The Wanderer, with R. F. Carman's Auntie well up for the first quarter. Blue Laddie was content to follow the pace for the first quarter. Then Auntie quit, and when Blue Laddie challenged The Wanderer the latter faltered under punishment. Robinson had only to sit still then to win with Blue Laddie by a length.

J. E. Davis's Brooks was asked to carry 154 pounds in the Mount Washington Steeplechase, which brought out a fine field of jumpers. Wolke kept him well up with the field all the way, but the weight told in the end, and Byers brought up J. E. Widener's Pussy Willow in the last quarter to win by a length and a half from Brooks.

The summaries:

BOUTS BOOST RECRUITING.

Jim Coffey, Joe Bonds, and Harry Greb Appear on U. S. S. Recruit.

Recruiting for the army and navy, principally the navy, and Liberty Loan sales were boosted yesterday as a result of a boxing entertainment held on board the land battleship U. S. S. Recruit, moored in Union Square. In addition a number of field glasses were donated for the use of the navy's officers and a large and enthusiastic crowd of sailors and citizens, the latter invited guests to the ceremonies, had an enjoyable afternoon.

The bouts were held under the supervision of Commander Newton Mansfield, this city's chief naval recruiting officer, and Commander Cann of the Alcedo. Mike Leonard, the boxing instructor at Pelham Bay naval training station, who in his days of professional ring activities was known as ... squared circle's "Beau Brummel," was referee and Joe Humphries, the prominent announcer, was master of ceremonies.

The contests, seven of them, each four rounds, were held on the Recruit's quarter deck, end, while the entertainment was essentially a U. S. Recruit one, a vast throng packed Union Square in the immediate vicinity of the land war craft. Prominent among the spectators was a detachment of Australian Anzacs, and subsequent to the boxing exhibitions enlistment rallies were held while a marine band of sixty-eight pieces played.

One of the bouts held was a battle royal, in which Jim Coffey, the erstwhile Irish heavyweight, who has joined Uncle Sam's naval forces, Joe Bonds, another former heavyweight boxer, and Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, were the principals. Greb, through his speed, earned the laurels of the bout. The Pittsburgh middleweight also engaged in a four-round exhibition bout with Al McCoy, former champion.

Other bouts were: Joe Cunningham vs. Johnny Bonsal, Frankie Conifrey vs. Joe Welling, Walter McCaffrey vs. Johnny Ray, Eddie Keenan vs. Johnny Finley, Johnny Lisl vs. Jimmy Blute.

Yale Twelve Is Overwhelmed.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., May 4.—The Lehigh lacrosse team ran up a big score on the Yale team this afternoon, the figures being 15 to 0. At half time the score was 10 to 0. Lehigh's attack was working wonderfully well today and the defence was faultless.

GAIN $33,000,000 IN GOLD RESERVES

Total of $1,860,000,000 Establishes a New Record—Big Decrease in Discounts.

MORE NOTES CIRCULATED

Payments by Newly Admitted Banks Bring Total of Paid-in Capital to Over $75,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Liquidation in some volume of discounts secured by Government war obligations together with considerable gains of gold by the system is indicated in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly bank statement issued as at the close of business on May 3.

Large gains of gold are reported by the New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and San Francisco banks, the gain by the New York bank going hand-in-hand with liquidation of discounted war loan paper, while additions to reserves at the other banks may be traced largely to liquidation of balances due from other Federal Reserve Banks. Gold reserves reached the record total of $1,860,000,000, an increase of about $33,000,000 for the week, and of $185,500,000 since the beginning of the present year.

Total discounts on hand show a net decrease of $28,700,000, the New York bank reporting net liquidation of $33,100,000 of discounts. Of the total on hand, about 70 per cent., or $606,600,000, as against $642,400,000 the week before, is directly traceable to war loan transactions. Acceptances on hand fell off $5,400,000, Philadelphia and Cleveland reporting the largest decreases under this head. No appreciable changes are shown in Government securities and other earning assets.

Payment for Federal Reserve Bank stock by newly admitted members accounts largely for an increase of $86,000 in paid-in capital, shown for the first time in excess of $75,000,000. Of this total about 24 per cent. represents the amount paid in by members other than national banks.

Government deposits show a decline of $56,800,000, and members' reserve deposits decreased $22,900,000, the New York bank reporting an even larger decrease.

Additional net issues of $30,500,000 of notes are reported by Federal Reserve agents. Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation are given as $1,556,700,000, an increase of $30,400,000 for the week, all the banks except Atlanta, Kansas City, and Dallas reporting larger circulation figures than the week before.

HOLD NINE U. S. CERTIFICATES.

Member Banks Also Report Falling Off in Investments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Reports from 681 member banks in about 100 leading cities indicate a further increase of $50,700,000 in the holdings of certificates of indebtedness. United States bonds, including Liberty bonds, show a gain of $20,800,000 for the week, while loans secured by Government war obligations decreased slightly.

All other loans and investments declined $78,200,000, the largest decrease—$39,900,000—being in the reserve cities. Government securities, including loans supported by such securities, represent 20.1 per cent. of the total loans and investments shown, as compared with 19.6 per cent. the previous week. For the New York City banks the proportion is about 26.5 per cent.

Total reserves, all with the Federal Reserve Banks, show a gain of $18,000,000. For the Central Reserve city banks a gain of $28,100,000 in reserve is shown, while reserve in other reserve cities fell off $12,800,000. Cash in vaults of all reporting banks show a decrease of $1,000,000, a gain of $4,300,000 in the Central Reserve cities being offset by losses in other reserve city and country banks.

Aggregate net demand deposits decreased $137,400,000, while time deposits increased $24,300,000, and Government deposits $26,900,000. For the Central Reserve city banks a decrease of $79,200,000 in net demand deposits is shown as against increases of $25,100,000 in time deposits and of $60,400,000 in Government deposits.

The ratio of loans and investments to total, including Government deposits, shows a rise from 110.1 to 110.8 per cent. An increase from 13.6 to 13.9 per cent. is shown in the ratio of combined cash and reserve to total deposits. For the Central Reserve city banks this ratio went up from 14.8 to 15.3 per cent.

Total excess reserves increased from $81,500,000 to $97,500,000 for all reporting banks, and from $31,100,000 to $76,700,000 for Central Reserve city banks.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Anaconda Mines Produced 26,500,000 Pounds During April.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 4.—Anaconda Copper Company in April produced 26,500,000 pounds of copper, compared with 28,000,000 pounds in March, and 29,300,000 pounds in April a year ago. Shannon's April production was 827,000 pounds of copper, against 962,000 pounds in March, and 924,000 pounds in April a year ago.

The Old Dominion Smelter output in April was 2,814,000 pounds, against 2,872,000 pounds in March, and 3,516,000 pounds in April, 1917. Miami Copper Company's production in April amounted to 4,913,950 pounds, compared with 5,174,385 pounds in March, and 5,128,195 pounds in April last year.

The Inspiration Copper Company's output in April was 9,250,000 pounds of copper, compared with 8,750,000 pounds in March, and 11,400,000 pounds in April a year ago. The April production of the East Butte's smelter amounted to 1,811,260 pounds of copper, compared with 2,895,940 pounds in March, 2,824,040 in February, and 2,574,140 in January.

The Cerro De Pasco Mining Company turned out 5,952,000 pounds of copper in April, against 6,906,000 pounds in March, 5,332,000 in February, and 6,798,000 in January.

The first annual report of the Old Dominion Company, as an operating company has been issued. Total earnings for the year were $8,635,171, and net profits, $1,221,264, the equivalent of $4.11 a share, compared with $8.98 a share earned in 1916.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Receipts of wheat at primary points last week showed a slight increase, and it seems probable that there may be some enlargement to the movement in the near future. Reports from Chicago said that 500,000 bushels had recently been dislodged in the country throughout Illinois, which was considered as being hoarded, and apparently efforts are being made to get wheat of this kind to market. The Spring wheat acreage was estimated at about 22,000,000 acres, which compares with 18,500,000 harvested last year.

RYE.

The rye market was dull and nominal and the undertone was easy owing to a decline of 3 cents in Minneapolis, where cash rye was quoted at $2.64.

CORN.

The corn market developed a reactionary tendency on Saturday and final quotations were ⅛c to ⅜c net lower. The decline was due largely to liquidation for over the week-end while the market was in an over-bought position and consequently weaker technically. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.60; No. 4 yellow, $1.55; No. 3 white, $1.80, cost and freight New York.

OATS.

Shorts in the oats market had apparently covered their contracts on Friday's advance, and when longs attempted to take profits on Saturday they found only a limited demand. In consequence prices were easier, closing with net losses of ⅜c to ⅝c. The local cash market was dull and easy; natural quoted at 88c to 89c, clipped white 89c to 92c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was firmer with less pressure to sell and a better demand, prompted largely by an upturn in the hog market and smaller receipts of hogs at Western points. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 13,000, estimated for tomorrow 42,000, and for this week 140,000. Kansas City received 500 and Omaha 6,700.

COFFEE.

Saturday's coffee market was quiet and without special feature. The market opened steady at a 2-point advance, and there were no transactions reported until just before the close, when a few buying orders appeared in the ring, and in the absence of selling pressure prices advanced 1 to 5 points net at the close. SUGAR.

Local refiners are more liberal with allotments to brokers, although some interests are still withdrawn from the market. The scarcity has now practically been eliminated as a factor, and in some sections in the West it is said that stocks of sugar have accumulated. Purchases by the committee on Saturday amounted to 115,000 bags of Cubas at 4.985c, cost and freight, equal to 6.005c for centrifugal. Refined prices were unchanged at the fixed level of 7.45c for fine granulated.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

NEW VOCATIONAL WORK.

Henry Street Settlement Fights to Keep More Children in School.

The Vocational Bureau conducted by the Henry Street Settlement has been quietly establishing a foundation to provide scholarships for children of families affected by the war, and in this way many will be kept in school when they would otherwise have had to help support the family.

The Vocational Bureau, which is directed by Mrs. Max Morgenthau, Jr., was first started two years ago during the garment strikes, when so many children were thrown out of employment.

"It did not take much study among the children who had gone to work at an early age to learn that experience would not suffice as a teacher in fashioning their careers," said Mrs. Morgenthau. "The study of the 14 to 16-year-old boy or girl in industry and in school again proved that industry offers little education or economic opportunity to the untrained child. Almost from the moment we took up the work our duties covered a very large field, for not only did the children come to us for counsel when they discovered that we had their best interest at heart, but the other members of the families also turned to us for advice.

"The method employed is that of interviewing all the children of the graduating class and all other children in the school who will be fourteen within the year. From this large group the children fall into different classifications and the work resolved itself into the dissemination of information for the graduate needing direction as to further educational opportunities; an effort to solve the problem of the maladjusted child, and the child about to drop out of school for economic reasons. About 1,500 children have been given advice since the bureau was established.

"Now more than ever the bureau realizes the importance of guiding and directing the children effectively. Since the war, wages for unskilled work have almost doubled, and it takes vision on the part of the child and parent to withstand the opportunities of the situation and to appreciate that the skilled worker is a more effective human being as well as a greater asset to the community. Our efforts are intensified to conserve the powers of the children that they may be trained workers of the future. We want to be able to give the child the first push in that most crucial time when he does not know what he wants to do and there is no one in his family able to direct him. We are performing the positive service of keeping the children in school and the negative purpose of not flooding the country with incompetent workers."

Columbia Men to Work on Farms.

Columbia has issued a call for volunteer farmers from among the student body, and indications are that several hundred undergraduates will seize the opportunity for war service. A number of students opened the campaign by signing for the service last week, and several left yesterday for large up-State farms. Dean Hawkes of the College Department gave impetus to the movement yesterday by announcing that all students who left to work on farms from now on until a definite time before the yearly examinations would receive full credit for their courses, provided their marks at midyear justified the granting of credit. A condition in the allowance is that the students continue their work throughout the Summer.

MOURN MAJOR BEDBROOK.

British and American Officers at His Funeral—Eulogy by Dr. Seagle.

Funeral services for Major Ernest St. George Bedbrook, Deputy Director of the British Ministry of Munitions, were held impressively yesterday at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, and were attended by many British army officers, American officers and officials, and delegations from the United States Signal Corps, the Arista Association, the Bethlehem Steel Works, the New York District Inspection Department, the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission, and two "Blue Devils," now visiting here.

In his eulogy the Rev. Dr. Nathan Seagle, pastor of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, praised the character of the dead officer, who had made many friends during his stay in this country. He said:

"It is only at the graveside that we can realize how insignificant a part must be any service we are rendering compared with the heroes who are giving their everything willingly. This hero whom we mourn was an Englishman and a Christian, but he was more than this. He was a son of God, fighting and giving his life that his brothers and sisters may live. He has not given his life that nations may continue, but that you and I may live in freedom and democracy."

The coffin was draped with a British flag which had been battle-scarred from service in Egypt. It was the property of Major Bedbrook, it was said, and had become his keepsake during a tour of duty with a British battalion in Egypt.

FRANCIS H. PAGE DEAD.

Vice President of Corn Exchange Bank Expires in His 62d Year.

Francis H. Page, Vice President of the Corn Exchange Bank and once President of the Washington Trust Company, which was merged with the Corn Exchange, died yesterday at his home, 120 Willow Street, Brooklyn, in his sixty-second year. Mr. Page was born in Brooklyn and received his education at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, and upon graduation went into the banking business as a clerk in the offices of the old banking firm of John J. Cisco & Co., in Wall Street.

After he had remained with this firm for several years Mr. Page became connected with the United States Trust Company. With David M. Morrison he was one of the organizers of the Washington Trust Company and became one of its officers. Upon the resignation of Mr. Morrison, Mr. Page was elected to the presidency of the institution, remaining in this capacity until several years ago, when the Washington Trust Company became one of the branches of the Corn Exchange Bank.

On June 5, 1879, Mr. Page married Miss Genevieve Strickland. He is survived by his wife and a son, Ensign Francis Strickland Page, U. S. N. Mr. Page was a member of the Merchants' Association, the Hamilton Club of Brooklyn, the Ramentian and Giles Lake clubs of Canada, the Greenwich Country Club, the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, and the Greenwich Casino of Greenwich, Conn.

Captain Horatio D. Smith.

Captain Horatio D. Smith, who commanded a United States vessel during the civil war and later joined the Revenue Cutter Service, in which he was promoted to the rank of Captain Commandant, a distinction received by only six revenue cutter officers, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James E. Shephard, 127 Ash Street, Flushing, L. I., in his seventy-third year. During the Spanish-American War Captain Smith was in command of the Merrill, a cutter with which he carried important secret orders from Admiral Remy to Admiral Sampson. Captain Smith was retired ten years ago for age.

Charles Ramsay Buckley Dead.

Charles Ramsay Buckley of 112 Montague Street, Brooklyn, died there yesterday. Mr. Buckley was a member of the Reform Club of Brooklyn, the Hamilton Club, and the Columbia Club. He was also connected with several Brooklyn charitable organizations. Mr. Buckley was graduated from Columbia University with the class of 1874 and from the School of Mines with the class of 1878.

WILLIS T. Mead UNDERTAKER 1939 MADISON AVENUE
There is a vast difference between holding your job down, and holding your job UP. Ever think about it that way? This business started 73 years ago with an ideal. That ideal is to render the utmost in undertaking service at the least possible cost to our customers, and to do our best to lighten the burdens of grief-stricken homes. Three generations have felt the influence of that ideal and a monument of good-will has been erected to the House of Mead of which we shall ever be proud.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—There has been a general fall in pressure except in the Northeast, with principal centres of disturbance over the Canadian Northwest and Southeastern Idaho. Showers continued in Texas and extended into New Mexico, but there was no other precipitation of consequence.

High temperatures continue in the central valleys and the Northwest, with a maximum of 92 degrees in North Dakota and Iowa.

It is generally cooler in the upper lake region, while in the East and South temperature changed but little.

Showers will occur Sunday night or Monday in the northern upper lake region, and Monday or Monday night in the southern upper lake and the lower lake region. Scattered showers are also probable Sunday and Monday in the Florida Peninsula. Elsewhere in the Atlantic States and in the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the East Gulf States the weather will be fair Sunday and Monday.

It will be warmer Sunday in the upper lake region and on Monday in the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and interior New England. In the Ohio Valley high temperatures will continue.

Winds for Sunday and Monday along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be gentle shifting; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate shifting winds, mostly east off the Florida Coast.

FORECAST TODAY AND MONDAY.

Eastern New York and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Sunday; Monday fair and warmer.

Southern New England—Fair Sunday; Monday fair; warmer on the mainland.

Western New York—Fair Sunday; Monday increasing cloudiness and warmer.

Northern New England—Fair Sunday; Monday fair; warmer in the interior.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1917.	1918.		1917.	1918.
3 A. M.	40	57	4 P. M.	44	66
6 A. M.	40	54	6 P. M.	42	64
9 A. M.	48	60	9 P. M.	42	57
12 M.	51	65	11 P. M.	42	54

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 62; for the corresponding date last year it was 46; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 55.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 60; at 8 P. M. it was 58. Maximum temperature, 70 degrees at 3 P. M.; minimum, 54 degrees at 6 A. M. Humidity, 65 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 65 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.85 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.01 inches.

Men's Fine Shirts

ENTIRE PRODUCT OF THE CELEBRATED "PEQUOT" SHIRT FACTORY, OF NEW ENGLAND, INTENDED FOR THE STOCKS OF THE FOREMOST EXCLUSIVE HABERDASHERS OF THE COUNTRY.

Superb Silk Shirts, Rich Fibre Silk Shirts, Imported Flannels, Fine Madras, Etc.

All New and Perfect, at Extraordinary Prices!

War conditions made it expedient for these fine shirtmakers to give up their plant to other lines and they decided to abandon the shirt business.

We bought the entire stocks in competition with some of the best stores in New York, for such a worth while collection of Shirts has not been offered in years. It seemed that everybody wanted them.

These shirts were designed by artists who studied the tastes of the best groomed American gentlemen. They were made by specially trained needleworkers—the workmanship to the last stitch is unusually fine.

The patterns are all "picked"—the cream of the best fabrics obtainable. Pequot Shirts are highly specialized in cut, in finish, in every detail, and were sold under the private labels of the smartest Haberdashery Shops of New York, San Francisco, and in between.

All Sizes 13½ to 17—All Sleeve Lengths 33 to 35

Country Club Millinery

Long widths of tulle swathe the brim of this toque militaire, and sweep out "harem-veil fashion," to keep away the rough winds when motoring to the smartest of Country Clubs.

Some prefer to speak of apparel designed to be worn at exclusive Country Clubs as sports apparel, but there are many persons who enjoy the hospitality of these delightful Caravansaries who do not go in for golf and for other sports incident to these spots of happy restfulness. These persons want just such hats as are produced here.

Therefore, we call these new hats, that our artist-creators are bringing into existence, Country Club Millinery.

Gimbel country club millinery is most informal, most comfortable and most exquisitely made.

Prices range, $6.75 to $22.50.

War Saving Stamps Will Help Win the War

TOMORROW is Thrift Stamp Day throughout the United States. Tomorrow the retail businesses throughout the country will urge their customers to exchange quarters for Thrift Stamps.

Tomorrow Uncle Sam, with the help of the large and small stores, hopes to sell at least one Thrift Stamp to every one of America's hundred million souls who are patriotically ready to lend their quarters to their Government.

We are ready to begin the big drive. Throughout this store we have installed Thrift Stamp Banks. Drop your quarter in the slot and get a receipt for the money loaned to your Government in the form of a Thrift Stamp.

Now let us "carry on." Every man, woman and child should buy, own and save Thrift Stamps. The saving habit can be acquired by the constant buying of Thrift Stamps.

Don't make any mistake; you are not giving anything away when you buy Thrift Stamps. You are loaning your money to your Government, and if you follow the rules of the saving game you will get four per cent. for your patriotism.

Lend a hand tomorrow and show Uncle Sam you believe in him. Help to make tomorrow one of the country's biggest days.

Begin your shopping early in this store, buy at least one Thrift Stamp in each department you visit and do likewise in all the other stores your shopping takes you to.

Framed Pictures

At Half the Original Prices.

The consistent beauty of this collection testifies to the good taste and broad knowledge of pictures exercised in its selection. Original water colors, color prints, carbon reproductions, hand colored photogravures and reproductions of old and modern masters are included. In many instances the frames alone are worth more than the prices of the framed pictures.

Any one of these will make an appropriate and acceptable Wedding Gift.

WHAT THE LOAN MEANS.

That the Third Liberty Loan has been subscribed and oversubscribed, that the people of the country have advanced $3,000,000,000, it may be $4,000,000,000, to their Government, is an immediate occasion for rejoicing. But in the taking of the loan and in the manner of its taking the foreseeing American will find reason for profound confidence in the future of this nation, in the stability of its institutions.

There were myriads of volunteer workers for the loan, they were everywhere active, nobody could escape or wanted to escape their solicitations. Every one of them was an agent of the Government, serving the Government from the highest of all motives, the desire and the resolve that it should be victorious in the war, which is the same thing as saying that the Government should be preserved. It is of good augury when the people of a nation take that attitude toward their Government.

Mr. McAdoo said on Thursday: "In "most instances the people of the "rural districts and of the small towns "have already oversubscribed their "allotments." That is a statement of tremendous import and of the happiest. All over the country millions of people, 12,000,000 or 15,000,000 of them, now hold certificates of beneficial interest in their Government, and they are preferred certificates, first mortgages on everything in the country. All our resources have been pledged to the war by the President, the Government can take every man's property, all of it. The very last thing it will take must be the Liberty bonds, and those will be taken from the holder, or rendered valueless in his hands, only through default in the inconceivable event of the destruction and failure of the Government.

Can any Government fail or be destroyed when it has 20,000,000 citizens at its back? There must be more than 20,000,000 subscribers to the three Liberty Loans, and every one of them has given a firm pledge of support. They will "see it through." They are our unconquerable reserves, not only against foreign foes but against destructive agitations and propaganda at home. The apostles of social revolution and overthrow can hope for no success among the millions of Liberty bond holders. Every one of them is a friend of order, a supporter of the Government that can guarantee the security of life and property. A worker in the cause of socialism once declared that he never could do anything with the man who owned his own house and rented the upper story. The great army of Liberty bond owners are in the same position, they have enrolled in the conservative, the preserving, class, they are stanch friends and defenders of existing institutions, they have no ear or liking for preachments of upheaval and overthrow.

These $10,000,000,000 of Liberty bonds in the hands of the people are a guarantee of national stability and permanence.

THE BUILDING ZONE CRISIS.

The presumption is that Baron ASTOR is sufficiently informed of his own interest to believe strongly that the construction of a business front on a Madison Avenue block would be to his advantage, and to the advantage of the city through the increase of the tax values immediately concerned. But that is only partly stating the case. The erection of a business block in a strictly residential district may as well be a detriment to the residential district as a benefit to the business district. The question of the block improvement cannot be considered settled until there is taken into consideration what may be the effect on the length of the residential avenue as well as on the block and side streets adjacent. If the avenue should suffer more than the block would be improved, there would be a balance of detriment to public interests more important than the benefit to either litigant.

There is at least a threat of that in the antagonism between the decisions on the subject of the Board of Estimate, which drafted the ordinance, and the Board of Standards, which created an exception to it. If the exception shall be confirmed, there would be a check to the public regulation of the use of localities in the city, and there would be no way of reserving for specific uses the regions best adapted to them. The city, therefore, could be "saved" only by a series of "Save New York" movements, or by the creation of covenants like the Murray Hill covenant. Neither public spirit nor the courts would be so good a guardian of public interests as the zone regulations which are now attacked by a blow that may not be fatal, but which invites others that would be so. The interests of the city concerned in the matter are great enough to demand definite settlement by the highest judicial interpretation which can be had.

THE COMING PEACE DRIVE.

Even more dangerous than the great offensive in Picardy will be the peace offensive Germany is about to launch. The first was only directed against resolute men with arms in their hands. The second will be directed against the spirit of the peoples at home; against all of them. Most of them are resolute, as resolute as the soldiers who have brought the armed offensive to a halt; some are irresolute, some are timid, and far more are gullible, credulous. That is why the coming peace offensive is more dangerous than the armed offensive. It will be repelled, but it will be repelled by the resolute and clear-sighted among Americans, Englishmen, Frenchmen, and Italians, who will have to fight on two fronts simultaneously: who will have to fight against agents of the German peace poison and against the gullible and credulous in their own countries.

One thing which will make the fight hard is the incurable, or at any rate not yet cured, habit of regarding these periodical peace offensives as subjects of discussion, matters of opinion, things on which men may reasonably differ. They would not so regard the advance of a German army, and they have not yet discovered that a German peace campaign is no more a campaign for peace than the advance of a German army is. It is a military manoeuvre, with a definite military object. That object is not the attainment of peace; it is the disorganization of the home front. Just as the Kaiser struck at Amiens with the object of dividing the French and British armies, so he and his associates organize a peace offensive with the object of dividing and demoralizing the spirit of the people at home in America, England, France, and Italy. Both campaigns are ordered not by the Reichstag or the Chancellor, but by the General Staff, and one is a military movement exactly to the same extent as the other.

Of course Germany would like peace, but peace is not the object of her peace offensives. Their object is victory. She would like peace, but not without victory, and while one way of obtaining victory is to defeat FOCH in the field, another way is to disorganize his support in the home countries. The peace offensive was sure to come, but it was not looked for until late in the Summer, after Germany had got as far as she could go in the field. The signs that it is coming much sooner suggest that she has already got that far, contrary to her expectations. But victory she must have, and if it cannot be obtained in the field it must be obtained by the so-called peace campaign, which is not a campaign for peace but for German victory.

These are things which it would be well for good Americans to remember when the peace offensive begins, and when they are assailed with plausible arguments by gullible or designing neighbors.

SIGNS OF A RENEWED OFFENSIVE

According to the German military critic, Major ENDRES, General FOCH in using his reserves is embarrassed by having to deal with three aims or purposes of the enemy's strategy, which are to "roll up the English front to the north," to "shut off" the British Army by an advance to Abbeville at the mouth of the Somme, and to isolate the French Army on the Aisne and in Champagne by a "drive" for Paris. Thus, in the view of Major ENDRES, General FOCH must be ready at all times to reinforce the British in the north and the French in the south in an attempt to frustrate these three designs of the enemy, and he cannot employ his reserves in one command to execute a counteroffensive anywhere on a large scale. The conclusion of the German critic is:

> FOCH has reached his post too late, and is deprived of the strategic initiative. He can only raise his shield to parry the blows while HINDENBURG strikes with the sword.

There was a certain plausibility in this theory before the Germans were brought to a standstill in the Ypres sector because their divisions were shot to pieces. So long as they could drive ahead, taking one town or height after another, General FOCH was denied the initiative, and a diversion on another part of the line was not to be hazarded. But the moment the German offensive was stopped in its tracks the opportunity came to the allied Commander in Chief to take the initiative, if he should so elect. He judged that the time had not come. He preferred that the Germans should continue to attack, as their losses were bound to be much heavier than his own.

It is now estimated that the British have lost 250,000 men since the great offensive was launched on March 21. Obviously the German casualties have far exceeded that total, because the British were always on the defensive, and concentrated their field, machine gun, and rifle fire on the enemy advancing in successive waves. The Germans have tried to cover up their losses. On April 9, 11, and 12, no less than 265 trains of wounded were counted on the Namur-Liége railway. Hospitals, convents, schools, and factories in Belgium, according to a newspaper at The Hague, are "packed" with German soldiers put out of action.

In the end of April the casualty list of VON ARNIM'S army in the assault on the hills west of Kemmel was so terrible that a significant silence fell on the battered German lines. There is reason to believe from French and British reports of the intensity of the fighting that it was the most desperate and bloody of the whole war. The attempt "to roll up the English front to the north," to quote Major ENDRES, had ended in disaster. General FOCH'S embarrassment at that part of the line was no longer serious; he could give his attention to the Béthune sector and to the German design to cut off the French front on the Aisne and in Champagne from Paris. His own strategy comprised nothing more than the killing of two or three Germans for every Frenchman who had to die. He was in no hurry to seize the initiative. There would be time enough for it when accumulating losses had impaired the fighting spirit of the German Army and depressed its commanders.

General FOCH has had to wait more than a week for the next move of the enemy. Meanwhile the defenses of the French and British have been strengthened, reserves have been sent into the line, and guns and ammunition have been brought up. Early yesterday morning the Germans began to prepare the way for another advance of their infantry by an "intense bombardment" from Locre to the south of Ypres; and "between the Forest of Nieppe and Meteren" there was also heavy firing. The German attack in the region of Locon, north of Béthune, which followed was completely repulsed by the British. Until the action develops, it cannot be known whether the enemy's design is to force the British out of Ypres, by closing in from the south, or to make a "drive" for the supply railway connecting Hazebrouck with that British coign of vantage, a movement that might be attempted without reducing the hills west of Kemmel. The description "between the Forest of Nieppe and Meteren" leaves a good deal to be desired. The railway from Armentières to Hazebrouck runs between Meteren and the Forest; north of the railway the country is hilly, but south of it there are no salient elevations.

Apparently, it is in the Ypres sector that the offensive is to be resumed, but some of the experts have steadily maintained that the Germans, having suffered so costly a reverse at Kemmel and Voormezeele, would now strike again in the Amiens sector. There is some color for this view in artillery activity along the Avre River.

GOOD AND EVIL IN OUR AMSTERDAM.

Whenever woman suffrage was beaten at the polls in any State, it was the artless habit of the feminist champions to bewail the power of "the forces of evil," the wiles of the Serpent, the victory of the saloons. Since the April local option elections in thirty-nine cities of this State, the feminists, who won last year by Socialist aid, have had little or nothing to say about the influence of the Gilded Gehennae. Some of the professional anti-saloonists have even laid on the women responsibility for the wetness of Little Falls, Syracuse, and some other cities, where, they say, the men voted Dry and the women Wet.

There seemed to be no way of proving or disproving these assertions, improbable as they are, and evidently dripping with disappointment, for the Drys, or many of them, had built such high hopes on the filmy assumption that most of the woman voters would seek to annul the charter of the Black Valley Railroad. The woman vote was divided substantially as the man vote, most of us said. In the City of Amsterdam separate voting machines recorded the ballots of the petticoat and of the trousers. The Utica Observer supplies us with the machine-made record of the Inferior and of the Superior Sex of Amsterdam on the four permissions and prohibitions of rum submitted to the voters:

> Saloons—Men, 2,950 yes; 1,780 no. Women, 3,304 yes; 2,165 no.
> Stores—Men, 3,327 yes; 1,720 no. Women, 2,978 yes; 2,121 no.
> Drug Stores—Men, 3,378 yes; 1,651 no. Women, 3,122 yes; 2,030 no.
> Hotels—Men, 3,329 yes; 1,713 no. Women, 2,959 yes; 2,100 no.

The women voted about like the men; on the first "proposition" they were both wetter and drier than their dethroned tyrants. The Dry feminine strength was substantially the same in all four workings of the machine. Apparently, the Wet women were a little less enthusiastic or not quite so good performers on the machine.

PROTECT THE NATIONAL PARKS!

By act of Congress of Aug. 16, 1916, the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior was established to promote and regulate the use of national monuments, parks, and reservations "so as to conform to" their "fundamental purpose." That purpose, the act recites in an impeccable definition, "is to "conserve the scenery and the natural and historic objects and the "wild life therein and to provide for "the enjoyment of the same in such "manner and by such means as will "leave them unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations."

Yet this same act contains a curious self-contradiction. It permits the Secretary of the Interior to issue grazing permits in these parks and reservations, except the Yellowstone Park, "when in his judgment" such livestock grazing "is not detrimental to the primary purpose" of the park.

By what unjustifiable concession to commercialism or utilitarianism was this license to impairment, this opportunity to injure the "fundamental purpose," inserted in this charter of the national pleasure grounds? The insidious temptation to hurt the parks, to sell their beauty for a little money, is in that provision. In the hands of a careless or Philistine Secretary of the Interior, somebody the antipodes of Mr. LANE, this licensed grazing might ruin the beauty of a national park, of several national parks. The Federal Government is a trustee for "future generations." It must not injure the property.

THE TIMES agrees generally and in detail with the resolutions passed by the directors of The Friends of Our National Parks. Congress should cut from the National Park Service act the provision authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to grant grazing permits in national parks, and should insert in the several acts by which the several parks were established a prohibition of commercial grazing. Meanwhile and specifically > we ask the National Park Service to refuse all grazing permits in the national parks now and hereafter. We specify that sheep are to be kept out of Mount Rainier and cattle out of Sequoia and Mesa Verde.

The parks are "a thing of beauty" and "a joy forever" for the people. So must they be maintained, not spoiled, unthinkingly, for the sake of a few dollars. Senators and Representatives, please notice.

AVERTING A COAL CRISIS.

A stitch in time saves nine. It might be well for the Director General of Railways to keep this homely adage in mind. The National Coal Association fears another fuel shortage next Winter. It declares that the operators in the area east of the Mississippi, which produces more than 90 per cent. of the country's bituminous coal, are of the opinion that "unless the mines "are furnished sufficient cars to enable them to increase materially "their present rate of production" conditions will be worse than those that tied up industry and caused great suffering to domestic consumers in January and February last.

The present rate of production holds out no promise of full bins to the domestic consumers, who were recently assured by Fuel Administrator GARFIELD that if they would put in their coal this Summer they would keep warm next Winter. He urged them all to make their wants known, and he supplied retailers with blanks which consumers were to fill out, so that the Fuel Administration would know how much coal should be set aside to heat their houses. The mines were to produce the quantity during the Spring, and the domestic consumer having been provided for, Mr. GARFIELD could then turn his attention to the war industries, the factories and other large users.

But, according to the National Coal Association, the output is not what it should be when the mines "are working at top speed to produce stocks "for storage against the needs of next "Fall and Winter." The following statement is disquieting:

> In the face of the heaviest demand for coal in the country's history, the mines have been so hindered by insufficient car supply that they have made little, if any, headway over last year's record, a record which fell 50,000,000 tons short of meeting the nation's demand.

Owing to the unsettled controversy over the price of coal last Summer, for which Government officers were largely responsible, consumers, who usually put in their Winter supply in July and August, delayed buying and there was no general movement of coal during those months. Deliveries by the railroads were not made until September and later. Then came the freight blockade, due mainly to Government priority orders on war material; and the coal which the poorer consumer bought by the ton or half ton was distributed only with great difficulty; he got it by driblets, and could not keep his family warm or the kitchen stove always lighted. Great suffering occurred. The country wants no such experience again. Nor does it want any more heatless Mondays, with their loss of wages, which was as bad as a lockout to millions of workers.

If the National Coal Association is right about the deficiency of cars to move coal, the Director General of Railways should lose no time in going over his traffic schedule and providing the cars needed. It may be a difficult problem to solve, but solved it must be. There seems to be no doubt that the railroads are hauling a record amount of freight; they are also transporting thousands of soldiers to ports of embarkation every day. But there must be no coal shortage next Winter. Now is the time to sift out priority orders that are not imperative and to make readjustments in order to safeguard the war program while insuring a steady flow of coal to wholesalers and retailers. Three months from this time it will be too late.

THE KELLY BATTLEFIELDS TOUR.

Mr. MELVILLE CLYDE KELLY, Independent, of Braddock, represents the Thirtieth Pennsylvania District in the Sixty-fifth Congress. He was elected "on Washington, Roosevelt-Progressive, Democratic, and Prohibitionist "tickets." Evidently he covers a considerable range of opinion in his district. His ideas must be liberal and large. That supposition is confirmed by the resolution which he introduced in the House on Friday for the dispatch to Europe of a Congressional commission of twenty-five Senators and fifty Representatives. These amateurs are to study, investigate, or what not, the progress of the war.

There are seventy-five billion better uses for money than to give seventy-five members of Congress a holiday with "thrills" in Europe. They would be an insufferable nuisance, in everybody's way. It will be a great deal cheaper, and exactly as self-beneficial, for Congressmen to investigate the progress of the war in moving picture shows.

Junketing springs eternal in the politician's breast.

ART NOTES.

Paintings Showing Nature's Models for Camouflage Students.

At the Knoedler Galleries is an exceedingly interesting exhibition of paintings by Abbott Thayer designed to illustrate the principle of concealing coloration as it is found in the animal kingdom. In a book written by Mr. Thayer and his son, Gerald Thayer, nine or ten years ago, the subject of the laws of disguise through color and pattern among birds and animals was treated in great detail. In his introduction Mr. Thayer said: "The entire matter has been in the hands of the wrong custodians. Appertaining solely to animals, it naturally has been considered a part of the geologist's province. But it properly belongs to the realm of pictorial art and can be interpreted only by painters. For it deals wholly in optical illusion, and this is the very gist of a painter's life. He is born with a sense of it; and from his cradle to his grave his eyes, wherever they turn, are unceasingly at work on it—and his pictures live by it." The book received much attention from English and French authorities, and when the question of camouflage came up in England Mr. Thayer was sent for and asked to direct the efforts of the camouflage corps at work on naval disguises. This he did until his health failed, and he returned to America, but he still keeps in touch with England by sending drawings, diagrams, and diagrammatic uniforms as models for the camouflage artists to work upon.

The present series of pictures are designed to show how the presence in an animal's coat or a bird's plumage of the colors of its environment serve to conceal it, even where it is in itself a brilliant and gayly colored object. One of the pictures is made with the feathers from the Himalayan monal pheasant and represents a landscape in the Himalayas against which the vivid hues of the plumage would be practically invisible. In another picture are numerous figures of several kinds of American warbler which are indistinguishable from the background until they are revealed by the device of placing a stencil over them. The studies are shown in New York for the first time. The exhibition lasts until May 11.

Art Alliance of America.

Mural decorations by pupils of the Art Institute of Chicago are on exhibition in the galleries of the Art Alliance of America, 10 East Forty-seventh Street, from May 1 to May 8. There is an advanced class at the Art Institute of Chicago under John W. Norton, where practical problems are executed, and the work shown was done in that class for use in various public buildings. There are also photographs of mural decorations actually in place. These decorations include fifteen panels by Elizabeth Gibson for the library of the Lake View High School, Chicago; those for the Mozart School are "Michael Angelo in the Medici Gardens," by Helen Finch, and "Industry," by Denison Budd. The decorations for the lecture room at the Chicago Museum are by Bertram Hartman, and the studies for "Hiawatha," by Charles Wilimosky are for the Felsenthal School of Chicago. There are also panels by Ezra Winter and Eugene F. Savage, both winners of scholarships to the American Academy at Rome. These decorations were brought to New York by the School Art League of this city, which believes that it will be most stimulating to circulate them in New York high schools. After the close of the exhibition at the Art Alliance they will be shown at the Washington Irving High School.

The National Arts Club.

The exhibition of war posters will continue in the galleries of the National Arts Club for about two weeks.

The club has arranged to exhibit a large, important canvas by Edwin H. Blashfield, which has been accepted by the Government for a colossal poster. This will be on view and may be seen by the public daily from 10 A. M. to 6 P. M. for the two weeks.

PEACE HINTS.

People in London Expecting That Move When Drive Failed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few days ago a letter was received from a prominent New York woman who has been living in London for nearly three years. She says:

> After Germany fails in this offensive she will put forth peace terms. You see if she doesn't. Only the American men who got over in time will see any of this show. * * * We did not come up to the crucial hour, and no amount of hurry and willingness now can wipe out that fact. I tell you again, after this offensive you will see peace pour-parlers.

This letter was written on the 16th of April, when the big drive was at its height. And this morning, when the news from the front indicates that it is surely failing, we get the prophesied talk of "peace!" H. S.

New York, May 2, 1918.

FINNS AND GERMANS.

Majority of the People Resent the New Invasion of Kultur.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the May 4 issue of your valuable paper the following statement is made: "German influence has always been strong in Finland, due to the fact that before the war thousands of Finns went annually over into East Prussia for the logging season and returned with marks and German kultur," and the inference is being drawn that large masses of the Finnish people thus may be regarded as sympathetic toward German dominance of Finland.

The above information has no basis in fact. Finnish laborers never worked in Germany to any considerable extent. The only acquaintance the Finnish workers have with the German kultur is in the factories of Finland where imported German superintendents and foremen have made themselves and that brand of German kultur bitterly hated because of the unbridled arrogance displayed by such Germans toward laborers. Some of the bitterest strikes in Finland were based on demands to remove obnoxious German foremen and superintendents.

The vast majority of the Finnish people have absolutely no sympathy with the Prussian police kultur. The Swedish intellectual element in Finland, which is the leader of the pro-German "White Guard" movement, on the other hand, has always had close relations, intellectual and commercial, with Germany, and the German invasion of Finland has been invited by that element. There is no doubt that the great majority of the Finnish laborers bitterly resent the German control of Finland and there will be no peace in the country as long as any part of the German army remains there.

SANTERI NUORTEVA.

Miss Richrath and Vassar.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to the editorial article in today's NEW YORK TIMES referring to Miss Richrath's internment, I beg to say that I am in cordial agreement with your general sentiments. I think it only fair to the college, however, that it should be pointed out to you that Miss Richrath's dismissal from Vassar College was not "accelerated" by the Federal authorities, but, on the contrary, postponed. The letter of Special Agent Wallace that he gave out on Wednesday is complete confirmation of this, as it states that the college authorities took no action at the request of the Department of Justice in order to facilitate observation of Miss Richrath's associations. It should be noted also that no charge against Miss Richrath has been made public which refers to any act or word of hers within the college.

I am thoroughly convinced of the fairness of the officials of the Department of Justice and believe their action to be absolutely just, but the college has suffered from the inferences which have been drawn from the results of its desire to co-operate with the agents of the Attorney General, and I feel it necessary to make this statement.

H. N. MacCRACKEN,
President Vassar College.

Irish Loyalty.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The fearless, outspoken utterances of Lord Denbigh, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES today, must bring relief to the hearts of loyal, patriotic Catholics. At last a protest from a fine Catholic layman! Allow me, however, to call the attention of your readers to a pamphlet issued by the National Security League, written by the Rev. Mgr. James E. Cassidy, V. G., entitled "What Fight Ye For," the answer of a Catholic priest, the son of a Fenian, to the treasonable talk of "Prussian" Irishmen. Quoting from it: "There are too many of ancestry like to mine, Irish-Americans, if you will, whose judgment is blinded by their hatred toward England. Let them beware lest their animosity toward England be interpreted as disloyalty to the United States, and God forbid that there should be any so base and low and blinded as to wish to strike at the heart of England through the soul of their own country."

ALICE WARREN.

New York, April 28, 1918.

One of the Y. M. C. A. Survivors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Yesterday's TIMES contained an account of the torpedoing of a ship off the English Coast which had on board Y. M. C. A. representatives and others. You can imagine how the news appealed to us here in Wappingers Falls, when the fact became known that one of the members of the Y. M. C. A. group was our fellow townsman and recently Principal of our village high school, E. C. Pullen. We know Mr. Pullen well for the many excellent qualities which have endeared him to us, and it is with a feeling of joy and thankfulness that we read that such a one has been spared to go on and take up a work which he is qualified to do and fulfill a mission he has long desired to undertake—serving his country in a practical and substantial way.

ALBERT HIBBERT.

For an Agricultural Draft.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the difficulty that the farmers have in finding men to assist in their work, and in view of the thousands of men between the ages of 17 and 45 who are doing nothing apparently, for they fill the vaudeville and moving picture theatres every afternoon in the week, and this is proof absolute that they are creatures of leisure, might it not be wise, in order that benefit shall be conferred upon these men as well as upon the farmer, thus enabling indolence and indifference to win the war, at home, for the Government of the United States to call an agricultural draft at once? I see no reason why this lazy class should not be used in solving the food problem; it will be the prolongation of life to some of the derelicts in patriotism. ERASTUS WALKER.

Wallingford, Conn., May 15, 1918.

Mr. Gibbs's Message.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Please let me say my gratitude to THE NEW YORK TIMES and pay a tribute to Philip Gibbs. The horrors and shames of war flash back among us, a ghastly submerging tide, and but for the upheld torch of a writer like Gibbs we might not see the splendors that ride thereon. Merely to be alive at a time when the price he tells of (May 2) was paid for "forty-eight hours outside the Forest of Nieppe" is to be pledged to our share in a glorious humanity. But for his flaming torch we might not know these things—or know them only as war facts, not as kindling coals of truth to set our own lives aflame.

So, God bless Gibbs and his NEW YORK TIMES column. EMMA SHERIDAN FRY.

PEACE.

Not peace of the soul that yields, surrender of those who tire,
When the one demand is ease, and rest is the heart's desire,
But the peace of those who stand in the steadfast trust of right—
Peace in the heart of the storm, in the thick of the fight.

Not peace of the lotus fields, where the listless dreamers lie,
Hearing the lilt of streams, watching an empty sky;
But peace of the moveless rock, where the deafening surges smite—
Peace in the heart of the storm, in the deep of the night.

ARTHUR L. SALMON.

SECRETARY BAKER ON SOLDIERS' PARCELS.

He Asks Cheerful Compliance with the New Rules for the Sake of the Much Needed Cargo Space.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You were good enough to publish a letter from me with regard to the regulations limiting the right to send packages to the boys on the other side under the new postal regulations adopted at the request of the Secretary of War. So many people sympathize with the object of my letter that I felt justified in writing to the Secretary of War, and I have, under date of April 25, a letter from Mr. Baker, to which I think you should give publicity because it is so kindly and reasonable and explains the object of this regulation as a matter appealing to the loyalty of the boys themselves as well as of their parents and friends, and I would like to have the information therein contained reach those to whom my letter made its appeal. HENRY W. JESSUP.

[Inclosure.]
War Department.
Washington, April 25, 1918.

Mr. Henry W. Jessup, New York City.

My Dear Mr. Jessup: Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of April 20, and the inclosed clipping of your letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

In reply thereto you are informed that the issue of the instructions quoted in your published letter was given very careful consideration by this department, and was made necessary by the largely increasing volume of parcels being sent to individuals of our expeditionary force. These shipments consisted of many unnecessary articles, and increased as our forces abroad increased, took up valuable space in vessels, and overtaxed to a very large extent the personnel and means of transportation assigned to handle and distribute the mail upon its arrival in France.

With additional troops going over and additional space being required to maintain the entire force, it was considered necessary to limit to absolute necessities the parcels for which cargo space was allotted.

Our troops are in France to carry on a tremendous task. To perform that task they require a vast quantity of supplies for their work, in addition to supplies for their maintenance. There has been allotted to the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and American Library Association the only space which it is considered can be spared from shipments of strictly military supplies. In making this allotment every consideration has been given to the needs of our men, as they are met by the issues of supplies by the Government, and to their comfort as provided for by articles distributed by the organizations named.

You are doubtless aware that it is necessary to utilize every available ship, and all of the space on every ship, for the transportation of supplies which are necessary for our forces in the field, and every cubic foot of space given to supplies which are not essential served only to prolong the war, and, further, the diverting of transportation in France to the transfer of mail, in addition to that which is now permitted, would be a most serious handicap to our army.

This is a time when sacrifices are necessary on the part of every one, and I am quite sure that when our people understand the necessity for the instructions on this subject they will feel that, in complying therewith, they are adding to what they have already done toward a successful end.

Regretting that it is inadvisable at this time to make any change in the existing orders, and thanking you for this opportunity to state the position of the department on the subject, I beg to remain, yours very sincerely,

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

I. W. W. DEFECTIVES.

Many Members of This Notorious Organization Found to be Subnormal

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just read with great interest your editorial article in today's issue on "Our Bolsheviki," by which name you designate the members of the I. W. W.

I believe there is one characteristic of these people which is not generally known to the public and which should be considered in dealing with them and in making legislation to curb their vicious activities. In conversation with an eminent sociologist of this State, I was told that recently a study of these people was made by a social worker well suited to the task. This man lived with the I. W. W. members as much as possible, visited their meetings, and made a careful study of them, coming to the conclusion that most of them belong to the class of mental defectives. Most of them show a mentality but little in advance of that of the higher types of the feeble-minded housed in our various institutions. They are men who have drifted from job to job, have never been able to keep at work in one place long because of their roving disposition or their inefficiency. Many of them are confirmed alcoholics, the desire for drink being the result rather than the cause of their mental condition. Many of them have become discouraged in the struggle for existence in competition with laboring men of normal minds and have become easy victims of long-haired fanatics, each with his own crackbrained scheme for the reformation of society.

I believe that society should frankly recognize the limitations of these men and treat them as we would any other feeble-minded who constitute a menace to the social order if left at liberty. The imbecile and the moron we do not hesitate to shut up, and we should consider the statement of such principles as form the basis of the I. W. W. organization as sufficient reason for depriving a man of his liberty and putting him at work under careful and stern supervision so that he might be of some use to society as well as to himself. As in the institutions for the feeble-minded much good work is done by the inmates on farms and in other forms of productive labor, many of these I. W. W. members can be made useful, but they cannot be left free to promulgate their crazy doctrines.

Let us consider them as sick people, have them examined by psychologists to determine their degree of mentality, and if they are found to be subnormal shut them up in farm colonies of industrial plants under guard and see what we can do with them.

We in America are too prone to lock the doors after our horses are stolen. Would it not be possible to deal with this I. W. W. menace in a sane and scientific manner and break it up before too much damage has been done?

Simplified Censoring.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Francis Vinton Greene's article in your issue of April 28 I notice a slight and perhaps pardonable error. He states that the number of officers engaged in opening soldiers' letters and obliterating what they imagine ought not to have been written to families or friends thousands of miles away would easily furnish all the officers necessary for several divisions of fighting troops.

As a matter of fact, the system of censoring soldiers' letters in the British and Imperial forces is entirely carried on by regimental officers. Thus, the Lieutenant censors the letters of the men in his own particular platoon, while his own and those of the Captains are supposed to be censored by the commanding officer. As a matter of fact, the commanding officer puts his subordinates on their honor not to infringe the rules after explaining to them carefully what should not be communicated, so this branch of the censorship does not involve any special waste of time.

I know this because I personally have connections who are officers at the front and several other members of our staff are in a similar position. One of the most amusing chapters of Ian Hay Beith's book, "The First Hundred Thousand," deals with the work of the Lieutenants who censor the communications.

It is a small matter, but might lead to some misapprehension among your readers.

So well do the men understand the system that, although I have seen numerous soldiers' letters since the war began, an instance of an obliterated phrase is very rare indeed.

International Aspects of Sauerkraut.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Anent the letter in today's TIMES on kapovsta versus sauerkraut, why not, since the delicacy itself seems destined to remain a fixture in our midst, range it with our old-timer, cold slaw, and call it sour slaw? Slaw, whatever its philology, conveys to our native intelligence the idea of shredded cabbage, and sour emphatically fits the quality of the dish's flavor. In such vital questions it is well to dip into the future. We might some day find ourselves at war with Russia, and then, where goes kapovsta while its savory namesake stays ever with us?

A LETTER OF THANKS

To All Those Who Helped the Fund for Disabled French Soldiers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We came to New York six months ago to devote our energies to the task of preaching the good word in favor of "La Protection du Réformé No. 2."

This great war relief work, presided over by Mr. Millerand, was then absolutely unknown here. No one in America imagined that in France 400,000 disabled soldiers retired No. 2, that is without pension, were in urgent need of constant care and immediate pecuniary help; that it was imperative that the glorious wastage of the battles of the Marne, Yser, and Verdun should not be allowed to become an irretrievable loss to the future economic life of the nation.

These soldiers of France had given all their valor and strength to their country, which they were ever ready to die for, but death had not claimed them and they were cast aside, broken in health and spirit, to endure a miserable life.

The purpose of our mission was to obtain for them immediate means of existence and care and an assured future.

New York responded to our appeal with a generosity that touched our hearts deeply; we are anxious to express our gratitude in the columns of your paper, ever devoted to the French cause, which has undoubtedly contributed much by its constant efforts to the feeling of friendship and admiration for France, so manifest all over the United States.

We offer our thanks to the citizens of New York and vicinity who attended our lectures in such numbers. In the persons of its two executive Presidents, Mrs. Newbold LeRoy Edgar and Mrs. Robert Bacon, we thank our American committee for its devoted help, so full of self-sacrifice and spontaneous charity; our task was made easy through its valuable services.

We thank all the friends of France who answered our call. We thank Mr. Jules Ratowski, Director General of New York's Salon of Modern French Paintings and representative of the exhibitors in the United States, for having given the total amount of the exhibition's receipts to our fund, placed under the able control of Mr. Willard V. King, President of the Columbia Trust Company. We thank both our eminent Consul General, Mr. Gaston Liébert, and our Consul, Mr. Goiran, and the press for having lent us the powerful aid of your publicity. Above all, our thanks go to the school children of New York for their admirable response to the words of Mr. Arthur Somers, Chairman of the Board of Education, and of Mr. Straubenmuller. We unite them all in a thought of affectionate gratitude. A French proverb which says, "Little brooks make big rivers" has been realized here, and the "penny" each child gave for the soldiers of France produced the wonderful sum of $16,000.

Dear school boys and girls of New York, in all the mourning homes of France your little brothers and sisters "over there" will bless you and remember you in their daily prayers for victory.

Before leaving on a trip for California, in pursuance of our mission, once more we thank you all and bid you not farewell, but "au revoir," for we return again to this hospitable city.

Liberty Anthem Was Sung.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly allow me to correct the statement made in this morning's paper in regard to the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church? The congregation did sing the Liberty Anthem, and stood at attention while the national anthems of the Allies were played. The sermon by Dean Charles Ryerson Brown was a powerful and most clear statement of the moral and spiritual position which the Allies have taken, with an earnest appeal for self-sacrifice and devoted service to the great cause in which we are engaged. Patriotic services were held in the Sunday School, and all of the scholars have bought Liberty bonds or War Savings Stamps. In the men's Bible class the importance of buying Liberty bonds was earnestly urged upon all of the men of the class, and each one is faithfully doing his part.

In the evening more than 170 men enlisted in the service of the Government were entertained at supper. A handsome flag was dedicated in the room which is used for their meeting, and a most helpful service was conducted, in which a large number of the soldiers and sailors took part. Meetings of this character for soldiers and sailors are held every Sunday evening, and many testimonials have been given of their great helpfulness. The branch Sunday School conducted a patriotic open air meeting in Sixty-third Street, at which more than 800 children sang patriotic songs, and appropriate addresses were made. With this record of the day's services, it does not seem right to have the statement published that the Liberty Anthem was not sung. This church has more than 170 men and women enlisted in the nation's service, and it can be counted upon to conform to every patriotic duty.

JAMES PALMER,
Associate Minister.

PLAN FOR RELIEF OF CHURCHES OF FRANCE

United Committee on Christian Service Organized by Protestants Here.

DR. MACFARLAND CHAIRMAN

Sum of $14,550 Contributed to American Military Hospital at Neuilly, France.

The United Committee on Christian Service for Relief in France and Belgium, among the members of which are some of the most noted ministers and laymen of the Protestant Church in this country, has been organized by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. The Chairman of the new committee is the Rev. Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, who is also the General Secretary of the Federal Council. On the Executive Committee, among others, are the Rev. Dr. Frank Mason North, the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, the Rev. Dr. John Y. Atkinson, William Jay Schieffelin, Mrs. James C. Colgate, William A. Harbison, Mrs. Robert E. Speer, Mrs. George E. Dimock, and Professor William Adams Brown. The headquarters office of the committee is at 105 East Twenty-second Street. Alfred R. Kimball is the Treasurer.

The following statement outlining the purposes of the committee was issued yesterday by Dr. Macfarland:

The United Committee on Christian Service for Relief in France and Belgium was created by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in response to an appeal from the Protestant churches of France and Belgium. During the course of the war several representatives of the French and Belgian churches have visited America, and Dr. Macfarland, the General Secretary of the Federal Council, has investigated conditions in France. These churches—descendants of the Huguenots—have, to this day, maintained the Huguenot spirit of democracy and freedom. Though not large in numbers, they still exert a powerful influence upon French civilization.

The war is, however, threatening their existence. The larger and richer churches are in the devastated regions of France. Many of these have been destroyed by the German invasion. Half of their pastors are in the army. Sixty of them have already paid the supreme sacrifice. To maintain the spirit of these people in this their hour of trial, it is important to maintain their religious services, as well as to give material aid.

This appeal to Christian America has come from all the people, for they have united in a common committee to do their work in unity. On this committee are represented fourteen French and Belgian religious and war relief organizations. The various agencies in America working in their behalf are co-operating with the United Committee here.

The United Committee has a threefold purpose:

1. To conserve and develop the evangelical churches and missions in France and Belgium.
2. To further the interchange of thought and life among the religious forces of these three nations.
3. To render moral and financial support to the evangelical institutions and to the people of France and Belgium.

These contributions of $100 or more to the fund of the committee have been acknowledged:

P. G. McIntire	$1,000
W. R. Hill	1,000
James Douglas	1,000
Mrs. Willard Saulsbury	1,000
William Bingham	1,000
W. A. Harbison	800
E. S. Harkness	500
Mrs. S. V. Harkness	500
W. W. Willett	250
Mrs. R. O. Fuller	100
G. W. Brown	100
D. S. Dodge	100
F. E. Dussell	100

The American Red Cross.

Representatives of all Red Cross Chapters in New York State will attend a conference which will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria next Wednesday. This will be the third State Red Cross conference held in the Atlantic Division within a week. The first was held last Wednesday, when the Connecticut chapters met in Hartford, and the second yesterday, when delegates from the chapters in New Jersey met in Atlantic City.

With the opening of the New York State Conference on Wednesday virtually one year will have elapsed since President Wilson appointed the War Council of the National Red Cross. During the intervening period the Red Cross has shown an extraordinary growth. The increase in chapter activities has been in proportion to the increase in membership.

During this time also more than $90,000,000 of the first $100,000,000 war fund has been appropriated. The public soon will be called on to contribute another $100,000,000 to enable the Red Cross to continue its work at home and abroad and to finance new projects in the interests of a victorious culmination of the war.

The New York County Chapter, 389 Fifth Avenue, acknowledges these new gifts of $100 or more to its war fund:

Federal Food Board	$3,150
Mrs. W. S. Sullivan	1,300
Henry P. Myers	1,000
British-Canadian Patriotic Fund	826
Chauffeurs, Modern Garage	726

Canadian Club Fund.

The fund which the Canadian Club of New York, the office of which is the Hotel Biltmore, is raising for the relief of the dependents of British and Canadian soldiers in this country has been increased to $21,458. The club seeks to raise a fund of $100,000. New subscriptions of $100 or more follow:

The New York Committee of the Fatherless Children of France, of which Miss Luisita Leland of 563 Park Avenue is Chairman and Alexander J. Hemphill of 140 Broadway the Treasurer, has collected to date over $404,908. This work of rehabilitating France by saving her children, Miss Leland says in a recent statement, is one that appeals to all who love her, and who realize that except for the valor of these orphans' fathers, we should be caring for millions of our American soldiers' children by this time. It costs $36.50 a year to keep a child with its mother and enable her to rebuild her home. Donations of over $100, received in the past week, follow:

British War Relief.

The British War Relief Association, Inc., 542 Fifth Avenue, New York, of which Major Louis Livingston Seaman, M. D., is President, has received the following letter from John Q. Barton of Ryde, Isle of Wight:

I beg to acknowledge with many thanks the receipt of supplies from the British War Relief Association, Inc., New York, U. S. A. I can assure you your kindly thought in sending these articles is very much appreciated. The articles are now being exhibited (for a few days before being sent overseas) in the shop window of the depot, and have been very much admired for the excellence of the workmanship.

This Ryde Depot has already supplied over 200,000 articles and your contribution will cement the cordial relations that have always existed between America and the Isle of Wight.

The British War Relief Association solicits donations of money, these funds being applied to the purchase of materials which are made into surgical dressings, bandages, &c. Henry Clews is the Treasurer.

The Lafayette Fund.

The Lafayette Fund, which provides comfort kits costing $2 each for the soldiers fighting in the trenches of France, has collected to date $263,740. Recent gifts amounted to $1,960. Francis Roche, the Vanderbilt Hotel, is Treasurer of the fund. Gifts of $100, or more, follow:

Commission for Relief.

The Commission for Relief in Belgium, 165 Broadway, acknowledges a contribution of $5,219 from the San Francisco Committee for Relief in Belgium and France, the money to be expended by the following organizations and individuals in France and Belgium:

Antwerp Convalescent Hospital	$1,000
Mlle. Jacobs-Pauwels	500
Special donation for Lille	500
Le Lait Pour les Petits	200
Antwerp Ouvroir	800
Debiles-Duttom Memorial	100
Other Charities	200
California fund	594

The commission also acknowledges $500 from Mrs. Edwin B. Frost of Williams Bay, Wis., for Les Petites Abeilles, and $25 from Mrs. E. C. Means of Ashland, Ky., for the refugee children of Brussels. In addition to these gifts smaller gifts totaling $157 have been received.

The commission announces that the organizations named, as well as others, are deserving of liberal support, and that all are in great need of funds. The names of organizations and individuals may be had on application to the commission. Herbert Hoover is the Chairman and Alexander J. Hemphill the Treasurer of the commission.

Stage Women's War Relief.

The Stage Women's War Relief, 366 Fifth Avenue, of which Miss Rachel Crothers is the President and Mrs. Shelley Hull the Treasurer, has shipped an additional consignment of hospital and other relief supplies. The new shipment included 4,365 surgical dressings, knitted garments, wind-proof jackets, trench packets, and over 40,000 cigarettes. In addition to its other activities the committee maintains a canteen for soldiers and sailors at 17 West Thirty-seventh Street, and provides a vaudeville entertainment for them at the Playhouse, in West Forty-eighth Street, every Sunday night.

Charite Maternelle de Paris.

The American Fund of the Charite Maternelle de Paris, subscriptions to which should be sent to Mrs. Elizabeth Rutherford Stuyvesant, the Treasurer, at 32 Liberty Street, acknowledges new donations amounting to $112.

Franco-Serbian Hospital.

The fund for the maintenance of the Franco-Serbian Field Hospital of America has been increased by $1,719. Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins is the Chairman, and Henry B. Britton the Treasurer of this committee, the offices of which are at 25 West Thirtieth Street. The hospital is a field and clearing hospital for the Serbian Army, and is located at Banitza, Serbia. More ambulances and a truck are among the pressing needs of the institution. Gifts of $100 or more follow:

Emergency Italian Relief.

The Emergency Italian Relief Committee, Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard Chairman, has received a letter from Rome, from which the following extracts are taken:

"Picture to yourself every house in your city filled to overflowing with refugees; more pouring in day and night from the invaded districts. Many are half starved, all lack proper clothing. Your own larder is greatly depleted, yet you must share what remains with these unfortunates. For months breakfast among the civilian population has consisted of one cup of coffee and one slice of bread. There is no midday meal, and dinner is of the simplest. We do not look on this as a sacrifice—none is too great if only our brave Italians at the front have enough food to carry them to victory! We need your material help, and we need it at once. Do send clothing of every description for men, women, and children. Particularly, largest sizes of man's heavy boots."

Checks may be made payable to the Treasurer, Frederick L. Eldridge, and they, as well as donations of clothing, may be sent to headquarters, 16 West Thirty-ninth Street.

Central Relief Committee.

The Central Committee for the Relief of Jews Suffering Through the War, subscriptions to which should be sent to Harry Fischel, Treasurer, 51 Chambers Street, has received new gifts amounting to $38,694. Those of $100 or more follows:

War Babies' Cradle.

The following appeal on behalf of the War Babies' Cradle, 360 Madison Avenue, has been issued by Mrs. Jules S. Bache, the Treasurer of that fund:

Mrs. Jules S. Bache, Treasurer of the War Babies' Cradle, 360 Madison Avenue, is asking to have subscriptions renewed which were made by many people last year to the War Babies' Cradle Fund. Donation of babies' clothing is also solicited.

Mrs. Bache has received word from Countess de Hemptinne, who is in charge of the work in France, that the need grows more and more urgent. In Pas de Calais alone, the central point of the charity, 300 French babies will be born before January, and not a cent to help them.

Mme. de Hemptinne is now in charge of all the French maternity cases in that district, and all are dependent on the funds collected for the War Babies Cradle, which is now supervised by both the Civil and Military Ministry.

Mme. de Hemptinne has just returned from Havre, where the authorities have promised to facilitate the quick delivery of any cases of layettes or clothing which we can ship over. Mrs. Bache sent twenty cases two months ago, but the cry is "more and more."

Money or clothing may be sent direct to Mrs. Bache at 42 Broadway. Recent cash gifts amounted to $305, this amount including a check for $100 from J. Parke Channing.

Training France's Maimed.

The American Committee for Training in Suitable Trades the Maimed Soldiers of France, subscriptions to which should be sent to Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies, room 134, the Biltmore Hotel, has collected to date $397,470. These new gifts of $100, or over, are acknowledged:

Mrs. E. H. Harriman ...$1,000	Miss E. B. Ridenour ...$100

Food for France Fund.

The Food for France Fund, 10 East Fifty-eighth Street, of which Miss Carita Spencer is Chairman and Alexander J. Hemphill the Treasurer, shipped last week a large consignment of invalid foods to hospitals in France, as well as for the relief of destitute women and children in that country. The committee acknowledges new subscriptions amounting to $4,650.

American Students Committee.

The American Students Committee of the Ecole des Beaux-Arts, which is devoted to the immediate relief of the students of the Ecole des Beaux-Arts, and Julian's Academy who are serving their country at the front, and their families, has collected to date more than $48,000. The fund provides, as well, comfort kits consisting of sweaters, mufflers, socks, tobacco, &c., for the soldiers. Last week's receipts amounted to $835. Subscriptions should be sent to Henry R. Sedgwick, Treasurer, 107 East Thirty-seventh Street, New York.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY.

Classes Forming to Teach Women to be Hospital Aids.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A circular of information dated March 27, 1918, issued by the Medical Department, United States Army, says:

There is immediate need in our military hospitals for trained women to furnish forms of occupation to convalescents and to give patients the therapeutic value of activity. This will be particularly essential in the case of the disabled soldier.

It is with these needs in mind, and with the approval of the Surgeon General, United States Army, that arrangements are being completed to establish here on or about June 1 special classes for the training of reconstruction aids in occupational therapy.

There is a distinct field for this work, and it is the purpose in these special classes to study the problem and develop it under the ablest of instructors, so that those who graduate will not only have a practical understanding of what may be made in hospital wards that is worth making and has material as well as therapeutic value, but will be prepared to co-operate intelligently with the hospital authorities in restoring the patients to health and activity.

In addition to teaching handicrafts approved by the Surgeon General's office, and which include, among others, hand weaving, basketry, block printing, and simple wood carving, there will be talks and lectures by medical experts on ways of making the right contacts with special types of convalescents, and also by a hospital expert in hygiene and hospital methods.

Practice teaching in hospitals will be an essential part of the course.

The importance of the work is obvious, and the qualifications demanded for the service are of a high order. It offered very special opportunities for women skilled in crafts who possess these qualifications and who desire to serve their country and their arts. It also offers a fine opportunity to women as yet untrained to make themselves efficient either as volunteers or as professionals, in a work for which the medical profession predicts a growing demand long after the war is over.

Two courses for intensive training will be immediately organized. The short course, of from eight to ten weeks, will be for those skilled in one or more of the crafts, and presupposes a knowledge of design and color. The longer course will be for those who are untrained, and will last from twelve to fifteen weeks according to individual requirements. Fee for short course, $50; fee for long course, $65. The classes will be limited in number. The chief object in establishing them is to graduate well-equipped aids.

It is highly necessary therefore that all who register for training should realize the importance of taking sufficient time to prepare themselves adequately for their work.

The pay of aids who qualify for Government services and are accepted by the Surgeon General's office will be $50 a month when on duty in the United States, and $60 when on duty without the limits of the United States. Suitable quarters and rations will be provided for this force when on duty. When quarters and rations are not provided in hospitals, commutation or allowance for same will be made.

A supervisor has immediate supervision of this force under the direction of the Surgeon General and his commissioned assistants. She is an employe of the Surgeon General's office in the War Department.

The training classes assume no responsibility other than that of training the aids to be eligible for Government service.

Pending the equipment of the classrooms and the completion of final arrangements, written applications may be sent to the Chairman of the Organization Committee, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, 535 Park Avenue, who will make appointments for personal interviews and furnish detailed information.

Committee on Organization—Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Chairman; Mrs. Charles Sprague Smith, Mrs. Ripley Hitchcock, Miss Maude M. Mason, Mrs. Willard Straight, Mrs. Grayson-M. P. Murphy, Mrs. James C. Rogerson, Miss Anna Maxwell, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Mrs. Cornelius J. Sullivan.

Affiliated Committee of Arts and Handicrafts—Mrs. Hitchcock, Chairman; Miss Mason, Secretary.

HELEN C. MANSFIELD.
(Mrs. Howard Mansfield.)

FOR RELIEF IN FRANCE.

A Call for Clothing from the Duryea War Relief.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Major Gen. March, Acting Chief of Staff, has officially requested that no more socks be sent the American troops, as there is a surfeit of them.

For three years America has had a gallant army fighting her battles in France, whose poilus have been paid 5 cents a day for that privilege, while our soldiers are paid $1 a day. These worn heroes, whose homes are in ashes and their wives and children slaves in Germany, are in tragic need of socks, and I beg you as one who has seen their patience in poverty and misfortune, to send not only socks but warm clothing, underwear, mufflers, and such small articles as leather shoestrings, handkerchiefs, pipes, soap, towels, &c., to the Duryea War Relief, 9 East Thirtieth Street. A cable has just been received from Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Vice President, in charge of the Paris depot, begging not only for "$50,000 for immediate urgent needs," but another cable imploring clothing. Thousands of pitiful people are flying for the second time from the Hun and flooding our Paris depot, bereft of everything but the rags they have lived in while sleeping in fields, hunted across the country amid the chaos of moving armies and screaming shells.

The French Government transports Duryea War Relief supplies independently of the Red Cross, quickly and regularly, straight to our Paris depot, free, where they are immediately distributed by our American staff directly into the supplicating hands of those who have suffered in our cause. This organization has aided over 83,000 people, but the drain upon its resources constantly increases, and I beg you to help us to help them.

New goods should be packed separately from used clothing, and so designated on the outside of cases, with the name and address of the sender, and should be shipped to Duryea War Relief, 9 East Thirtieth Street, New York City.

NINA LARREY DURYEA,
President.

New York, April 25, 1918.

To Meet Heavy Misfortunes.

Mr. C. has gone suddenly insane and it was necessary to commit him to an institution. This has thrown the entire responsibility of supporting their five children, all under 13, on the mother, who is not strong. She earns $9 a week doing office cleaning, and that is the sole income of the family. The oldest boy, aged 12, is a bright lad and anxious to help, but will not be able to work for over a year. All the other children are delicate and anemic, due to malnutrition, the doctor says. The home is a good one and should not be broken up because of poverty alone. The Brooklyn Bureau of Charities wishes to provide a diet of nourishing food for the mother and children, and also to give Mrs. C.'s weekly cash allowance to enable her to make ends meet. It also seems desirable to send the oldest girl to the country for a few weeks, as she is in very poor health. To carry out these plans a fund of $200 is needed, and large or small contributions toward this amount may be mailed to the bureau at 69 Schermerhorn Street, marked "For 0366 T."

Want Fly Swatters for the Front.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I make an appeal through your columns for fly swatters for the wounded soldiers lying in the hospitals in Italy? In Italy fly screens are unknown and the suffering from flies during the hot weather can be imagined. Sanitary conditions in times of peace are none to good at best, and now that so many men have gone to the war, breeding places of flies have naturally multiplied. The swatters would not only bring comfort to the wounded, but they can be waved by the sick soldiers themselves in many cases, and even this is a distraction. I am returning to Italy early in May and hope to take the swatters with me. Please send them, plainly marked, "Fly Swatters," in care of Miss Elisabeth Marbury, 123 East Fifty-fifth Street, New York.

MRS. FLORENCE BALDWIN.

New York, April 26, 1918.

To Help a Widowed Mother.

Ever since John C. died last October, after a long fight against tuberculosis, Mrs. C. has had to be both mother and father to her children. With all her energy she cannot provide every necessity and she must not be allowed to work too hard in the vain effort to do so. To ease her burden the Charity Organization Society appeals for $130, which will provide $25 monthly supplement to her earnings, prevent overwork, and do much to give her courage to keep a home for her children. Gifts may be sent to the society's office, 105 East Twenty-second Street, and will be promptly acknowledged.

The Widowed Mothers' Fund.

Temporary aid is needed for a sick widow with four children, of whom the eldest can work. The second child has heart trouble, and must fit itself for a clerical position, for which he has a mental aptitude. The mother has filled a very heavy position as janitress, but has had a general breakdown and must take a complete rest or remain a physical wreck. The family has a promising future if really adequate help can be extended before it is too late. Gifts may be sent to the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association, 192 Bowery, or to Mrs. Henry Zuckerman, 52 Broadway, for Appeal No. 17.

APPRENTICE TO FOREMAN.

William A. Penney, 23 Years with The Times, Now Head of Its Composing Room.

From The New York Union Printer.

A practical illustration of the "reward of merit" is pointed out in the following brief sketch of one of the younger members of "Big Six" who, through his ability, perseverance, and efficiency as a printer, has risen from an apprentice boy to the responsible position of foreman of one of America's greatest newspapers.

Asa M. Jenkins, foreman of THE TIMES composing room, resigned on March 14. As a successor to Mr. Jenkins, the publisher of THE TIMES found it unnecessary to look elsewhere than his own composing room for the "man for the job." He chose one who, like the little acorn, developed into a sturdy oak in THE TIMES own forest, namely, William A. Penney.

The appointment of Mr. Penney occurred on March 18, and I am informed on good authority it came to him unexpectedly, he being unlike Dickens's Micawber in this particular. It was generally believed that an "outsider" would be selected to preside over the composing room, and when Mr. Jenkins's understudy was chosen as his successor the surprise was pleasurable in the extreme.

William A. Penney entered THE TIMES composing room as an apprentice at the age of 15, just twenty-three years ago, and it may truthfully be said that he has grown up with THE TIMES. At the time he entered the office Typographical Union No. 6 did not recognize newspaper apprentices, and, in order to learn the trade and become a newspaper printer, he worked on The Brooklyn Chat afternoons, but completed his apprenticeship on THE TIMES. He received his union working card on June 1, 1902, and was appointed foreman of the ad. room in December, 1900, which, under his efficient supervision, became the model department it is today. It is not too much to say, in fact, that the present high standard of efficiency prevailing in THE TIMES ad room is due wholly to Mr. Penney's original ideas and skillful management during a period covering eight years.

Mr. Penney was born April 11, 1880, and has the distinctive honor of being the youngest morning newspaper foreman in New York City, having just passed his thirty-eighth birthday. In assuming charge of this most important post he entered upon his arduous duties unostentatiously and in a businesslike, matter-of-fact manner, without the slightest assumption of "frills," which argues well for the co-operation of the skilled mechanics under him as well as cementing the good-will, friendship, and fraternal feeling already existing among the members of the big TIMES chapel.

HELP 200 JEWISH REFUGEES.

Party Stranded in Harbin Starts for the United States.

John L. Bernstein, President of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, received a cable message yesterday from Samuel Mason, special representative of the society in the Far East, announcing that 200 Jewish refugees who were stranded in Harbin on their way to the United States have been started on their way to this country. Mr. Mason went to Japan especially to straighten out affairs among the thousands of Jews who had been stranded there after fleeing from Russia.

The message came through Secretary of State Lansing. Mr. Mason said that successful arrangements have been concluded with the authorities in Harbin for the relief of the refugees. Both Russian and Japanese officials, he said, gave every co-operation.

From Harbin Mr. Mason will go to Vladivostok. His cable message is the first definite news since Harbin became affected by war conditions that has reached this country regarding the Jewish refugees.

SMITH GIRLS WORK UNDER SHELLFIRE

Fed and Helped French Until Driven Out by the Enemy Artillery.

A second Smith College Unit was organized for service in France yesterday afternoon at a meeting at the headquarters of the unit at 165 West Sixty-eighth Street, in addition to the present unit which is now doing social service work in France for the civilian populations, particularly for the refugees from the parts now occupied by the Germans.

The new unit will be engaged in work at canteens in co-operation with the Y. M. C. A. It will be headed by Mrs. Edna Shell Witherbee of this city. With her will be Miss Mildred McCluney and Miss Edith Souther of St. Louis, and Miss Helen Durkee, Miss Elizabeth Seeber, and Miss Agnes Bowman of this city. Others will be selected within the next few days, and the entire unit will be on its way to France within two weeks.

Letters brilliantly describing the moving scenes in which the Smith Unit in France participated, in caring for civilians in flight before the Germans, and wornout soldiers falling back during the first days of the German drive, were read at the meeting yesterday.

Mrs. Hannah Dunlop Andrews, '04, of Bronxville, N. Y., is Director of the unit now in France, and Miss Marie Wolfs, '08, of Newark, is Vice Director. The other members are the Misses Catherine Hooper, '11, Montclair, N. J.; Lucy Mather, '88, Hartford, Conn.; Elizabeth Bliss, '08, New York City; Millicent Lewis, '01, Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y.; Margaret Wood, '12, Pasadena, Cal.; Alice Leavens, '03, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; Marion Bennett, '06, Tyngsboro, Mass.; Ruth Joslin, '12, Chicago; Frances Valentine, '02, Westerly, R. I.; Dr. Clara Greenough, '94, Greenfield, Mass.; Marjorie Talbot, '10, Brookline, Mass.; Dorothy Brown, '13, Montclair, N. J.; Elizabeth Biddlecombe, '01, Newport, N. H., and Anne Chapin, '04, Springfield, Mass. Miss Bliss wrote:

Near the German Lines.

"We were just ten miles from the line when the offensive started, and you cannot dream of the sound. Suddenly, through a wonderful, almost summer evening, stillness came the shriek of thousands of guns. We all knew what it meant. Though we had feared it for days, it was no less terrible for all that. By afternoon we knew the Germans had broken our line.

"Orders were rushed for us to evacuate our villages at once. Two of us started out in a car to carry refugees from one village to another further from the line. Never can I forget that sight. Old women with their possessions on wheelbarrows trudging along the road, little children dragged by their terrified mothers, everybody with their live stock, dogs, cats, rabbits, and chickens, driving their cows and goats before them, all rushing madly away from the flood of terrible destruction pouring down upon them.

"Shells were bursting all around and air battles were constant. When morning came the boches were only five miles away, and we were warned to move at once, but somehow we could not desert our villagers, not leaving until every soul was out. It was the most sickening sight that you can imagine. Every one left home just as it was, breakfast dishes on the table, spades in the garden, even personal clothing hanging on hooks on the wall.

"Shells Whiz Over Our Head."

"The roads were choked, part of the army in retreat, reinforcements coming up, refugees everywhere. We rode up between the heavy English artillery and the Germans. English shells were whizzing over our heads all the time.

"We reached our camp at 11 o'clock that night to find it filled with 200 English soldiers and officers, and a great anti-aircraft cannon just outside our door. When it went off, we were deafened, but we saw it bring down a boche plane.

"All night long we ran a canteen for those English soldiers, furnishing them with coffee and food, but at 5 in the morning the Major warned us that the Germans were near enough for a cavalry charge, and we left in the pitch of blackness with what few things we could stuff in a duffle bag. It was a strange, wild ride. We went twelve miles and left our things, and then traveled back and forth all day bringing in the refugees. We stood at crossroads directing the traffic, thereby relieving congestion of ammunition wagons, food wagons, and refugees."

Fled Without Belongings.

Miss Wolfs, the Vice Director, told thrilling incidents of the flight of civilians before the German attack. She wrote:

"Marguy was an out-of-the-way village, which had previously been investigated by the officer who accompanied us. We had an auto truck with boxes filled with gasoline cans and covered with blankets for seats. The first person we found was an old lady over 80, who was totally blind, and unable to walk. It was pitiful to make her leave her home, especially as her daughter and grandchildren had to follow on foot, and rely on us to put her in a hospital to be cared for.

"Next came a woman with an injured leg, who had not walked for years. We then went for an old couple, who could hardly be persuaded to leave several mattresses and some large bag in which they had packed all their belongings. We took as many things as we could for them, and finally in desperation had to promise to send for the rest, although we knew that the time for safe trips to that section was very short. A family of dwarfs who had lived in a caravan was our next case. As the mother was quite helpless, we agreed that the best thing to do was to leave the caravan, with the people in it, to be dragged away by horses. These the army promised to furnish, but it turned out next day that there were none available, so Frances went out and brought the family into town in the jitney. What will become of them I can't even imagine."

The work behind the lines during the German drive has used up much more money than was anticipated, and the unit asks that contributions for the work be sent to Lee, Higginson & Co. of Boston, the authorized Treasurers of the fund.

BARNARD TO SEND UNIT.

Associate Alumnae Name the Women Who Will Go to France.

The Associate Alumnae of Barnard College have undertaken to establish and maintain canteen and repatriation units "somewhere in France," which will be sent over soon. The following graduates have been accepted for this war work abroad by the Personnel Committee of the Associate Alumnae, subject to the restrictions and conditions of either the Y. M. C. A. or the Red Cross:

Theodora Curtis, '04; Lucy Gardiner, '07; Cecile Delany, '09; Lucy Thompson, '09; Eleanor Doty, '12; Mildred Hodges, '12; Alice P. N. Waller, 14; Margaret Peck, 14; Dorothy Myers, '16; Cornelia T. Geer, '17, and Edith P. Morgan, '17.

The senior class hopes to raise $1,000 toward the $3,000 which will be necessary for the maintenance of the units by means of two benefit performances of Lawrence Housman's "Chinese Lantern," on the nights of Friday, May 31, and Saturday, June 1, in the Students' Hall gymnasium.

FIFTY-FIFTY BREAD (Saves more Wheat)

Our bakery is turning out bread which contains even less than 75% wheat, as requested by the Food Administration. To be exact, we use exactly 50% of wheat and the balance in other substitutes.

These loaves represent a saving in wheat flour, which, when it becomes general throughout the country, should enable the government to keep all its promises of wheat shipments to our Allies.

The formula for the bread is as follows:—Bread flour, 3 lbs. (50%); Barley flour, 1 lb. 8 oz. (25%); Sago flour, 12 oz. (13%); Tapioca flour, 12 oz. (12%); Water, 2 quarts; Yeast, 4½ oz.; Salt, 2 oz.; Syrup, 6 oz.; Sugar, 3 oz.; Shortening, 3 oz. The above will make 10 lbs. of Bread. For 5 lbs. use half.

The American Committee for Devastated France, Inc.

Announces that Cables from Monsieur Lebrun

MINISTER OF THE BLOCKADE AND LIBERATED REGIONS OF FRANCE

TO MONSIEUR ANDRE TARDIEU

FRENCH HIGH COMMISSIONER TO THE UNITED STATES and Letters from MRS. A. M. DIKE and MISS ANNE MORGAN

assure them that no supplies, crops, nor live stock belonging to the Committee in France have been destroyed during the German advance.

Headquarters at Blerancourt have been temporarily removed to Audignicourt, and three other villages evacuated to make room for French troops.

The farmers remain on the farms, all of which lie south of Blerancourt.

Six hundred children were taken to Vic-sur-Aisne where they are being fed, clothed, and educated.

The French Government has asked the American Committee to open two more centres, one in Alsace and one in the Somme.

SPARTANBURG MEN TO BE COMMISSIONED

List of New York Guardsmen Who Were Graduated from Officers' Training Camp.

GO BACK TO RANKS NOW

But Will Be Made Second Lieutenants When Vacancies Occur —Lists from Camp Lee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The Adjutant General of the army made public today the names of the men graduated from the Third Officers' Training Camps conducted at Camp Wadsworth, S. C., and Camp Lee, Va. The graduates of these camps will return to their regular organizations as Sergeants and will be placed on eligible lists to be commissioned as Second Lieutenants when suitable vacancies occur.

The officers' school conducted at Camp Wadsworth under the direction of Major Gen. O'Ryan, commanding General of the Twenty-seventh Division, was comprised of former New York guardsmen, and most of the men live in this city. The names as published by the Adjutant General, with the exception of those who do not come from New York, New Jersey, or New England, their home addresses and the branch of the service in which they qualified follow:

Tells of Swiss Food Shortage.

A letter received in this city from Basle, Switzerland, written on April 15, states that conditions of living are becoming more and more trying there. Bread is now made of corn and rice and is very indigestible, and rations are becoming smaller. The Government has announced that there may not be any bread next month. Those who can afford potatoes are substituting them for bread. One yard of ordinary linen costs $3, and one spool of cotton thread is now about 30 cents.

DRAFT BOARD PRINTS ITS OWN MAGAZINE

ROOSEVELT COMMENDS IT

Gen. Crowder Hopes Other Boards Will Give the Same Encouragement to Draftsmen.

Local Draft Board 164 of Manhattan, with headquarters at 51 East Eighty-third Street, is the first selective draft district organization in the United States to publish its own paper. The first issue has just been mailed to all the men who have gone into the service from District 164. The paper is called The Local Board, and its circulation is about 550 copies, that being the number of men of draft age who have gone forth to fight for the United States from that district.

The publication, which is a monthly, has been commended by General Crowder, Governor Whitman, and General Sherrill, and it is said that other boards will probably also begin the publication of a paper to keep in touch with the men they are sending to the front. Of all the men who registered for the draft in District 164 more than 26 per cent. are now in the military or naval service. The total registration for the district is 2,180.

Here are a few excerpts from the May issue of The Local Board:

> Although our soldiers and sailors have purchased millions of dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds, there is no reason why we should expect it of them. Their attitude is highly praiseworthy, but can we say the same of those who are still at home? They are the ones to contribute the funds and leave the fighting to the boys in uniform. Back 'em up with Liberty Bonds, War Savings Stamps, Y. M. C. A., Y. M. H. A., Knights of Columbus, &c. Back 'em up; that's for us to do.

The following is printed in the editorial columns:

> Very often we see a group of young men leave the office of some local board in buses or wagons preparatory to entraining for camp. They appear so despondent and dejected that one is inclined to seek the cause. Surely they do not fear camp life, because all the reports that have come from those camps are glowing in their description of them. Surely they are not sorry to go, because every mother's son of them must realize how great a service is in his power to give and how much his country needs that service.
>
> Now, what makes these boys look as if they were attending a funeral rather than being part of a great army upon which the civilized world now depends for the justification of its ideals? We feel that the members of the boards are responsible. They fail to inspire their men with the proper spirit necessary to start them away right. What better proof have we that this is true than the attitude of the boys who leave Board 164? They are happy and cheerful at the moment of departure, singing songs and cheering, while their parents, who had come to weep and pray, look on with smiling faces.
>
> Why the difference between this and other boards? Because the boys of 164, before they leave for camp, are addressed by members of the board, who seek to inspire them with the joy of the service which they are about to render to their country and the hope that their conduct will be such as to bring glory to their country, State, and local district. The board promises to keep in touch with them and to render, while they are gone, any service whatsoever to them.
>
> Under these conditions our soldiers enter the new life with a care-free spirit, happy to be a part of the great history-making army and sure to be worthy of the trust reposed in them by their country.

The members of Local Board 164 are Stanley M. Isaacs, Chairman; John H. Iselin, and Dr. Walter L. Niles.

The May issue of The Local Board publishes letters from General Crowder, Colonel Roosevelt, and others, commending its enterprise.

Major Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, U. S. A., the Provost Marshal General of the United States, in his letter to the board said:

> I am extremely interested in the effort of your local board members to keep in touch with its registrants who have answered the call to the colors. The fact that the national army has been recruited so successfully is due, primarily, to the patriotic efforts, the sympathy, and attention to duty, of members of local boards such as yours. Your board is worthy of the heartiest congratulations on the manner in which your work has been conducted, and this idea of a board newspaper as a channel of communication is indeed a happy one.

"You have the pleasure of knowing," Governor Whitman writes, "that yours is the only board in the entire State which has taken the pains to give to the public in this way the names of those who have become members of the army."

"That's a fine piece of work," Colonel Theodore Roosevelt wrote in acknowledging the receipt of the first copy of The Local Board.

Other letters commending the board for its efforts to keep in touch with its men are from Draft Director Martin Conboy, Adjt. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, and Harry L. Glucksam, the Assistant Director of the Jewish Welfare Board.

PEERLESS
Two-Power-Range Eight
Ready to Romp
An effortless, light-hearted frolic!
That's what the Peerless Eight makes of the ordinary day's work of utility driving.
The soft, easy flow of eighty horsepower makes it a romp.
Would you crawl at a snail's pace behind retarded traffic? You may do so with utter smoothness.
Does the traffic open up? The advantage is yours for you have the "pick-up" to leave the cars about you as though they were stalled.
And the limit of speed for the open streets is a romp for your eighty horsepower.
And you waste not at all.
For all this is done in your "loafing" range of power—on half rations.
Many a lesser powered six—even many a four—would starve on the fuel that carries your Peerless romping through the day's work.
"Loafing" Range
Ready to Race
But not every day is a work day.
With your Peerless you sacrifice none of the holiday joys—you are equally as ready to race as to romp—you have your "sporting" range.
You may master the road whatever the adverse conditions; you may make Time laugh at Distance.
You have only to open your throttle wider to release her double poppets and utterly change the character of her performance.
Gone now the soft flow of eighty horsepower "loafing"—as you reach her "sporting" range there comes a deep growl of brute power, all-conquering.
In her "sporting" range she is as mighty as she was gentle in her "loafing" range.
Let us show you the joy of these startling contrasts in performance—and the practical economy gained without sacrifice.

PENN CREW WINS BY FIVE LENGTHS

Quaker Eight Captures Child's Cup for First Time on Carnegie Lake.

COLUMBIA FINISHES NEXT

Victors So Far in Van Real Contest Is Between Blue and White and Tigers for Second.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 4.—The eight red and blue oar blades of Pennsylvania's sturdy crew sent the Quaker shell over the mirrored surface of Lake Carnegie so fast that the Princeton and Columbia crews were left far in the rear, and in the last flashes of the glowing sunset old Penn made a procession of the Child's Cup race, winning by more than five lengths.

With the Quakers so far in the van, the real race of the afternoon settled down to an exciting duel between Columbia and Princeton, and at the finish the Light Blue and White crew of Jim Rice showed its gameness and stamina by coming from behind in a spurt which brought great cheers from the spectators.

The New York oarsmen crept up from the back and lifted their shell over the finish line a length ahead of the Orange and Black. This was the first time that Pennsylvania ever won the Child's Cup race since the event was contested by eights. It is the second time that Penn has beaten Columbia in the eleven years of Jim Rice's coaching, and the worst beating Columbia has ever suffered since Rice took charge.

Penn Freshmen Also Win.

It was a big day for Penn because in the freshman race the Quaker cubs beat the Princeton youngsters by a margin of two lengths. Columbia did not have a crew in the freshman event, which was rowed over the Henley course of one and five-sixteenths.

For a wartime regatta, there was a large gathering here today to enjoy Princeton's biggest sporting day of the year. A day, which started out with a great threatening sky, ended in the blaze of a glorious Maytime sunset. Just as the 'Varsity crews were lined up at the start, at Kingston, the sun broke out from behind the clouds.

The air was laden with the odor of Spring flowers and the trees were green in their new leaves, and the lilac bushes were in bloom. The refreshing scent of the new grass arose from the broad expanse of meadowland in which Princeton's artificial lake nestles in bucolic restfulness. Most of the visitors came here today by automobile, and the cars, hundreds of them, crept along the road on both sides of the lake with the crews. Hundreds of girls in their Spring finery added color to the picture, and Princeton's folks cannot remember when they enjoyed a more delightful Spring festival.

COLUMBIA WINNER AGAIN.

Tennis Team Defeats Penn, 6 to 0, Making Its Fifth Straight Victory.

Columbia University's tennis team continued its winning career yesterday on the East Field courts by trouncing the University of Pennsylvania racquet wielders, 6 to 0. This triumph gives the Blue and White representatives their fifth straight victory of the season and makes the fourth success the team has scored without being scored on.

With one exception the six matches contested resulted in rather easy Blue and White victories. The local collegians easily outclassed the Philadelphia clan, and this superiority was manifest from beginning to end of the competition. In the opening match, however, H. Warner of Pennsylvania forced W. Botsford, carrying the hopes of Columbia, to go three sets before victory was finally scored by the local player.

In the first set Botsford showed on top by 6 to 1, but in the second set the local player's game fell off, and Warner, showing improvement, captured the laurels by 8 to 6. Botsford was again in trim for the third set, however, and took the honors of the match by 6 to 2.

The summaries:

SINGLES.—W. Botsford, Columbia, defeated W. H. Warner, Pennsylvania, 6—1, 6—8, 6—2; A. Von Bernuth, Columbia, defeated W. L. Nassau, Pennsylvania, 6—2, 6—2; H. Forster, Columbia, defeated C. B. Fager, Pennsylvania, 6—3, 6—3; W. Feistiner, Columbia, defeated R. C. Fenner, Pennsylvania, 6—3, 6—4.

DOUBLES.—Von Bernuth and Forster, Columbia, defeated Warner and Nassau, 6—2, 7—5; Feistiner and Haldenstein, Columbia, defeated Fenner and Fager, Pennsylvania, 6—2, 6—4.

Major League Owners Will Not Invade Harrison Park.

Four owners of major league baseball clubs decided yesterday that it would be a violation of the territory of the International League to hold big league games at the Harrison Park grounds, just outside of Newark, on Sundays. Harry N. Hempstead of the Giants, Colonel Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees, Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn, and William H. Baker of the Philadelphia National League Club and John Heydler, Secretary of the National League, met yesterday at the National League offices, and after the conference sent a telegram to Garry Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission, to the effect that Newark was International League territory and that games could not be played at Harrison Park without the consent of the International League.

Such consent has already been refused by the International—in fact it was the protest of the International against the majors playing within their territory that precipitated the present controversy.

Ebbets remarked yesterday that there was no one who could make him alter his schedule; that the Brooklyn public was entitled to seventy-seven games of ball and that they were to be played at Ebbets Field.

The telegram sent to Herrmann read as follows:

"The International League claims the Newark territory. Do not feel we have right to play Sunday games under circumstances. The three local clubs deem it inadvisable to play except the International League fails to start as scheduled or a working agreement is entered into with that organization."

NAVY OVERWHELMS LEHIGH.

Midshipmen Pile Up a Total of 98 1-3 to 5 2-3 in Track Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 4.—In the opening field and track meet of the local season, the Midshipmen defeated Lehigh by 98 1-3 points to 5 2-3. Lehigh succeeded in tying with two Navy men in the pole vault, and getting second place in the broad jump, but made no other points. It was the greatest avalanche of a score ever made by a Navy team in this branch, and most of the interest developed upon keen contests between Midshipmen in several of the events.

The performances were of a very high order for so early in the season, and the Navy presented a large and well-balanced team, making it unnecessary for the same men to enter different events. On the other hand, Lehigh had a small team, and had suffered losses due to injuries to team men just before the event. Both Allen and Heintz topped the academy record in the discus throw.

PIRATES WIN IN TENTH.

Caton's Triple Paves Way for Beating St. Louis, 5 to 4.

PITTSBURGH, May 4.—St. Louis lost to Pittsburgh today in ten innings, 5 to 4. The home team scored four runs in the opening inning, but St. Louis, by scoring one in the third and three in the fifth, tied the game. A triple by Caton, followed by Mollwitz's single in the tenth, brought in the winning run for Pittsburgh.

Prior to the opening of the game the Pittsburgh players assembled at the home plate and bought Liberty bonds to the amount of $6,250.

Matty's Reds Shut Out, 1 to 0, in Pitching Battle.

CHICAGO, May 4.—Chicago made it eight straight today by shutting out Cincinnati 1 to 0 in a pitching duel between Tyler and Eller. Hollocher's walk, Flack's sacrifice fly, Mann's single, and a sacrifice fly by Paskert scored the only run of the game.

The visitors had two opportunities to score, but two fast double plays spoiled them.

TIGERS TRIUMPH AT TENNIS.

Lafayette Players Defeated, 5 Matches to 4, in Good Contests.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 4.—The Princeton tennis team defeated Lafayette here this afternoon, taking five matches to their opponents' four. The singles broke even, each team winning three matches, but Princeton managed to take two of the three matches in doubles, thus winning the long end of the score.

Middleditch showed the best form of the afternoon, easily winning from Shriner 6—3, 6—4. In doubles he and Smith defeated Hardy and Hare 8—10, 6—0, 6—4. For Lafayette, Mina gave the best exhibition, winning his match with ease from Smith, 6—1, 6—3.

The summaries:

Singles.—Middleditch, Princeton, defeated Shriner, Lafayette, 6—3, 6—4; Mina, Lafayette, defeated Smith, Princeton, 6—1, 6—3; Fletcher, Princeton, defeated Shumway, Lafayette, 2—6, 8—1, 6—0; Dolan, Lafayette, defeated Stevenson, Princeton, 6—3, 6—1; Hardy, Lafayette, defeated Dunn, Princeton, 7—5, 6—4; Carver, Princeton, defeated Hare, Lafayette, 6—4, 7—9, 6—2.

GRIMES ROUTS JINX AND TAKES A GAME

Credited with Victory After Whole Season of Defeats Last Year and Two This Year.

SHUTS OUT MORAN'S MEN

Brooklyn Twirler Proves Master of Phillies, While the Dodgers Gather Three Tallies.

For the first time in nearly a year Burleigh Grimes had a chance to laugh yesterday, and being founded on good and sufficient reasons his mirth was without stint. Seldom has a major league player been harassed by such overwhelming misfortune as Grimes and yet lived to call himself a major leaguer. That Grimes was able to set aside precedent in this respect was an accomplishment in itself, but greater by far was his achievement of yesterday when he shook aside the sinister jinx that has been following him persistently and carried the Brooklyn baseball club through to a victory over the Phillies by a score of 3 to 0.

Baseball statisticians have become somewhat bored in keeping account of Grimes's defeats as a major league pitcher. There was a monotony about it that tried their patience, and the black marks multiplied themselves so many times that it was something of a puzzle to dissociate them so that there might be an accurate account of his failures. It is certain at any rate that Grimes lost the first two games that he pitched for Brooklyn and that he lost a small army of games last year. Whether it was fourteen or fifteen consecutive defeats that he suffered before the season of 1917 came mercifully to a close is of little matter. Every one is agreed that it was something of a record. Therefore it was not strange that the victory at Ebbets Field yesterday should come as a real surprise, and a refreshing one, too.

For nine innings Grimes had every indication of championship calibre. The men from Quaker City, who tested strength against this one time disciple of defeat, found that there had been a wonderful change in the lad and their bats whiffed through the air without danger to the Brooklyn score. Seven of the Moranmen were strike-out victims and many others found it beyond their powers to drive the elusive pellet out of the infield pasture. It was a case where the Phillies were dominated by a master boxman and it was because of Grimes that Brooklyn was able to pull through with a victory.

Teammates on Toes.

The spell of Grimes's work seemed to hypnotize the Brooklyn team into giving a fine exhibition of the national pastime. They fielded with the snap and dash that make an interesting ball game, and supplied just the proper proportion of hits to clean up the winning runs. Prendergast tried to hold the Dodgers in check, but the task was too much for him. For three innings the Robins were helpless before him, going out in one-two-three order, but after that his curves lost their cunning and a rain of hits in the fourth inning sewed up the ball game in the Brooklyn game sack beyond all hope of retrieve. A triple, a double, and two singles figured in cleaning up three runs, and they grew as large as mountains as the game wore to a close.

During the first three innings the Phillies were a bit threatening, but, as Prendergast weakened Grimes tightened up, and in the last five innings the Quaker City men were the ones who dropped by the wayside with disconcerting regularity. After the fourth inning only sixteen men faced Grimes.

It seemed that, having escaped defeat in the openings innings, Grimes grew to have more confidence in himself. He pitched with all the power that he had, even hurrying his delivery a little in his eagerness to close out a victory that would break his long string of defeats. His teammates helped him along with a will, and the Brooklyn populace, which has had little or no chance to applaud this season, gave oral support in thunderous tones.

After nine innings of weary endeavor, the Moran clan had only three hits to show for an afternoon's work. The only time they were really threatening was in the third, when blows by Pearce and Burns followed in succession, but two were already down and Prendergast was unequal to wielding the stick with effect in his own behalf, going out on an infield shot that was quickly gobbled up by Olson.

Olson Gets a Triple.

The fourth inning gave Brooklyn its winning runs. Olson, the first man up, crashed hat into hall for a three-base hit to left field, the sphere galloping badly along the foul line with Whitted pursuing. O'Mara, with such a good example to follow, cracked a two-bagger past Stock and Olson scored. A sacrifice by Daubert advanced O'Mara a base and he scored when Myers singled to centre. Johnston tried to sting the ball but the blow was an easy out, Pearce to Luderus, but it served to advance Myers a base, and he raced home when Hickman drove a neat single to centre. Schmandt closed the inning with an infield out.

Brooklyn threatened to score in the next inning, Kreuger leading off with a single and getting around to third on a sacrifice and long fly. O'Mara, however, couldn't come across with a hit and Kreuger was left stranded. With two down in the next inning Brooklyn was again within striking distance of a run but again failed. This time it was Johnston who was left on the third sack calling for help. He reached first on a single and advanced on an error by Stock and a wild pitch. Schmandt started off the seventh inning with a double, but this, too, went for naught in the way of runs:

BABE RUTH IS HERO, THOUGH YANKS WIN

Sturdy Red Sox Twirler Bears Burden of Bunting Attack Bravely.

WIELDS A VICIOUS CUDGEL

Bangs Out a Double and a Home Run and Fields Busily, but Huggins Clan Is Victor, 5 to 4.

It was Babe Ruth's busy day at the Polo Grounds yesterday. The Yankees kept the big Boston lefthander hustling along through eight and one-half innings of highly exciting baseball, and at the end Ruth was one lap behind in the race and the New York contingent had taken its second straight game from the Boston rivals. The score was 5 to 4.

To the credit of Ruth it must be chronicled that he fought back with determination, and never at any time admitted that he was beaten. Even with two men out in the last half of the ninth inning, Ruth was perched on second base, where he had arrived after hammering a double to the outskirts of the park in right field, which scored Agnew, begging Harry Hooper to supply a single which might send him in with the tying score. Hooper, who also had been accomplishing things, missed fire this time and the Yankees breathed easy for the first time during the afternoon.

Ruth is a husky young man, perfectly able to take care of himself in any emergency when the odds are at all even, but yesterday he was set upon by nine voracious, hungry, clamoring Yankees and some 15,000 spectators, and that he finished second best is not at all discrediting. The young Boston pitcher gave an efficient all-round display of baseball at its best, and even in defeat was undoubtedly the hero of the game.

As to the battle itself, it was probably the most entertaining and exciting displayed by the new Yankee machine this season. Carefully adjusted by Miller Huggins, the Yankee outfit moved along with such outstanding strength it mowed down the opposition of the invaders and arrived at the finish triumphantly. Huggins evidently decided Ruth was the main obstacle to overcome and he ordered an attack which certainly kept Ruth on the run. Ruth handled thirteen fielding chances during the game and erred on only two of them, but one of his errors was a wild throw which allowed two Yankee runs to score.

Ruth Gets a Home Run.

Ruth, furthermore, spanked a home run into the yawning right-field grand stand, which pulled the Boston team within one run of tying the score, and Ruth sent a double screaming over the head of Armando Marsans in right field which almost broke up the game in the ninth. He pitched fairly well, but Huggins had ordered a bunting game, and between pitching and diving at slow, tantalizing, rolling balls, Ruth was in a fair way to become puzzled now and then.

As to Marsans, he entered the game for the first time this season in the place of Gilhooley, and signalized his return in magnificent style by blasting out two ringing singles to centre field in his first two trips to the plain.

Allen Russell opposed Ruth on the mound, and, while Russell was not called upon to shoulder the difficulties which beset Ruth, he pitched cleverly. In the first five innings Boston was helpless before Russell, but toward the end of the game he was not such a puzzle. The game was filled with enough excitement to keep the crowd seated until the last man was out in the ninth.

The Yankees lost little time gaining favor with the crowd. Almost from the first ball pitched the excitement started. Hooper, Boston's veteran lead-off man, rolled the ball toward Pipp, who fielded it cleanly and threw to Russell, but Hooper was running like the wind, and just beat the throw by a hairline decision. Shean was put out of the way on his fly to Miller. Strunk swung wickedly at the ball, and it dropped in front of the plate. Hannah pounced on it and snapped the ball to Pipp for the out. Hooper in the meantime thought he could give another display of running, and tried to reach third, only to die ingloriously on Pipp's perfect peg to Baker.

Marsans signalized his return to active duty with a line single to centre field, opening the Yankee attack. Peck laid down a neat sacrifice, and on Baker's out to Hoblitzel, Marsans hopped to third. Pratt met the first ball pitched to him for a line single to left, and Marsans trotted the rest of the way home.

Although the Red Sox were still trying to unravel the mysteries of Russell's twisters in the second and third innings, the Yankees continued their disrespect of Ruth. Bodie began the second inning with a ringing double down the third-base line. It was Pipp's third straight two-base drive. Miller's sacrifice put Bodie on third. Hannah lifted the ball toward right centre for what appeared to be a certain safe hit, but the inimitable Hooper hopped over to the ball and arrived in time to make a sensational bare-handed catch. Bodie scored after the catch without molestation.

Yanks Attack with Bunts.

The Yankees' bunting attack stood Ruth on his head in the third. Once more Marsans hit safely, the ball going almost to the same place as on his original attempt. Peck attempted to sacrifice, but Ruth would not have it so, for he allowed the slow, teasing roller to hop through his legs, and Marsans and Peck both arrived at their objectives on schedule. Baker also bunted, his helpful hit being a perfectly placed offering.

Ruth, who by this time was worried by the extra duty, made a wild stab at the ball and a wilder throw toward first base in hopes of heading off some one. Ruth's throw hit Baker in the back of the neck and bounced to the stand. Marsans and Peck raced over the plate and Baker rolled to first base and rubbed the injured spot. He was not hurt much, especially when he realized the blow on the neck had helped two runners over the plate.

Each side was docile in the fourth, although a pass to Shean heartened the Red Sox somewhat, even if it produced nothing. In the fifth Boston subsided without any show of opposition, but not so the Yankees, or rather, the irrepressible Baker, who, with two out, singled to right. Baker also stole second while Ruth was emitting a wild pitch, but Pratt's best offering was a foul to Agnew.

The first dent in Russell's equanimity came in the sixth inning, after Babe Ruth was out of the way on a towering fly to Peck. Hooper, who played the rôle of villain in the game, once more helped to dim the lustre of Russell's pitching by driving the ball between Miller and Marsans for a three-base hit. Dave Shean finally came to life at this juncture with a rollicking drive at Peck, which the amiable Yankee Captain halted, but without a chance to get either Hooper or Shean. Strunk filed out and Shean stole second, just an instant before Russell walked Schang. McInnis ended the engagement with a bounder to Russell.

Hannah momentarily upset the Red Sox in the sixth inning, but Pipp spoiled the fun. Pipp had walked to start the frame, and moved along to third on two successive rollers to Ruth by Bodie and Miller. Hannah also walked. With Russell up, Hannah started a delayed steal of second. Ruth bluffed to throw the ball, and Pipp left third base, but too hastily, for Ruth threw to McInnis, and Pipp was quickly run down.

Miller Gets a Hard One.

Miller staged his daily life-saving stunt with the Red Sox at bat in the seventh. When Scott bent out a roller to Russell, Agnew laid his bat against the ball and sent it traveling toward the Harlem River. Miller also started in that general direction, and managed to intercept the ball in its flight.

Miller evidently made the Red Sox angry, for Ruth, after hitting a ball into the right-field stands, a foul by inches, punched another into the same stands, but fair this time, and Scott paced the big pitcher home. Hooper doubled down the first-base line, but Baker checked Shean's smash and stopped the carnage right there.

Russell got back into form and suppressed the visitors in the eighth. The Yankees did their best to settle the little argument in their half. Pratt opened by beating out a roller to McInnis, and Pipp thought so well of this means to advance he bunted the ball toward Stuffy, and was rewarded when McInnis threw wildly to first. All hands were safe. Bodie's sacrifice bunted the pair along, and Miller forced Schang to hike to the fence to pull down his fly, after which Pratt carried over the fifth run and Pipp moved to third. Hannah received a pass and stole second, but Russell could not shove the pair along.

Agnew and Ruth almost made the 15,000 spectators lose their appetites in the ninth when each doubled after two were out, but with Ruth waiting on base Hooper ended the game.

GALLOPING GIANTS GARNER ONE MORE

Tesreau Holds Braves Hitless for Eight Innings, but Fails to Go Route.

SALLEE SENT TO HIS AID

McGraw Puts Him on Mound in Final Frame When Wilson's Single Upsets Jeff.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 4.—The Braves spoiled a no-hit game for Jeff Tesreau in the ninth inning today, but the Giants scored their fourteenth victory in fifteen starts by taking Stallings's men into camp, 4 to 1. For eight innings Tesreau had the Boston crew at his mercy. He did not allow a solitary blow, and walked only one man up to the time the Braves, hopelessly beaten, took their final turn at bat. Even the Boston rooters were pulling for Jeff to hang up a no-hit contest, and it looked as if he were about to accomplish this difficult feat.

The vision was dispelled, however, in short order. Arthur Wilson, first Brave up in the ninth, rapped the ball down the left-field foul line for three bases. A bit shaken by the sudden blow to his aspirations, Jeff lost his grip and failed to locate the plate for Conway, who batted for Bunny Hearne. The big pitcher regained his composure and fanned Massey, but lost it again when Herzog hopped one into centre field, scoring Wilson.

At this juncture Manager McGraw signaled to Tesreau that he was through for the afternoon, and Slim Sallee, who had been warming up in the pen in left field, was called to his rescue. Sallee was equal to the emergency, and made short work of Rehg, who batted for Powell, and Kelly, who was sent up to hit for Wickland. Rehg popped to Doyle and Kelly hit one into the dust in front of the plate, McCarty picking the ball up and pegging the batter out at first.

Giants Start in Fourth.

The Giants didn't cause a great deal of trouble for Hearne until the fourth inning, but in that frame they nicked him for a brace of runs, enough, as it later developed, to win. Larry Doyle, first up, slugged the pellet to centre field for a clean two-bagger, and when Powell booted the ball around Larry kept on going, and reached third in safety.

Fletcher banged a single to centre, and Doyle crossed the pan. Holke sacrificed, advancing Fletcher to second, and when Tesreau dribbled a hit to the deep short field Fletcher went to third. The Giant Captain and the burly pitcher then essayed a double steal, and the effort was successful, Fletcher scoring and Tesreau reaching second. Young failed to score Tesreau, as he grounded to Konetchy.

In the fifth the Giants hung up another run, aided by an error on the part of Wickland. With one out, Burns doubled to left. Zimmerman, who had a bad day with the stick, carved the air. Doyle drove the ball to right centre, and as Powell settled under the descending pellet it looked like curtains for the Giants in that frame. Wickland, however, had raced over from his territory and collided with Powell just as the latter was about to make the catch. Both were precipitated forcibly to the turf and the ball bounded away. Burns scored and Doyle reached third before it was retrieved.

Kauff Drives in Young.

Young tripled to left in the ninth after Tesreau had been retired, and Kauff scored the San Antonio speed merchant with his third blow of the game, a single to left.

The Braves made two dangerous bids for hits prior to the ninth inning, but fine catches on the part of Kauff and Burns caused their efforts to go for naught and preserved for the time being Tesreau's spotless record.

In the sixth inning Kauff went far back and to his left for a drive from Wilson's bat, and in the eighth Burns's catch of Konetchy's blazing drive shut off a sure double.

COLLEGIAN BEATS JOHNSON.

Brown Graduate Gets Hit Which Downs Senators.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—Davidson, a recruit from Brown University, broke up a runless pitchers' battle between Johnson and Perry today by beating out an infield hit in the eleventh inning, Philadelphia winning 1 to 0. The play at first was close, and while Judge turned toward Umpire Connelly, Burns dashed home from third with the only run of the game.

With two out in the eleventh, Burns scratched a single off Johnson's glove, and took second on a passed ball. Gardner was purposely passed, then Davidson hit to Lavan at deep short, beating the throw to first.

Harper wrenched his ankle in the fifth, and with the bases filled and none out in the sixth, Johnson replaced the left-hander. A fast double play pulled him out of the hole.

KYRONEN IS VICTOR IN MARATHON RACE

Leads Field of 800 Harriers in Evening Mail Event from Bronx to City Hall.

PORES WINS SECOND PLACE

Fights Sturdily Against Finnish Runner, but is Beaten by 100 Yards—Kolehmainen Third.

Villar Kyronen, the sturdy-limbed little Finnish runner of the Millrose A. A., yesterday won the eighth annual Evening Mail Modified Marathon race, from the Bronx to the City Hall, in a manner that left not the least doubt as to his superiority over the many leading distance runners who started in the event. Leading the large field practically from the start and taking his turn at setting the pace, which was a stiff one, Kyronen drew away in the last three-quarter mile of the twelve-and-one-half-mile journey, and crossed the finish line nearly 100 yards ahead of Charles Pores.

The victor's time was 1:10:20. Pores crossed the finish line twenty-five seconds later. Hannes Kolehmainen, the veteran Finnish runner, who has held many titles, both national and Olympic, and who has won this fixture on four occasions, pulled up in third position, after one of his hardest races. He was 1 minute and 33 seconds behind Kyronen.

A more patriotic setting could hardly have been arranged for the running of the event. As if to add a bit of appropriateness, the race was officially termed the Liberty Loan Marathon.

Blue Devils See Start of Race.

One of the most impressive and inspiring sights was the appearance of the Blue Devils of France, chock full of enthusiasm, at the starting point, 175th Street and the Concourse. These fighters entered into the spirit of the race nobly, and were constantly cheered by the huge crowd which assembled to see the runners off. Frequently they gave their peculiar bugle call, and just as the runners were drawn up at the starting point the Blue Devils, in their three auto buses, started away down the course, as if to blaze the trail for the runners.

Quite as prominent in the picture was the part America's fighters played. Many soldiers from various nearby camps, as well as some from Southern training stations, competed in the chase. Others, back home after a baptism of trench life, rode in automobiles in advance of the runners, and with their odd-looking tin hats attracted wide attention. Some of the uniformed men proudly showed the Croix de Guerre, a reward for their valor overseas. As their automobiles passed on their way along the course Liberty Loan literature was thrown into the faces and hands of spectators who lined the streets.

The airplanes, which it was expected would follow the runners over the course, failed, for some unexplained reason, to put in an appearance, but with the enthusiasm shown by the soldiers and sailors in autos, their absence was not felt, and plenty of Liberty Loan appeals were distributed among the spectators.

Field of 800 in Long Chase.

The field which participated in the race was one of the largest that has ever started in this classic. It was estimated that more than 800 aspiring harriers actually got away when the starting pistol was fired by the Borough President of Manhattan, Frank L. Dowling, and of this number the greater portion finished. Runners ranging in age from 18 years to a veteran of 57 years, Dr. William H. Bates, comprised the field, and while some retired before the end of the journey, those who finished failed to show any appreciable signs of distress after their hard run. The smallest contestant was Henry Laford of the Comet A. C., whose diminutive form was barely discernible as the runners were sent away.

At 1:55 o'clock Borough President Dowling fired his pistol and sent the runners on their journey. There was a mad scramble for leading positions, but out of the turmoil came prominently the forms of Kolehmainen, Pores, Kyronen, Nick Giannakopulos, upon furlough from Camp Wadworth, Spartanburg, S. C.; Louis Kaufman, local junior cross-country champion; Hans Schuster, the Morningside A. C. veteran; Charles Mellor, Logan Square A. C., Chicago; R. E. Secord, Grand Rapids; Arthur Vaughn, Pittsburgh; Fred Travelena, Mohawk A. C., and Terry Halpin, Morningside A. C.

These eleven runners, representing the pick of the field, went to the front, headed alternately by Pores, Kyronen, and Kolehmainen, who jogged along at a stiff gait. At the first mile they were bunched, with Pores, who has discarded the emblem of the Millrose A. A., for the blue of Pelham Bay Naval Training Station, showing in the lead by a slight margin. The time for the first milestone was 4:50.

Over the second mile the order changed several times, and the watches showed 9:57 with W. Stokeley, St. Christopher Club, leading. All the time, however, the field was well bunched, and a blanket would have covered the leaders. Entering the third mile open ground showed between the foremost men and the remainder of the field, and thereafter the race became a question as to which of the leaders would prove the studiest. Kolehmainen led at the third mile, in 15:15, running strongly, and was closely followed by Pores, Kaufman, and Kyronen.

Giannakopulos Drops Out.

At this stage of the race, with the pace still a stiff one, the number of leaders gardually began to thin out, the first to lag behind being Giannakopulos, the sturdy Greek runner, who, before enlisting, sported the colors of the Millrose A. A. The fourth mile found Kaufman leading in 20:43. Pores was close on his heels, followed by Kolehmainen and Kyronen. The fifth mile was rounded in 26:06, with Pores in front, and, with Kyronen and Kolehmainen gradually making the race a three-cornered affair between them. Terry Halpin hung on to the leaders until the sixth mile, when he was about a city block behind Pores, who was leading in 32:08, but, from this stage of the run to the finish the three outstanding figures were Pores, Kyronen, and Kolehmainen.

They ran practically abreast for a time, but at each succeeding mile mark up to the eleventh the Pelham Bay sailor showed in the van. His strong steady stride kept him a slight margin in front of the others and he never seemed to tire. Kyronen also ran strongly and without great exertion. So that at this point in the journey it was hard to decide which of the two was the strongest. Kolehmainen, the most consistent winner up to this year, hung doggedly to his younger rivals up to the eighth mile, when he began to slip from his place among the leaders. At seven miles Pores, leading, was clocked in 37:47 and the former Millrose star turned the eighth mile, still holding to the foremost position, in 43.34. Kolehmainen at this juncture dropped back and was running along gamely, about 100 feet behind Pores and Kyronen.

Pores and Kyronen.

The ninth mile found no change in the order, Pores' time being 49:18, and at the tenth mile the Pelham Bay sailor and Kyronen were fighting it out for the pace-setting position, Pores leading in 53:08. Kolehmainen here was about one block in the rear and was dismissed from further consideration as a possible winner. At the eleventh mile Pores was still leading Kyronen, but not by a very great margin. His time was 1:00:48. In the next mile Kyronen went to the front, slightly increasing his stride, but Pores showed reserve power and held on to the flying heels of the Finn. As they rounded the twelfth mile and came in sight of the finishing point both athletes were going along at a merry pace and neither showed signs of distress. Kyronen was leading and his time was 1:06:22.

Entering the final stretch the runners were traveling practically abreast. Kyronen was leading, but by a slight margin. The Finn, however, soon began to draw upon his reserve strength, and when Kyronen's pace increased Pores tried to hang on. The gallant litle sailor was spent, however, so far as matching strides with the strong-lunged Finn went, and Kyronen opened up a gap between himself and Pores which was stretched to 100 yards at the finish. Kolehmainen finished third, spent, and Otto Laakso of the Keleva A. C. came along to grasp fourth place, close behind Kolehmainen. The first of the visiting runners to finish was A. Vaughn of Pittsburgh, who was sixth.

Unofficially it was declared the Morningside A. C. gained the team prize, but there was indecision about second and third team victors, the doubt being between the Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C., team and St. Christopher Club. At the finish a Liberty bond rally was started for the crowd which jammed City Hall.

MATTY HAS NOT REFUSED.

Dr. Fisher of Y. M. C. A. Declares Baseball Hero Is Needed Abroad.

Christy Mathewson has never declined to go overseas in response to the call of the men of the American expeditionary forces that he direct all the baseball of the troops in the camps and trenches of France.

This was the news brought back from Cincinnati yesterday by Dr. George J. Fisher of the physical department of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., who went to confer with the manager of the Reds regarding his enlisting under the red triangle in the work of providing recreation and keeping up the morale of the men who have gone 3,000 miles from home to fight the Germans.

"Matty told me that he was open-minded on the opportunity which has come to him for service," said Dr. Fisher yesterday. "He denied that he had inspired stories emanating from Cincinnati, and stating that he felt he could be of more value to the country by staying in the United States. I feel that, in view of the unjust criticism that has been leveled at Matty because of this report, I should set him right.

"He will leave the Cincinnati team if the Y. M. C. A. can show him that his duty lies overseas, and that the men there need him to help them to win. The Y. M. C. A. can show him, and a cable message has been sent to France today for confirmation of the original appeal made to Matty. If necessary to convince him that he is needed in France even General Pershing will be willing to add his plea to the call of his troops."

Dr. Fisher further stated that the Y. M. C. A. had been unjustly criticised in certain quarters as having been the agent of the appeal to Matty without proper authority. He produced a copy of a general order issued from the headquarters of the American expeditionary forces, an excerpt from which is as follows:

"The Red Cross will provide for the relief work and the Y. M. C. A. will provide for the amusement and recration of the troops. Commanding officers will co-operate with representatives of these two agendies."

Provision for the amusement and recration of the troops in France was interpreted by Dr. Fisher to mean that the Y. M. C. A. is made responsible by the military authorities for all activities of the fighting men when they are off duty. There is a Commission on Training Camp Activities in this country, regularly constituted by the War Department. Although the Y. M. C. A. has a share in the work in the camps and cantonments of the United States, in France the authority and responsibility of the Y. M. C. A. has been specified as exclusive to the association.

"Therefore," added Dr. Fisher, "when a telegram was sent to Matty more than a week ago by the National War Work Council, and signed by its Chairman, William Sloane, the appeal contained in that telegram was official. Defenders of Matty, rushing to his support after the false report of his declination to answer the call had been circulated, overlooked this point.

"Matty is ready to go, and always has been ready to go. If he could be made to feel that his presence overseas was as necessary as others know it to be. Many men could organize the work as well as he, but he is Matty. And the boys over there are calling:

"'We want Matty!'"

Scots to Meet U. S. at Soccer.

Soccer elevens representing the United States and Scotland will meet in the semi-final round of the international contest under the auspices of the New York Footballers' Protective Association at Clark's Athletic Field in East Newark this morning. A double-header at Lenox Oval, this city, will consist of two matches for the Southern New York Cup.

PLUM SETS RECORD IN TITLE TRAPSHOOT

Jersey Expert Wins Amateur Championship, with 197 Breaks Out of 200.

HAS STRAIGHT RUN OF 154

New Leader Gives Remarkable Exhibition of Accuracy at N. Y. A. C. Travers Island Range.

Fred Plum, a druggist from Atlantic City, known among trapshooters as the "Jersey Peach," won the thirteenth annual amateur trapshooting championship of the United States at the Travers Island traps of the New York Athletic Club yesterday with the remarkable total of 197 out of a possible 200 targets. His individual strings were 24, 25, 25, 25, 25, 25, 24, and 24.

On his way to the title Plum smashed all of the Travers Island trap records. His grand total was the best ever made there. He also smashed the continuous run record by breaking 154 straight targets. After "killing" the first and missing the second "bird," Plum hit his stride and finished the first one hundred with a record score of 99.

After luncheon Plum continued to smash the blue rocks with astonishing regularity. He hit every target until the seventh of his seventh string. This he missed, ending the best run ever made here.

The shoot was exceptional in more ways than one. A perfect day brought a field of 127 gunners to the firing line. So ideal were the conditions that no less than sixty-five had more than 90 in the first 100 targets, and sixty-six did equally well in the second time around the traps. Twenty-six had a grand total of more than 190 out of 200 targets.

Second prize went to Leon H. Davis, Captain of the shooting team of the Boston Athletic Association. He had a grand total of 196. D. I. Bradley, New York Athletic Club, finished third with 195. In order, the other prize winners were C. H. Newcomb, who won the championship last year; G. H. Piercy, J. M. McLaughlin, A. Ivins, B. E. Eldred, G. Gray, and F. S. Tomlin.

The five-man team championship was won by the Independent Gun Club of Philadelphia. It had a total of 969 out of 1,000 targets. The New York A. C. finished second with a total of 966.

RISLEY TAKES GOLF TITLE.

Defeats Knight, at 1 Up, in Final of Atlantic City Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 4.—In one of the most closely contested final-round matches seen here in years Maurice Risley of the home club defeated F. W. Knight of Aronimink by the narrow margin of 1 up to win the chief trophy in the Spring tournament at the Country Club of Atlantic City today. Risley demonstrated he had plenty of fight in his system by winning after being 3 down with only 5 to go.

For several holes prior to that the breaks had gone against the local man, but beginning with the fourteenth he reeled off the holes in par figures. The home hole is 420 yards long, and both second shots fell a few yards short of the green. After the chief shots it was difficult to tell which ball was away, both being practically dead. Risley putted first and sank his for a 4, and then Knight failed on the like. The winner had an 82 to Knight's 83.

The longest match of the day was a twenty-hole tilt in the final of the fourth sixteen, when H. C. Edwards defeated D. A. Bell. They are Atlantic City players.

C. B. Hollingsworth of Greensburg won the handicap, returning 87, 12—75.

The summary:

First Sixteen.—Semi-Final Round—F. W. Knight, Aronimink, beat Frank Barton, Marine and Field Club, 2 and 1; Maurice Risley, Atlantic City, beat William Wallace, Port Sewall, 7 and 5.

Final Round—Risley beat Knight, 1 up.

Second Sixteen.—Semi-Final Round—F. S. Bicking, St. David's, beat A. W. Westney, Atlantic City, 2 and 1; Henry McSweeney, Atlantic City, beat William McFarland, Galen Hall, 3 and 2.

Final Round—McSweeney beat Bicking, 5 and 4.

THIRD SIXTEEN.—Semi-final Round—Louis Stadler, Atlantic City, beat T. F. Carter, Jr., St. Louis, 2 and 1; W. M. Newmound, Washington, beat Benjamin Holt, Atlantic City, 1 up.

Final Round—Stadler beat Newmound, 3 and 1.

FOURTH SIXTEEN.—Semi-final Round—H. C. Edwards, Atlantic City, beat J. H. Morrocks, Frankford, 5 and 4; D. W. Bell, Atlantic City, beat J. M. Thompson, Spring Haven, 4 and 3.

Final Rund—Edwards beat Bell, 1 up, (20 holes.)

COLUMBIA NINE IS BEATEN.

Loses Game to Pennsylvania on Franklin Field, 9 to 5.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—Pennsylvania celebrated her famed "straw hat" baseball day with a 9 to 5 victory over Columbia this afternoon on Franklin Field. The game itself was one of the most wretched exhibitions ever given on the Red and Blue Athletic Oval. It consumed two hours and a half, and long before the weary, drawn-out farce ended what few undergraduates were present when it started had left the field.

The Columbia pitchers were only average in calibre. Farrell lasted until the fifth inning, when he was withdrawn for Koenig. Farrell's delivery had yielded only five hits, but mixed with these safe blows he had passed seven batsmen. There was little difference in the twirling of the visiting collegians when Koenig assumed the pitching. During his stay on the mound Pennsylvania amassed four hits, and he passed three batters.

ARMY WINS RAGGED GAME.

Catholic University Defeated 9 to 4 in Contest of Errors.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 4.—In a loosely played game the Army swamped Catholic University today by a score of 9 to 4. The visitors looked good for six innings, although Kendrick was punished hard by the Army hitters.

In their half of the seventh the soldiers bombarded Kendrick and hits by Tate and Oliphant, a base on balls and numerous errors gave them half a dozen tallies and the game. Murrill held the visitors safely after the fifth.

FORDHAM TOPPLES RUTGERS IN NINTH

Batting Rally in Final Frame Enables Maroon Nine to Win by 8 to 7.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., May 4.—Fordham won an uphill game from Rutgers on Neilson Field here today by a score of 8 to 7. The visitors twice came from behind to tie the count and then with a vicious batting rally won out in the ninth inning. The contest was exciting, although both teams committed many blunders. Fordham made sixteen hits to nine for Rutgers.

In the ninth Keough got his fourth hit, a Texas leaguer, to centre. Shankey bunted and Keough by a good slide made third. Halligan singled to right, scoring Keough. Halligan was caught at second on an attempted steal. Coletti singled, went to second on an error, and scored on Abbott's single.

Rutgers made a great bid to tie the count in the final inning. Taliferro flied out, but Kelly and Wilkins singled in succession. Robeson's grounder forced Wilkins at second. McQuade then sent a bad one to Halligan and Kelly came home on the wild throw. A ground rule allowed only two bases or else Robeson would have also scored. Breckley, batting for Rule, flied out.

Keough and Halligan made four hits in five times at bat.

KENNEALLY TOPS IN SCORE.

Former Iowa Athlete Leads 4th Co. to Victory on Track.

Mainly through the efforts of Kenneally, a former University of Iowa athlete, the Fourth Company of the United States Electrical School, Brooklyn, captured principal point honors in the annual electrical school track and field meet at Brooklyn Athletic Field yesterday. Kenneally, showing exceptional all-around ability, won the 100-yard dash in 10 2-5 seconds, the running broad jump, and the 220-yard dash. This performance aided his company to emerge from the meet with the winning total of 32 points.

Fifth Company athletes finished second, with 25 tallies, and the First Company was third, with 14 markers. Other companies which scored points were Sixth Company, 7; Eighth Company, 5; Second Company, 4; Seventh Company, 3.

PENN GOLF TEAM LOSES.

Beaten, 10 to 6, by Columbia on Richmond C. C. C. Links.

Fresh from a victory over the Harvard golf team, achieved at Baltusrol Friday, the Pennsylvania golf team was unprepared for the setback it received at the hands of the Columbia golfers at the Richmond County Country Club yesterday. Penn was defeated by 10 to 6 at the Nassau system of scoring, and won two matches of the six played and was all square in the other.

A. L. Walker, Jr., and George Bijur, the leaders of the Blue and White team, each disposed of their opponents in fairly convincing style. Walker had the best score of the day with a 79, which is not up to the standard of that young expert, since he was playing over his home course, where he holds the amateur record. However, the greens were in none too good condition, and there is still room for improvement on the fairways.

Walker defeated M. M. Jack of Penn, Chairman of the Intercollegiate Golf Association, at 2 and 1, and scored 2 points for his side thereby. Bijur took the measure of Charles Kingt, another Penn star, in the singles at 5 and 4, winning 3 points for Columbia.

In the four-ball matches, Walker, paired with J. R. Ward, defeated Jack and H. E. Calbes, 3 and 2. Neither of the four played the golf expected from such able contenders. The other four-ball match finished all square.

SINGLES.—A. L. Walker, Jr., Columbia, defeated M. M. Jack, Penn, 2 to 1; George A. Bijur, Columbia, defeated Charles Kingt, Penn, 5 and 4; H. E. Cables, Pen, defeated J. R. Ward, Columbia, 2 and 1; George Webster, Penn, defeated C. L. Rhodenburg, Columbia, 3 and 2.

FOUR-BALL.—Walker and Ward defeated Jack and Calbes, 3 and 2; Bijur and Rhodenburg finished all square with Kingt and Webster.

SAILORS WIN WITH HOMERS.

Pelham Lads Get Two Circuit Blows, Blanking In-Er-Seals.

An unexpected outburst of home runs came from the bats of two sailors of the Pelham Bay Training Station yesterday and gave the bluejackets a victory over the In-Er-Seals at Pelham Bay by the score of 2 to 0. These wallops, coming in the third inning, spoiled what otherwise might have been a perfectly good day for Shrank, a right-hand twirler for the In-Er-Seals, and put a great crowd of sailors who watched the proceedings in high glee.

Bauer and Cronin were the lusty bat swingers, and bother of them sent their blows to the far reaches of the Pelham Bay left field territory. Their four-base blows were two of the five that Shrank permitted the sailors to take off his delivery. Saunnier, the Pelham Bay southpaw, baffled the In-Er-Seals with his deceptive offerings and held them to five scattered hits.

The score by innings:

VIOLET LOSES TO STEVENS.

Rally in Ninth Saves N. Y. U. from Shutout at Baseball.

The Stevens Institute baseball team won by 7 to 2 from N. Y. U. yesterday at Castle Point Field, Hoboken. Captain Drew, the Stevens second baseman, was the star, accepting seven chances without error while out of four times at bat he hit twice and sacrificed twice. Only twenty-nine men faced Carlson in nine innings. Klaess was the star for N. Y. U., accepting four chances without error at third base and making two hits, one a homerun, out of four times at bat. A rally by N. Y. U. in the ninth inning prevented a shut-out.

HARD HITTING GIVES NAVY NINE VICTORY

Home Runs Plentiful in Game Won by Midshipmen from Mountaineers.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 4.—Hard hitting and erratic fielding marked the game today between the Naval Academy and the University of West Virginia, which the Navy lads won by 12 to 4. In the opening inning the visitors scored once by timely batting. Dawson singled, Dorsey sacrificed, and Rodgers singled Dawson home. In their half of the inning the Midshipmen scored four times on a base on balls, singles by Doyle, Whelchel, Milner, and Pino, and errors by Vune and Wilcox.

Flinn's single, followed by homers by Rodgers and Wilcox, tied the score in the third, but it was the visitors' last serious effort. A single, a sacrifice, Wilcox's second error, Goughley's triple and a homer by Alexander, who batted for Olsen, gave the Midshipmen four runs in the third. A final three were added in the eighth on singles by Stubbs, Doyle, and Milner, Olsen's sacrifice and two more errors by Wilcox.

Naval Reserve Nine Wins Easily.

The baseball team of the Naval Reservo at Thirty-second Street, Brooklyn, had an easy time downing the Turner Construction Company nine yesterday on the Crescent Athletic Club's field at Bay Ridge. The final score favored the bluejackets by 15 to 4. Curry, a former Holy Cross pitcher, was on the mound for the sailors, and his work was the biggest factor in the naval triumph.

MRS. GAVIN WILL MEET LOW TODAY

Women's Eastern and Metropolitan Golf Champion to Play at Baltusrol.

MATCH IS FOR RED CROSS

Contest First of Series of Exhibitions with Leading Men Players to Aid Fund.

Mrs. William A. Gavin of Baltusrol, the women's Eastern and metropolitan champion, will begin her golf exhibitions for the benefit of the Red Cross at Baltusrol today. In her first attempt to dethrone the professionals in a handicap match, Mrs. Gavin will meet George Low, and both will be enjoying the comforts and advantages of the home course since Low is the professional at Baltusrol.

Following her match with Low, Mrs. Gavin is to be busy almost every Saturday and Sunday for the rest of May, and she has just about completed arrangements for three matches with a trio of stars to be played in June. Her schedule as arranged now calls for a match with Robert White at Montclair, May 11; with Max Marston at Hackensack, May 12; with Archie Sanderson at Sleepy Hollow, May 19; with Jim Barnes at Wykagyl, May 25, and with Jack Williams at Piping Rock, May 26. Some time during June she is to meet Chick Evans, the national open and amateur champion, at Washington; Walter Hagen, former open champion, at Rochester, and Jerome D. Travers, one of her previous victims, in a return engagement at Nassau.

In all of these matches Mrs. Gavin is to receive a nine-stroke handicap in eighteen holes, the strokes to be accorded on the long holes. Some of the professionals, principally Jim Barnes, insisted that she accept a handicap of twelve strokes, as it was considered beyond the strength and ability of any woman expert to play against a man of top rank with such a low handicap. However, Mrs. Gavin is of the opinion that inasmuch as she defeated Jerome Travers with a nine-stroke handicap she should play the rest of her matches on this basis. She contends that it will be time enough to change the handicap when she has been defeated by 8 up or something near that figure in one of her matches.

Surprised Professionals.

When Mrs. Gavin met Jerry Travers last Fall at Englewood and Wykagyl, George Low was one of the few local professionals who considered the match anywhere near a sporting proposition. The rest of the so-called experts of the game were firm in the belief that a man of Travers's ability could easily dispose of the best feminine player at odds of a nine-stroke nature. However, after Mrs. Gavin had made the inward journey at Englewood in 37 and had played the short holes at Wykagyl every bit as well as Travers did, most of the professionals sided in with Low. The Baltusrol professional does not regard the women's local leader at all slightly and undoubtedly will strive to be at the top of his game today in order to avoid defeat.

Low should give Mrs. Gavin a battle all the way, but in her next two matches she should have no difficulty upholding the cause of femininity in golf. Robert White is President of the Professional Golfers' Association, and as such is respected throughout the country for his leadership. He also gained fame by building the excellently laid-out North Shore course. As a golfer he has yet to make his mark.

Max Marston, former North and South champion and one of the best players developed locally, has not played much golf of late. He suffered a severe illness a year ago which forced him out of the country's service, and he has been recuperating ever since. A few months ago he announced that he expected to take up tournament golf again soon, but he has had few chances to play. In a nine-stroke handicap he may find many obstacles to overcome before he can expect to keep within hailing distance of Mrs. Gavin.

Probably the match which will attract the greatest local interest will be Mrs. Gavin's meeting with Jim Barnes, the Western open champion and record holder for seventy-two holes. When the match was first suggested to Barnes he insisted that it be held over a long course if at all, and also suggested that it be at a twelve-stroke handicap basis. Mrs. Gavin acquiesced to the long course, but objected to the added strokes in this case. Mrs. Gavin is at home at Wykagyl and perfectly able to turn in a card of 88, or better, on that difficult course.

To do better than 75 there, Barnes will have to play without many mistakes. Alex Smith, professional at Wykagyl, believed that Mrs. Gavin would not break 90 at Wykagyl, but was convinced when he saw her play against Travers an approximate six strokes better.

Washington is to be treated to the match in which Mrs. Gavin will meet the pride of Chicago, Chick Evans. The ninateur champion wrote to Mrs. Gavin a few days ago and accepted her challenge for a match, suggesting at the same time that it be played in Washington. Just what course is to be obtained for the match is not known yet, although the affair probably will be held at the Columbia Country Club, where Fred McLeod, the former open champion, is professional. Evans was a bit chivalrous in his answer to Mrs. Gavin's challenge, wishing her all the luck of the game and hoping that she would not beat him too far. The match with Evans is to be played June 16.

Georgia Tech Showed Skill.

The Georgia Tech golf team made an enviable record in its short invasion of the North. The quartet of players met Columbia, Yale, and Pennsylvania in successive matches and won all three with a bit to spare. Only Penn, seemed at all able to combat the cleverness of Perry Adair, Tom Prescott, Ewing Watkins, and Manager Howden, the Southern team, since Penn. was only beaten 14 to 8, while Columbia lost, 15 to 0, and Yale was snowed under by 17 to 0. In fairness to the Northern collegiane it must be mentioned that the Southerners had much more practice and were better prepared for hard matches.

Golf leaders of this country are trying to bring Harry Vardon and James Braid across the Atlantic from England for some matches here this Summer. Vardon is said to be agreeable to the trip, but is having a hard time to convince Braid that it would benefit golf, some war relief fund, and the players to take the journey. The last time Vardon was in this country he was accompanied by Edward Ray and both were shocked into recognizing a growing ability of American players by being defeated in the national open tournament by Francis Ouimet.

Already the Western Golf Association has the golf leaders of its district making a bid for Red Cross funds. Chick Evans, Jock Hutchinson, Jim Barnes and Gil Nicholls have played several matches and are realizing a lot of money. Probably their best success was obtained at French Lick, where nearly $20,000 was realized. One ball was sold at this exhibition for $1,700, and a woman enthusiast paid $500 for a half hour lesson from Evans.

Led by Tom Kerrigan, former professional at Siwanoy, and now a first class seaman, stationed at Pelham Bay, the naval school there is to have a fine golf team. While Kerrigan is the outstanding star of the lot he is ably seconded by experienced players such as Commander F. R. Lackey, Lieutenant W. T. Cochran, Lieutenant A. M. Harmon, and Ensign J. R. Hyde. This team will entertain challenges from any source, and will be especially pleased to hear from Sergeant Francis Ouimet's Camp Devens Invincibles.

The Camp Devens team for a time appeared to be an outstanding aggregation, but it has suffered some lately from shifts of its players. Lieutenant Ray Gordon, who was counted upon by Ouimet to be one of the strongest players, has left Camp Devens for duty at a Southern cantonment. Sergeant Chris Dunphy also will be lost to the team as he is to enter a Southern school for the Quartermaster Department.

Among the members of the Professional Golfers' Association now in the nation's war service are: Frank H. Hollwood, Artere E. Claeyssaens, B. A. Conroy, John C. Davison, Earl U. Dean, James Duncan, Tom Kerrigan, Frank T. McNamara, J. R. McNulty, Stanley F. Pelcher, Gene Phelan; Joseph F. Wever, Eddie Towne, W. E. Dalgleish, Ralph Thomee, Eddie Loos, M. J. Brady, Ben Knight, Peter Soutar, P. A. Williams, William S. Bathle, J. H. Way, J. F. Silvester, Duncan Cuthbert, Stanley B. Davis, W. Dow, J. McIntyre, and Harry Robb. This list is not complete, since it contains only the names of those professionals who are known to be in the service and does not include the many who have quietly volunteered.

BRITISH ATHLETES KILLED.

Names of Many Noted Performers in Latest Casualty List.

LONDON, May 4.—Many well known names of British sportsmen who have fallen on the western front appear in the latest casualty list issued. Captain C. E. P. Sankey, wounded, stroked the eight and four of the Royal Engineers Boat Club at Henley on several occasions. Captain C. F. A. Ley, killed while flying, took a keen interest in all games and sport and was an excellent shot, being a member of the Malvern College eight, and shooting at Bisley in 1911 and 1912. He also formed one of the teams of four which won the Veterans' Trophy for Malvern at Bisley in 1913.

Lieutenant J. F. Worsley, killed, is the famous long distance runner of Oxford University, where he gained his "blue." Lieutenant E. D. C. Caswell, killed, played in the Tonbridge School cricket eleven in 1912 and 1913. Lieutenant P. la T. Foster, reported missing, rowed in the First Trinity boat which won the Thames Challenge Cup at Henley in 1911 and was Head of the River at Cambridge.

Captain F. J. D. Knowling, killed, was a fine all around athlete, being especially well known in the hockey world. At 15½ he received his hockey eleven colors at Cheltenham and he subsequently played centre half for Shropshire, the Midlands, and for several years in succession for Wales. In 1914 he was a member of the team selected to represent the English Hockey Association and was playing as centre half at Munich a few weeks before the outbreak of the war.

Captain J. L. Whalley, died of wounds, was a fine golfer, and was President of the Lancashire Golf Union. Major W. G. Wilson, the famous English international, Richmond and Army Rugby player, is again reported wounded. Captain F. H. B. Selous, eldest son of the late Captain F. G. Selous, the famous big game hunter and explorer, has also fallen. The young officer was Captain of the Rugby School fifteen in 1914-15, when he also won the athletic championship of that great institution. Captain T. S. Gibson, wounded, is the well-known Rugby player of Caius College, Cambridge. Lieutenannt Thomas McKenny Hughes, whose death is reported, was one of the leading oarsmen of the London Rowing Club just before the war. He was at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, and joined the famous rowing club after leaving the university. In 1912 at Henley he stroked the London Grand eight and the Wyfold four. In 1914 Hughes rowed bow in the Grand and Wyfold, winning the latter event. He afterward took up sculling. Captain John E. Seager, severely wounded, was the well-known soccer player and captain of the Cardiff Marlborough Club. Captain R. M. M. Lockhart, the famous Marlborough and Sandhurst Rugby footballer and who also played for the Royal Military College against Woolwich in 1912, has been awarded the Milliary Cross.

MANY TRACK MEETS PLANNED BY A. A. U.

Local Officials Hope to Have Interesting Outdoor Season of Athletics.

The outdoor track and field season, ushered in by the annual Pennsylvania relay carnival recently on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, is an uncertain quantity, according to the local athletic authorities. With many athletes of the district already in war service, and more soon to follow, it is admitted that the coming season does not loom up as promising.

Local officials, however, hope to keep alive interest in the outdoor sports, and they will have the full co-operation of others interested in athletics as a builder up of the youth of the nation. Scholastic athletic meets are planned by the Public Schools Athletic League on as great a scchedule as ever, and already details are being worked out on some of the early season competitions.

Despite the conditions the Metropolitan A. A. U. has pledged itself to do everything in its power to stimulate interest in athletics and to develop new talent to replace those who have gone to war. Efforts will be made to secure privileges for the smaller clubs to conduct weekly or semi-weekly meets at the various public playgrounds, and, with the unusually large number of novices, there appears a chance to develop some first-class athletes.

What is regarded as one of the most favorable steps taken by the Metropolitan A. A. U. since this country entered the war is the fact that the Junior and Senior Track and Field Championship Committee have voted unanimously to divide their annual title tests. Jacob W. Stumpf, Vice President of the association, was the originator of this scheme, and his plan met instant favor with the other members.

His scheme calls for the abandonment of the old plan of holding the meets with one day for each, and provides that they be divided into four meets, or two days for each meet. This, it is expected, will afford better opportunities for more interesting competitions and will aid in securing large entries for the fourteen events on each program. It is argued that with the new order of things senior athletes will have opportunities to gain titles in several events, as, with the dividing of the meets into two sections, they will be given a few days' rest between meets. In the junior meet, too, it is expected that the new plan will be the means of producing better competitions with more representative fields.

Provision has been made for the novice athletes and the army and navy track and field stars at local camps and stations. It is proposed to conduct the meets within one week of each other and on each program to include seven championship events. To these will be added one army and navy event, one novice event, and one open A. A. U. handicap event. This, it is predicted, will furnish further incentive for the novice athletes.

The dates for the games have yet to be decided, and this detail may be disposed of shortly. June 22 or 29 has been suggested for the first half of the Junior program, with July 13 or 20 for the second half. In the senior title tests Aug. 17 or 24 has been considered for the first instalment of the meet and Sept. 14 for the second half. The place for the games also is an undecided factor, Singer Field, Elizabeth, N. J.; Castle Point Field, Hoboken, N. J.; Macomb's Dam Park, City College Stadium, and Brooklyn Athletic Field being under consideration.

TO PLAN SUMMER MEETS.

Intersectional Athletic League Will Convene Tuesday.

Officials of the local Intersectional Athletic League will hold a meeting at the Morningside A. C. on Tuesday night for the purpose of adopting plans for athletic meets during the coming outdoor season. The league comprises sectional affiliations in Harlem, the Bronx, Yorkville, lower Manhattan and Long Island, and its club membership includes all the smaller organizations in these districts.

The growing interest in amateur athletics by the members of these various organizations has spurred the league heads to take action on the matter of promoting weekly or biweekly meets at the local playground centres throughout the Summer. Efforts have already been taken toward securing the privileges for these meets, and it is expected that some definite course, with probably a new schedule of meets, will be adopted at Tuesday's conference.

Many of the league's athletes are of the novice class, comprising a great number who have joined the organization's clubs since this country's entrance in the war. The older athletes, including the stars of the district, have either joined the colors or been drafted, and it is expected that with the arrangement of the proposed athletic meets, new talent will be developed among the novices, who will in time replace the stars who are now fighting with Uncle Sam in the battle for democracy and world peace.

YALE CREWS ARE NAMED.

'Varsity and Freshman Oarsmen Are Boated for Penn Races.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 4.—Professor Mather Abbott, coach of the Yale crews, today announced the make-up of the two boats which will row the first races for Yale since the United States entered the war. The 'Varsity and freshman eights will meet the University of Pennsylvania corresponding crews on the Schuylkill next Saturday.

The 1921 eight is giving a beautiful exemplification of the Abbott stroke and is clearly up to the usual Yale class standard.

The 'Varsity crew gave promise till last week, when it was badly wrecked by the departure for war service of Robinson and Weir, two of the strongest oarsmen in the waist of the shell. To fill their places Dr. Abbott was compelled to raid the second eight, where material was scant. Since that time the eight has failed to approach the speed exhibited in practice.

In place of the oarsmen who have just left the boat Adams and Patterson have been selected, and the make-up of the crew, with the weights of the oarsmen, is as follows: Stroke, Captain Hyatt, 168 pounds; No. 7 Vail, 169; No. 6, Adams, 176; No. 5, Price, 174; No. 4, Knox, 175; No. 3, Mead, 176; No. 2, Parsons, bow, McHenry, 160; coxswain, Knott, 125.

The average weight of the shell is about 172 pounds, the lightest 'Varsity eight Yale has ever boated for an intercollegiate event. Correspondingly, Professor Abbott has been unable to find a light coxswain, Knott, who has been chosen to handle the rudder, weighing 125 pounds.

The freshman eight is composed as follows: Stroke, Heminway; No. 7, Benson; No. 6, Rockefeller; No. 5, Driscoll; No. 4, Ewing, No. 3, Hare; No. 2, Moulton; bow, Mali, coxswain, Carson.

For the first time in Yale history, Yale will row a 'Varsity race in shells which the university does not own. The two crews will be boated in craft tendered by the Undine Boat Club of Philadelphia to save the expense of transportation of heavy shells. The Yale oars will be shipped Tuesday, and Frank Holmes, the former champion single sculler of America, who is the Yale boatrigger, will go to Quakertown the same day to take charge of the rigging of the shells.

TITLE FIGHT TALK IS TIRING PUBLIC

No Battle Ground in Sight, So Willard and Fulton Are Unlikely to Meet on July 4.

With each succeeding day doubt grows concerning the holding of the proposed heavyweight championship bout between Jess Willard, title holder, and Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., plasterer. Heralded as a genuine probability with the first announcement of the signing of articles by both boxers, events have transpired since which have furnished foundation for the general opinion that the contest will not be staged as scheduled on July 4. Latest reports are to the effect that Colonel J. C. Miller, the Bliss, Okla., oil magnate, who is promoting the match, has abandoned hopes of securing the promotion privilege from either St. Paul or Minneapolis. Since he had practically arranged to hold the bout at a point midway between these two cities, the refusal of a sanction from the authoritics of both cities upsets all his plans. Now he is reported negotiating for a place to hold the match either in Utah, preferably at Ogden, or Colorado, possibly at Denver, where championship ring contests have been held in the past.

What the outcome of Colonel Miller's present negotiations will be remains to be seen. While he was in this city some weeks ago the Western promoter several times intimated that he had received offers for the bout from these places, but never flat-footedly admitted that he was giving the offers his serious consideration. He did, however, for the greater part of his stay, lean kindly toward New Haven, Conn., but, for some unannounced reason, shortly before his departure, Colonel Miller discarded this place as the possible battleground. Subsequently came his definite decision that the bout had been awarded to St. Paul and Minneapolis, but the unfavorable criticism aroused when Colonel Miller's plans were announced forced an abandonment of this site, and there is evidence that the boxing public is wearying of the proposed heavyweight championship match.

The inauguration of boxing bouts of eight rounds' duration under the new Hurley law in New Jersey will be delayed, pending the issuance of licenses to the great number of promoters who are seeking them. It was expected that this business would have been cleared up at the last meeting of the Boxing Commission at Trenton last Tuesday, but the matter was put over until the next meeting, which will be held Tuesday.

It was originally planned to hold the first boxing show under the new order of things on May 2, but this date was later pushed back a week. Now it develops the potential promoters are compelled to again postpone the opening, this time indefinitely. The first series of bouts were carded for the New Jersey Sportsmen's Association at Weehawken, N. J., one of the many places seeking a club license.

The extensive boxing entertainment scheduled for yesterday at Pelham Bay Naval Training Station has been postponed until June 4. Benny Leonard, lightweight champion and civilian instructor of boxing at Camp Upton, was to have been a principal in one of the feature bouts, but his journey to California to engage in two four-round bouts for the Athletic Activities Fund caused the officials at Pelham Bay to abandon their bouts temporarily.

Soldier Bartfield, the local welterweight, and Harry Greb, Pittsburgh's aggressive boxer, will be opponents Friday night in a ten-round bout at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh. The contest will be held under the auspices of the Keystone A. C. It will be the first bout held in Pittsburgh under direct police supervision, the police authorities recently having adopted a set of rules governing the promotion of the sport in the city. Greb recently suffered from blood poisoning, but has recovered from his illness and is training for the coming bout.

Irish Patsy Cline, the Harlem lightweight, will engage in his next bout at Philadelphia next Saturday. He is scheduled to box six rounds before the National A. C. with Rocky Kansas, a Buffalo boxer, who has gained a reputation as a heavy hitter. One of Kansas's latest ring triumphs was a knockout victory over Artie O'Leary at the same club. Both boxers have agreed to weigh in at 135 pounds three hours before the bout.

The published reports that Frankie Burns, New Jersey's leading bantamweight boxer, had been inducted into the national army, have been found to be without foundation. Burns is listed in Class 4A through having a wife and two children dependent on his ring earnings for support, and in addition he contributes to the support of a sister. The Jersey City veteran is scheduled to appear in the principal bout at the opening of the New Jersey Sportsmen's Association at Weehawken, N. J.

The amateur boxing tournament which the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. will conduct at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory May 23 and 25 is attracting the attention of the local district's amateur ring stars. Four classes are listed, and since the issuance of entry blanks entries have been coming in rapidly to A. A. U. headquarters. Among the first to enter was B. C. Chattman of the Sixth Company, U. S. Naval Electrical School, Brooklyn, N. Y. He is listed for competition in the novice class at 150 pounds.

The New York A. C. has an amateur tournament listed for May 9 and 11, which promises sterling competition in the quartet of classes scheduled. This tournament will probably mark the closing of the season for the Winged Foot organization, and it is planned to make it a gala occasion. As usually attractive prizes will be distributed among the successful boxers in each class, and the club officials anticipate entries from the leading boxers of the district. As has been the custom of the Mercury Foot organization, although the season, one class has been set aside for novices. In this coming tournament the non-winners will box at 110 pounds.

St. Antony Athlete Enlists.

John J. McAuley of the Knights of St. Antony, one of the foremost middle distance runners, has enlisted with the naval reserve forces at Pelham Bay. McAuley was a prominent runner in local track sports and was a member of the Knights of St. Antony relay team. He also aided in gaining the Intersectional Athletic League relay championship title for the Long Island Athletic League.

PLAYERS ADVOCATE TENNIS FOR GIRLS

Mrs. Hope Doeg, Woman Professional, Says Sport Should Be Universally Adopted.

EARLY START ENCOURAGED

Young Children Are Asked to Become Acquainted with Racquet and Ball.

The United States National Lawn Tennis Association having sanctioned tennis tournaments for girls during the coming Summer, with the culmination in the national championship which is to be played in conjunction with the women's title matches at the Philadelphia Cricket Club the attention of many of the feminine experts is now being directed toward instilling the best principles of play among the coming generation of stars. Mrs. Hope Doeg of Santa Monica, one of the famous Sutton sisters of Southern California, who has the distinction of being the only woman in the country acting as a professional tennis instructor, has written interestingly of the game as it should be played by the girls.

"To have a national championship for girls, played in connection with the women's national at Philadelphia, is an excellent idea and I strongly advocate it," she says, thus emphatically indorsing the action of the tennis association in establishing the event at its last annual meeting.

In outlining her ideas for teaching tennis, she says that children should have a tennis bat and ball when they are four years old. By starting thus early they become somewhat accustomed to the "feel" of the game's implements, so that they take to instruction much more readily.

"Children should begin to learn when they are 10 or 12 years old," she says. "For little ones, racquets should weigh about eleven ounces; for the bigger youngsters—10 or 12 years—it is best to use a racquet weighing about 12 or 13 ounces. No girl should play with a racquet more than 13½ ounces in weight.

"If full benefit is to be derived from the sport, wraps should always be put on after playing, and as soon as possible a shower should be taken, followed by a change to dry clothing." Mrs. Doeg is chary of "don'ts," but she does issue this warning to beginners:

"Avoid a heavy meal just before playing and don't take iced drinks. This advice is common knowledge to boys who have been in training, but its importance is often ignored by girls who have lacked the kind of instruction.

"Every school should have, besides a tennis court, a handball court for practicing strokes." With this comment she shows that constant practice is essential if the sureness and accuracy are to be developed that make for success on the courts.

Summing up her argument that tennis is a splendid sport for girls and should be encouraged at every opportunity, she makes the following points:

It is a good, active exercise, but not too strenuous.

It teaches one to be quick and graceful in footwork.

It develops plenty of strength and muscle.

It reduces the weight if one is inclined to be too heavy, and makes the figure graceful.

It teaches quick thinking because one must always be on the alert to find an adversary's weakness and place the shots accordingly.

It teaches self-control and fine standards of sportsmanship.

Supplementing this is the opinion of Martin A. Delaney of Chicago, who writes under the head of "Keeping Fit" the following: "My advice to all frail and nerve-shaken girls is to take up the game of tennis as a regular exercise. Right now is the time to make your plans. I believe that tennis is one of the best of all games if played regularly and in moderation. It develops all the muscles, but particularly the arms and legs. It also cultivates accuracy, speed, agility and endurance. Tennis is a game for all—a game for boys and girls as well as men and women. It is a game which may be made strenuous if so desired by the players themselves, or just a moderate exercise. It gets you out in the open air and sunshine and keeps you jumping around like a grasshopper all the while. It increases circulation and sends you home with a real appetite."

The advent of warm weather finds conditions unusually favorable for tennis because of the daylight saving law. Every one now has a chance to get in lots of play between business and bedtime. With the gospel of physical fitness winning new converts daily it is easy to see why many youngsters are turning to tennis. And on this point the last Sutton saying is: "As the girls grow older don't let them give up their tennis. I know of two women today who are between the ages of 50 and 60 and who play a fine game."

YOU DON'T HAVE TO FILL UP THE GAS TANK IN A CHALMERS EVERY TIME YOU TAKE THE CAR OUT.

You have two little Scotch sentinels up in your engine that watch the gas for you. Both are stingy.

One is the great Chalmers Hot Spot device, which isn't much to look at because it's so simple. It performs an operation on gas very much like a coffee grinder does on coffee. Only it also warms up the gas and puts it in 100% condition for power results.

The other is the Ram's Horn Manifold, which took 90 days to design, once the Chalmers engineers found their idea was right.

This device carries the gas vapor from the Hot Spot to the cylinders with almost hospital tenderness, so that when the explosions come there's not a thing left except the power.

WAR CLOUD REIGNS FAVORITE IN DERBY

Defeat of Escoba and Sun Briar Forces Macomber Colt Into the Limelight.

KILMER NOT DISCOURAGED

Owner of Champion of Last Year Believes Thoroughbred Will Come Through in Time.

With Sun Briar and Escoba recently displaced from favoritism for the Kentucky Derby by reason of defeats, it appears likely that A. K. Macomber will again supply the public choice for the classic in War Cloud, a horse that has been trained in the East, and has done all that has been asked of him in his trials at Belmont Park. A year ago the Macomber stable was considered even more formidable than it is this year, for Jennings had in his charge five candidates, but the best of them went wrong almost on the eve of the contest.

Though the defeat of Escoba should not be taken too seriously, as he was competing against older horses, and was giving away weight, according to the scales, it had one feature that should prove of immense value to those in charge of the Macomber candidate. Two 4-year-olds finished in front of Escoba in the Baby Bond Handicap, in which the Derby favorite made his first essay of the season. One of these was the imported Hollister, owned by Mr. Macomber, and the other, Bribed Voter, owned by E. R. Bradley.

The victory of Hollister provides Trainer Jennings with an excellent trial horse for War Cloud in his final gallops on the Kentucky tracks. If War Cloud is able to dispose of Hollister, Mr. Macomber may be sure that he has a strong candidate for the classic, as so far Escoba's showing has been as good as any of the leading 3-year-olds which have been tried in races this season.

Sun Briar's defeat was more decisive and of more consequence, as he was beaten by two 3-year-olds, both of which are engaged in the Derby. Willis Sharpe Kilmer, who owns last year's champion 3-year-old, is not inclined to take even his defeat by Jim Heffering and Choirmaster seriously.

His argument is that as it was Sun Briar's first appearance the colt is likely to improve in his future races. That is true, but there is nothing to prevent Jim Heffering and Choirmaster from improving in like ratio, and this would give the edge to the former. That Jim Heffering is believed to be a colt above the ordinary is proved by his being entered for the Withers Stakes at Belmont Park, where he will be called on to meet the best of the Eastern youngsters.

Everest is another candidate for the Derby which was beaten last Tuesday, and as War Cloud so far has only shown his worth in trials it is thought that unless the Derby Preliminary shows a great development on the part of those entered in the Derby, the latter race will be one of the most open in years. This race will be run during the coming week and will therefore prove of more than ordinary interest. Even that race will not be considered as at all decisive of the ultimate Derby winner, for it must be remembered that Omar Khayyam was well beaten in the preliminary last Spring, but later carried off the bigger prize in fine style.

James Butler's stock of yearlings is steadily increasing at East View Farm. The latest addition is a chestnut filly by Pebbles out of Turf Star, by Nasturtium-More Than Queen.

LOUIS CHEVROLET TO RACE.

Expected to Compete in Contest at Sheepshead Bay May 30.

Louis Chevrolet, Speedway champion of 1917, may be a starter in the Harkness Handicap, which will inaugurate the automobile racing season at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on Memorial Day, May 30. The Franco-Swiss driver has not yet made known his plans for the coming campaign, but Promoter William H. Wellman is confident he can induce the champion to enter the 100-mile contest, for which $30,000 in prizes and bonuses is offered.

Chevrolet was the biggest winner on the Speedway's last season. His greatest achievement was in winning the Harkness Gold Trophy race in September, with an average of 110.4 miles an hour for the 100 miles. In this race he defeated the greatest drivers in the country.

His other two prominent victories were at Cincinnati and Chicago. On the Cincinnati Speedway he nosed out his brother, Gaston, by several seconds in the 250-mile race, while at Chicago he beat a strong field in the Grand American race at 100 miles.

Chevrolet, though born in France, has been in this country so long that he has come to be looked upon really as an American. His triumphs last season brought back to America the Speedway championship after it had been in possession of foreigners for two years. In his races last year Chevrolet drove a car of his own design made by his own hands in America of American materials.

Wellman yesterday started to round up his talent for the big race, which is less than four weeks off. It is his intention to have the foremost pilots at the starting line for the handicap. Among the first drivers he expects to sign up is Dario Resta, the speed king of 1915 and 1916, who competed in only one race last season, which did not serve as a true test.

Arthur Duray of France, European champion and holder of the world's record of 147 miles an hour, has cabled his acceptance of an invitation to compete on American speedways, but has not yet informed Wellman when he intends to sail for this country.

Other events are also being planned for the program of the holiday carnival. A number of other track events, as well as airplane contests by the greatest men and women fliers, are among the specials being arranged.

STATE HAS GAME PRESERVE.

Plot of Ground Willed by Late H. Salem Curtiss.

By a bill which has just received the signature of Governor Whitman, New York State accepts title to a twenty-seven-acre game preserve that was bequeathed to the State by the late H. Salem Curtiss, a sportsman of Volney, in Oswego County, who died in July, 1917. His will provides that the place be kept and maintained as a game preserve and breeding place for game, provided the State will accept the same.

The preserve will be placed under the jurisdiction of the Conservation Commission. Commissioner George D. Pratt has evinced considerable interest in the property, as it is the first bequest of this kind that has ever been made to the State. He sent experts to inspect the place, and they reported that it is an ideal location for a bird and game sanctuary. It is located upon the bank of the Oswego River, is high and dry, and consists of about ten acres of woods, the rest being open field. The timber consists mainly of chestnut, in a good healthy condition, with no sign of blight. There are some large hemlocks and beeches, and the whole woodlot shows the result of past good care.

The advantage of the spot as a wild game refuge is further enhanced by the fact that owners of large private estates which adjoin the Curtiss place are in sympathy with the protection of wild life, and are willing to allow their properties to be made a part of the State conservation plan. In this way it is hoped that an area large enough for effective results can be reserved as a bird and game sanctuary.

RICH FOODS RETARD CREW.

Cornell Coach Insists Upon Less Pastry for Oarsmen.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 4.—Rich food and pastry have retarded the development of the Cornell 'Varsity crew, according to Coach Charles E. Courtney, who has ordered the oarsmen on the 'Varsity squad to live on a simpler diet. He concluded that some of his best men were not pulling their full weight because of improper diet. Courtney's long experience enables him to tell from the way a man works in the boat whether he has been maintaining a proper diet.

With the abolition of the official training tables the men on various athletic teams have not eaten together, but have taken their meals at fraternity and boarding houses. This practice, Coach Courtney believes, has been injurious, so he has found a central eating house and he prescribes the sort of food to be eaten.

This informal training table is not against the spirit of the association's rule, because it involves no expenditure of money, or any elaborate outlay of any kind. Each man pays his own bills, but he has the benefit of the menus prepared by Coach Courtney.

The crew situation is no nearer solution than it was last week, but with improved training conditions Courtney hopes to be able to select definitely the 'Varsity eight within a week or so. In the last few days an eight stroked by Handwerger has been making a favorable impression. The new eight contains several oarsmen who at the beginning of the season started out as members of the first 'Varsity crew.

It is the one crew Courtney has put together so far that has made time approximating that which the usually good Cornell 'Varsity eight ought to make at this period of training. In a two-mile special time trial the other day this crew covered the course in about the same time that the 1916 crew, also a good eight, did two years ago on the same day.

Handwerger, who is stroking this eight, paced the freshman crew at Poughkeepsie three years ago. He is one of the few experienced men in the present 'Varsity squad. Handwerger's eight is made up as follows:

Bow, Ruby; 2, E. B. Smith; 3, Lounsberry; 4, Davenport; 5, Dodson; 6, Aloe; 7, Spiegelberg; stroke, Handwerger, and coxswain, Marx.

The other 'Varsity crew has how, Quick; 2, Knight; 3, Stott; 4, Linnell; 5, Wipperman; 6, Swartz; 7, Egbert; stroke, Hall, and coxswain, Hendrie.

FORDHAM NET TEAM BUSY.

Contests at Holy Cross, Tufts, and Yale This Week.

The Fordham University lawn tennis players, who have just finished an unsuccessful week's campaign with the local college teams, will face a hard campaign this week. On Tuesday they leave New York on a three-game northern trip. Wednesday Holy Cross will be met in a dual match at Worcester. On Thursday Tufts will be opposed at Medford, and the Yale players will meet the locals at New Haven on Friday.

Elliot Binzen, the Maroon star for three seasons, has not played this year, although he is eligible, and it is not likely that he will make the trip.

CUBA BUYS HORSES TO IMPROVE BREED

President Menocal's Agent Purchases Thoroughbreds at Close of Race Meet.

HAVANA, Cuba, May 4.—In carrying out his systematic campaign for the improvement of the breed of horses in Cuba, President Menocal of the Republic of Cuba commissioned an agent to purchase thoroughbred mares during the closing days of the recent Cuban-American race meet. This practice is likely to be continued so that Americans who race in Cuba will find a ready market for their surplus stock and save the expense of the return trip to the States.

It is only recently that the subject of horse breeding has been seriously considered by the Cuban authorities, whose supply of cavalry remount and police horses has been purchased in the United States to the number of from 3,000 to 5,000 annually. Finding the supply diminishing due to the drain of the war and sensing the need of a better horse type, the President and his advisers resolved to breed their own chargers and at the same time raise enough animals of the army type to have some to sell to friendly nations.

The interest of President Menocal was stimulated through the gift of three Arabians—a sire and two mares—from King Alfonso of Spain. In addition to these there are now at El Chico, his beautiful country home within a few miles of this city, thirty-four mares by such sires as Trap Rock, Transvaal, Dick Welles, Peep o' Day, English Lad, Meelick, Solitaire, Martinet, and Waterboy, with all of which he is delighted. It was his original intention to mate all these mares with the Arabian sire, which is well under fifteen hands, but when his attention was called to the plan by which France had used infusions of Arabian and Barb blood to advantage he determined to follow lines of proved effectiveness, and the largest native or Creolia mares, as they are termed, will furnish the bulk of the mates for the horse of the desert rather than the clean-bred matrons which received their infusion of Arabian blood two centuries since.

The best of the thoroughbred mares now at El Chico will probably be bred to Solomon, by All Gold, a son of Persimmon out of Stamina, by Nasturtium, out of Endurance by Right, by Inspector B., while still others may go to Duquesne, by Broomstick, out of Ascot Belle. Solomon is the property of the Cuban-American Jockey Club, and his services have been offered by President Brown of that organization, who was moved to buy the horse, which is a product of Harry Payne Whitney's Brookdale Stud, by the large number of thoroughbred mares that have been secured by prominent Cubans in the past two years. Duquesne is located at Aguacats, while Sir Wellons, another good horse, is in the stud near Matanzas.

The average native mare, which is of Andalusia lineage, has through in-breeding deteriorated in size. The bulk of them have beautiful fronts, but are cow hocked and deficient in the quarters. The Morgan and Saddler have helped in this respect wherever used, and it is thought that the Arabian will do his part equally well. It has been suggested to take the best of the mares from such matings and cross them with thoroughbred sires of bone and quality and in a short space of time a type that will be a credit to the country will be evolved.

Seated on the broad veranda of the typical Cuban house at El Chico a few days ago President Menocal said:

"The horse has always played a prominent part in the development of any nation. His usefulness in peace or war is unquestioned. He will never be superseded by machinery, but will endure to be the aid and solace of mankind. Cavalry has saved the day for the Allies on many of the battlefields of France. The horse of quality is quite as essential as any of the other paraphernalia of war and the improvement of the breed is worthy of the attention of every nation."

These sentiments were echoed by General Sanchez-Akramonte, who was present when they were uttered. "It is my aim," he said, "to teach our people that the horse can in a large measure replace the mule, which being non-productive is a total loss when disabled. We shall conduct some experiments with a Percheron of medium size, and by judicious crossing with the thoroughbred hope to evolve a quick walking type of work animal which will be as great an improvement on the ox as the tractor is over the old-fashioned plow. We have contracted for 100 tractors, by the way, with which demonstrations will be given in various parts of the island, and those who wish to use them may make satisfactory terms for payment when the crop is harvested. Our horse policy will be exploited in the same fashion as we now employ to disseminate knowledge concerning seeds, swine, cattle, and poultry, conventions being called at centres where experts from our station at Santiago de los Vegas will give lectures and demonstrate the type from individual specimens, which are quickly conveyed by truck over our good roads.

"This year we shall have twenty-two sires at the various locations," said the General in conclusion, "and next year the number will be greatly augmented through the acquisition of some horses of blood. I understand that the Cuban-American Jockey Club management has announced its willingness to donate a number which have been secured through the operation of the elimination plan during the final month of the meeting at Oriental Park. Others will be acquired by purchase until we have a thoroughly representative collection. A blending of our native stock and those of the Saddler horse and Morgan should furnish a foundation on which to establish a horse family second to none."

Governing Body for Walkers.

G. C. Trefry, Sr., President of the American Walkers' Association has announced that the pedestrian organization is working on a plan for a general organization which will supervise walking competitions over the entire country. The object is to create unity and stimulate interest among the walkers, and under the proposed plan five or more persons can form independent clubs and become affiliated with the other clubs of the general organization.

BEST HARVARD NINE TO FACE YALE TEAM

Crimson to Have Its Full Strength in First Contest with Elis Saturday.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 4.—The Harvard 'Varsity baseball team will meet Yale on Soldiers' Field a week from today with its full strength, according to present indications. After that game the Crimson will lose several of its best men, who will enter into some form of Government service.

Coach Duffy will pitch either Phil Newton or Dan O'Keeffe, who came to the rescue of the Harvard players when things looked gloomy in the Princeton match. Newton has not been able to do much work this Spring because of trouble with the college office. Until a few days ago O'Keeffe was ineligible, as he was not a member of the R. O. T. C. Larry Pelson has an outside chance to pitch the game.

Behind the bat Tom Gammack has been playing strongly, throwing well, and hitting sharply. His work should be one of the features of the Yale game.

Probation has lost the team Lucky Jones, its first baseman. Eric McCough, drawn in from right field, does not look right at the bag. His is slow in handling fouls and is somewhat at sea in the position. Johnson, one of the subs, fields well but is a poor hitter. Red Wolverton, who is playing second, is clever on grounders and a snappy batter.

Shortstop like first base has so far proved a weak link in the defense. Captain Gross started the season with four errors, but may show improvement against the Blue. Gross is in the game every minute, and appears to be a skillful hitter. He is fitted naturally as a leader. Dick Hallowell at third is playing a clever fielding game and hitting well.

Evans and Ward of the outfield are good judges of fly balls, and fair hitters, and both are fast on the bases. Ward has enrolled for naval aviation and is momentarily expecting a call to report. Coolidge is the right fielder and has had little work to do so far this year.

Coach Duffy has been teaching his men several pet plays, one of which is the use of the hunt, laying down the ball was instrumental in beating the Tigers.

The 'Varsity and freshman track squads will oppose Technology Wednesday in the stadium in a practice meet. Harvard's chances are poor considering Tech's known strength, and are more dismal for the triangular meet with Yale and Princeton on May 25.

"We will be lucky if ten men take part in the big meet," Pooch Donovan, Harvard's track coach said. "Yale seems to be in somewhat the same fix, but at Princeton they appear to have a team as strong as in normal years." Donovan, if he enlists as an athletic instructor, will probably sign up with Sparrow Robertson. The terms offered by the Government were none too alluring for any of the coaches who met Walter Camp recently for a conference in Philadelphia.

In the Y. M. C. A. work the salary is better, no large expense is necessary for clothes, and the contract, which is for one year, can be terminated practically at the will of the signer. The Government contract calls for service for the duration of the war, and the incumbent must go where ordered.

Coach Haines and Charley Hart recently selected one of the three Davy eights that Yale owns in which to row on the Housatonic June 1. Hart will rig it up a few days before the race. The Elis will also row in a Davy shell. Coach Haines is satisfied with his present rowing order.

Jose Capablanca Returns.

Jose R. Capablanca, chess champion of Cuba, has returned to New York after an absence of seventeen months. The young international master was received by members of the Manhattan Chess Club, where he will give his first simultaneous exhibition next week on a day to be decided on by the committee. Later he will go to Philadelphia, and may visit other chess centres.

Will Your Present Car Match the Super-Six?

Can You Rely Upon It to Serve You Through the Times Just Ahead?

Now is the time when you should arrange your motor car needs for the future.

It may shortly be impossible to get a good, new car.

You have seen in the newspapers how it is proposed to curtail productions to a fraction of the present output. Even now the output of every factory is much lower than had been scheduled.

But there has been no such falling off in demand.

Present needs call for more and better cars than can be furnished.

Motor cars must do the work that the badly-pressed railroads cannot do.

Good cars only can be relied upon. With outputs curtailed and a scarcity of mechanics to keep less dependable cars in good order, it is important that you plan for your future needs now.

Get a Super-Six while you can.

We can take care of today's wants. The revised schedule, much less than we had expected, makes future supply uncertain.

The known reliability of the Super-Six makes it the first choice of thousands of buyers.

If all who plan buying Hudsons should realize the present situation, all the cars the factory can build in the next year would undoubtedly be spoken for within a few days.

Some are going to be disappointed because they won't be able to get deliveries when they want them.

Better look over your present car closely and determine if it can be relied upon with the outlook as it now is.

Forest Hills Gardens

FIFTEEN MINUTES FROM PENN. STATION

Dignified in their substantial combination of rich, dark brick and stucco, three new detached houses of eight rooms and three baths have been completed for sale. Located on a quiet residential street, they have an unusual charm of appearance which makes them notable even in the Gardens. On account of the shortage of housing facilities rents have increased and will continue to rise. Any thoughtful person will realize that it is cheaper now to own a home that can be purchased on a small cash investment, paying the balance as rent. The supply of new houses is limited and the future cost of building will be excessive.

The environment is pleasanter than in Manhattan.

The floor space is cheaper than living in Manhattan.

The accessibility to the business, shopping and theatre districts is equal to living in Manhattan.

The frequency of electric trains, with a running schedule of fifteen minutes, discourages the idea of commuting.

DOINGS AND SAYINGS IN THE REAL ESTATE WORLD

REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE MARKET

Business Is Light Due to Concentration of Interest in Loan Drive.

COMMENT AND OPINION.

New Midtown Jewelry Centre Being Created—Building Prices, Past and Present.

With public interest centring largely upon the last week's drive to put the Third Liberty Loan subscription "over the top," and with nearly 150 real estate brokers devoting a great deal of time in behalf of the loan, it is not surprising that the volume of real estate business last week was somewhat restricted.

There was the usual array of small transactions, a few involving cash and others negotiated on an exchange basis. Aside from this trade element, which is by no means a new tendency, the outstanding feature of the brokerage reports was the continued activity of the operator.

The largest cash transaction of the week concerned a $750,000 Beaver Street office building, which passed into the hands of an investor.

A New Uptown Jewelry Centre.

In scanning the history of real estate in the City of New York during the past hundred years, there is perhaps no more interesting study than that of the "congregation of business." Almost from the establishment of the city itself there has been a fairly defined grouping of industries, at first somewhat vague, later more definite, and now clearly defined in their respective areas. So, for example, we have the "financial district," the "insurance district," the "white goods district," the "coat and suit district," tha "fur district," and many others familiar to all realty brokers and to the general public. The underlying reasons for these groupings for the removals of individual industries from one area or section of the city to another, for their relocating in exactly this or that new area or section, and the concomitant conditions surrounding these removals, are matters perceived and understood, however, for the most part only by the trained realty brokers and builders.

In speaking of the tendency of business to group itself, and particularly of a recent move to that end among the jewelry trades, Everett A. Brett of the Brett & Goode Company said yesterday:

"Among the least conspicuous but withal persistent trade removals in recent years has been that of jewelry and its allied lines. For several decades both manufacturers and wholesalers of jewelry, silverware, watches, and kindred articles have been housed in or near the so-called 'Maiden Lane district,' bounded, roughly, by Liberty Street on the south, Ann Street on the north, and extending from Church to Pearl Street. With the northward trend of the high-class department store trade and the attendant removal of the larger retail jewelry and art goods establishments, however, there has come a demand for the location of jewelry manufacturers and wholesalers nearer their customers and patrons. So that, whereas there were comparatively few manufacturing jewelers, diamond setters, or precious-stone workers in the uptown section of the city a dozen years ago, now there are scores of these very trades settled on the avenue and adjacent side streets close to the heart of the shopping centre.

"Within a stone's throw of the Public Library, at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, are numerous structures where jewelers and their co-workers ply their trades, creating new designs and designing new creations that milady who shops on the avenue may purchase the latest and the best of their respective handicraft. For instance, in 511 Fifth Avenue, the Postal Life Insurance Building, are located several diamond merchants; in 516 Fifth Avenue, a number of jewelry manufacturers; in the Herriman National Bank Building, 527 Fifth Avenue, a half dozen diamond and precious-stone dealers; and in 542 Fifth Avenue, the Marcus Building, several more concerns in the same line.

"On the side streets are found many large manufacturers of watches, rings, bracelets, brooches, and necklaces, the principal housing being apportioned as follows: In 7 to 11 West Forty-fifth Street, nearly a dozen; in 15 and 17 West Forty-fifth Street, three; in 58 West Forty-fifth Street, two, and in 62 West Forty-fifth Street, three. In West Forty-sixth Street are another half dozen firms engaged in jewelry jobbing and manufacturing, and in 6 and 8 West Forty-eighth Street two recent leases have been made to large precious-stone dealers. Altogether in this section from Forty-second to Forty-eighth Street, on and near Fifth Avenue, there are nearly fifty firms who have removed within the space of the last ten years from the downtown jewelry section to what may be termed the 'uptown Maiden Lane district,' and the compelling force in the large majority of these relocations has been that sometimes mysterious, yet always potent and persistent, factor the 'congregation of business.'"

Reviews Building History.

Allen E. Beals, at the recent dinner of the Credit Men's Association of the Building Trades, traced back, in interesting fashion, the history of building prices in New York, comparing the present-day situation with conditions during and after the civil war.

"I invite you to step with me behind the pages of the present and look back sixty years," he said. "The civil war was looming large as an inevitable necessity. There was a good building activity born of the realization of the commercial possibilities of the country as a whole. Building material prices were high, but not exorbitant. The demand was great for construction materials both in the North and the South. The younger generation of the rich Southerners were building their own abodes, some on the magnificent scale of the old homesteads. In the North mills were developing as the world call for cotton fabrics began to come in. Mill owners were prosperous and New York was beginning to take its second northward commercial swing into the Canal Street zone and some of the more venturesome business houses were stepping into the Union Square section.

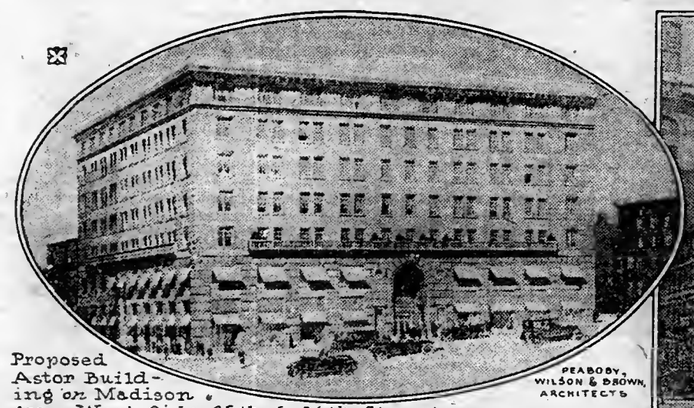
"Then the war came on and building material prices began to soar, labor became scarce, and finally speculative construction stopped. Still the price of material held high levels and when fourteen years after peace was declared that there was the first sign of a general weakening in building material prices and thirty years before the price of building commodities reached the normal levels prevailing in the years immediately preceding 1838.

"So much for the past. Between that time and the Spring of 1914 building material prices ebbed and flowed. In 1911 brick reached $12 a thousand, wholesale, and a little more than two years before the world war began, Portland cement was selling here at an average price of $1.32 a barrel, wholesale. In the following four years prices advanced to unheard-of levels until today there are some who tell us that building construction is stagnated because the price of construction commodities is too high.

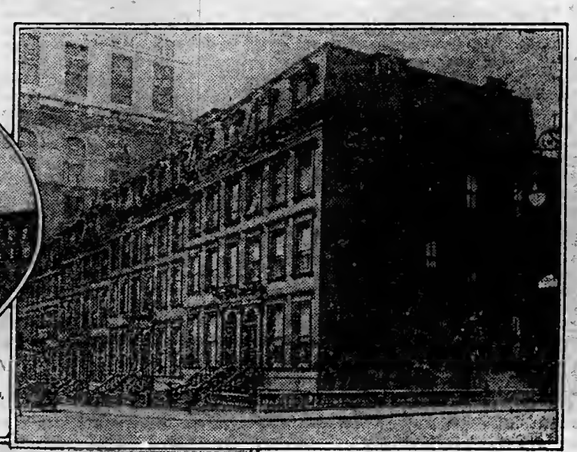
"There is no greater fallacy than this. Building is stagnated today because speculative construction work is not patriotic. The only speculative builder who can build without a blush today is Uncle Sam, and he is asking you and your clients not to stand aside and look on, but to get into the surest building speculation you ever heard of or had a part in."

MORGAN AND ASTOR INTERESTS IN DEADLOCK OVER BUILDING ZONE RESTRICTION ON MURRAY HILL

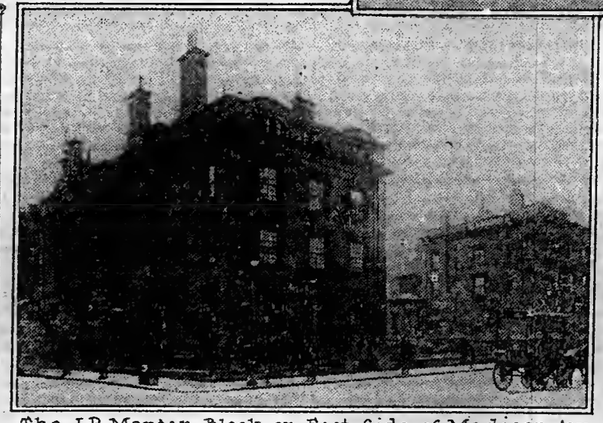
Board of Appeals Grants, and Board of Estimate Denies, Appeal of Lord Astor for Permission to Erect a Business Building on Madison Avenue, Opposite Home of J. Pierpont Morgan—Important Issues Involved.



Proposed Astor Building on Madison Ave. West Side 35th to 36th Streets. PEABODY, WILSON & BROWN, ARCHITECTS



Dwellings now on Astor Block.



The J P Morgan Block on East Side of Madison Ave. 36th to 37th Streets.

By denying the petition of Lord Astor for an amendment to the zoning resolution so as to change from a residence to a business district the property on the west side of Madison Avenue from Thirty-fifth to Thirty-sixth Street, the Board of Estimate on Friday added a new complication to a proceeding which bids fair to become one of the most interesting and important in the real estate history of New York.

This action is directly contrary to the resolution adopted unanimously on Tuesday by the Board of Appeals, which gave Lord Astor permission to erect a seven-story business building on this block-front, which is diagonally opposite the residence and library of J. Pierpont Morgan and is just north of the B. Altman & Co. department store.

Deadlock Created.

The developments last week created a practical deadlock as far as final settlement of the controversy is concerned. The entire case, from the standpoint of alleged conflicting jurisdictions of two of the city's most powerful regulatory bodies, the financial and social prominence of the two leading litigants, the intricate points at law involved, the strong effort made to effect a far-reaching and radical interpretation of the powers of the Board of Appeals as compared with those of the Board of Estimate, the long fight waged by Lord Astor to lift the restriction against his property, and the efforts of J. P. Morgan and the Murray Hill Association to combat the move, all have tended to heighten public interest in the proceeding to an unusual degree.

Referred to City Plan Committee.

On Feb. 15, 1918, the petition of Lord Astor was presented to the Board of Estimate, and referred to its Committee on City Plan and Public Improvement, as were also, on March 22, a protest and reply of the Flintlock Realty Company, holding title for Mr. Morgan to property opposite the Astor block. The report of the Committee on City Plan, signed by Borough President Dowling as Chairman, and by the Controller and the Presidents of the four other boroughs, in which it recommended the denying of the petition and the retention of the existing restriction, was adopted by the Board of Estimate at the Friday meeting. This report, which also sums up the recent history of the proceeding and the leading arguments of both sides, follows:

The Committee Report.

"This petition is a renewal of an exactly similar one presented to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment on Feb. 9, 1917, and at that time referred to the Committee on City Plan. On April 21, 1917, said committee made an exhaustive report covering this subject subsequent to a public hearing before the President of the Borough of Manhattan, and, in connection with such report, recommended the approval of a resolution denying the petition, which resolution was adopted by your board on May 4, 1917.

"Your committee held a public hearing for the consideration of this petition on March 19, 1918, which was duly advertised in The City Record. At such hearing Henry W. Taft appeared for the petitioner and argued for the change, claiming that his client had been discriminated against in the establishment of this residential zone, because the property on the block south and the two blocks north on the west side of Madison Avenue had already been placed in a business district. He contended that the proposed change would enable his client to erect business buildings which would bring in a greatly increased revenue to the city through taxation; that because of the fact that the major portion of this block had already been placed in a business district, it was but justice to his client to allow him to make the change, so that he might secure the increased revenue which would result from the erection of buildings to house the retail trade which is so rapidly moving into this section of the city.

Murray Hill Owners in Opposition.

"E. L. Bayliss, in behalf of the Flintlock Realty Company and the Murray Hill Association, appeared in opposition to the petition, and presented in support of his argument a petition, signed by fifty property owners in this locality, protesting against the change. He also presented affidavits of Otto M. Eidlitz and Edward R. Hardy, members of the Commission on Building Districts and Restrictions, and which contain statements that this particular zone was approved by the entire commission at the time it presented its report to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. William D. Guthrie, an owner of property in this section, also appeared in opposition.

"The pies presented by the opponents to the change was that any amendment in the zoning plan in this vicinity would break down a bulwark which protected the Murray Hill section from the inroads of business. It was claimed that this is one of the few purely residential sections still remaining in the Borough of Manhattan in which people of means could maintain their individual homes, and that to allow the change would result in driving a great many of such residents into the suburbs. Both sides filed a number of documents and photographs presenting specifically their arguments.

"In addition to the speakers who protested against the change a number of residents of this section attended the hearing, and signified their belief that the present zoning restriction should be upheld.

"Your committee has given this matter very careful consideration, and is of the opinion that the decision rendered by the previous Board of Estimate and Apportionment on May 4, 1917, when it denied this petition, was entirely warranted. It does not consider that any new facts have been presented which would call for favorable action, and it therefore recommends that the petition be denied."

Declares Estimate Board Is Supreme.

Before the adoption of this report both Borough President Dowling and Controller Craig took exception to the action of the Board of Appeals in granting permission for the erection of the building when it was known that the same matter was being considered by the Board of Estimate.

Borough President Dowling said: "In my mind, tha Board of Estimate is supreme, and the Board of Appeals should have awaited our decision. Their action opens the door for appeals of all descriptions. Most of the petitions now seek to place garages in residential blocks, alongside of churches and schools. If we sustain the Board of Appeals in this proceeding the zoning law fails and both this board and its Committee on City Plan are wasting time in considering zoning law matters.

"If the Board of Appeals, in three hours, can decide what we have been deliberating upon for three years we should turn over to them all our powers with respect to this law."

Interesting Point Raised.

Henry W. Taft, who appeared for Lord Astor, thereupon raised the point that the authority under which the Board of Appeals acted was delegated to it under an amendment to the zoning law passed last year, to which President Dowling replied: "We will have to amend the law again, then, or go out of business. If there is a joker in the zoning law I shall ask the Corporation Counsel to frame a clause, the adoption of which will make the Board of Estimate supreme in proceedings of this kind."

Upon his motion, the matter was then referred to the Corporation Counsel for advice.

Explains Appeals Board Decision.

The position of the Board of Appeals in the matter was outlined by John P. Leo, its Chairman, who declared that the board acted within its rights in granting permission for the erection of the proposed building.

"The Board of Appeals in the Madison Avenue case acted under the building zone resolution as it stands, and in strict conformity with the expressed views of the Board of Estimate, as to the authority of the Board of Appeals to decide the case," he said.

"It is to be noted that the province of the Board of Estimate in relation to the building zone regulations is to formulate the law, and that the function of the Board of Apeals is to act as a court under the terms of the building zone resolution.

"The application to the Board of Estimate was for an amendment to the building zone resolution. The appeal before the Board of Appeals was to permit an extension of a proposed building into a more restricted district, under the authority intrusted to the Board of Appeals by the building zone resolution.

"It is to be noted that in declining to amend the building zone resolution the Committee on City Plan reported Friday to the Board of Estimate as follows:

"'The committee believes that the previous Board of Estimate and Apportionment in denying the petition for the modification of the building zone resolution was warranted, and it does not consider that any new facts have been presented which should reverse this action.'

"This action, approved by the Board of Estimate, refers back to April 21, 1917, and ratifies the report then made by the Committee on City Plan, in which said committee, declining to amend the building zone resolution, said:

"'Of course, in fixing boundary lines in carrying out a general zone plan, it is impracticable to prevent such line from cutting across the plottages of particular owners. In order that this should not work any unnecessary hardship in individual cases, the building zone resolution provides in Section 7, Paragraph c, that the Board of Appeals may, in appropriate cases, after public notice and hearing, "permit the extension of an existing or proposed building into a more restricted district under such conditions as will safeguard the character of the more restricted district." It would, therefore, be possible in case the petitioner desired to use his entire plot for a specific business use, to request the Board of Appeals to authorize such use, and such use could be so authorized if, in the judgment of the Board of Appeals, such specific use would not in fact injure the residential district.'

Lord Astor's Contention.

Henry W. Taft of the law firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, who has represented Lord Astor in the proceeding, takes the position that the entire matter is out of the hands of the Board of Estimate and apportionment and no action on its part can affect the action of the Board of Appeals.

"The Board of Appeals," he said, "was first created by Section 718d of Chapter 503 of the Laws of 1916. It was first given the power by Section 719 to pass upon appeals from orders made by the Superintendent of Buildings and from 'any rule, regulation, amendment, or repeal thereof relating to the construction, alteration, structural changee in, equipment, occupancy, or use of any building or structure, or vaults and sidewalks appurtenant thereto.'

Delegation of Powers.

"The building zono resolution was adopted July 25, 1916, pursuant to the power conferred upon the Board of Estimate and Apportionment by Sections 242a and 242b of the Charter. Those sections were re-enacted by the laws of several years, and were finally amended by Chapter 497 of the Laws of 1916. It was while the law was in thie condition that the building zone resolution, was adopted, and as adopted it contained Sections 7 and 20 in their present form.

"Some question was raised as to whether under Sections 242a and 242b the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, in passing the building zone resolution, could delegate to the Board of Appeals a power not theretofore conferred upon the Board of Appeals by the Legislature to do the things which the beard was by Sections 7 and 20 of the building zone resolution authorized to do upon an appeal.

"The amendment of 1917 avoided all questions of constitutional power. By Chapter 601 of the Laws of 1917 Section 242a was amended by providing as follows:

"'Said regulations of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment may provide that the Board of Appeals may determine and vary their application in harmony with the general purpose and intent and in accordance with the general or specific rules therein contained.'

"Section 242b was by the same act amended by providing as follows:

"'Said regulations of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment may provide that the Board of Appeals may determine and vary their application in harmony with their general purpose and intent and in accordance with the general or specific rules therein contained."

"Section 242a related to the height of buildings; Section 242b to the usee to which zones of the city could be put.

"By the same act Section 718d of the charter, which was the section relating to the Board of Appeals, wae amended so as to read as follows:

"'They shall also hear and decide all matters referred to them or upon which they are required to pass under any resolution of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment adopted pursuant to Sections 242a and 242b of this chepter.'

"By this legislation of 1917 all queetion as to the power of the Board of Estimate to delegate, under Section 7 and Section 20 of the building zone resolution, to the Board of Appeals the power therein conferred was removed.

Decision in Brooklyn Case.

"In the case of Beinert v. Miller, 100 Misc. Reports, New York, the queetion of the effect of the amendment was referred to by the court upon a certiorari proceeding, and Judge Benedict in Brooklyn said:

"'It is earneetly urged on the part of the relator that the Board of Estimate could not delegate to the Board of Appeals, by such a provieion as that last above queted, (Resolution, Art. II., Sec. 7, Subd. e,) the discretionary powers vested in the Board of Estimate by the Legislature. In this I think the relator is correct, as the law stood when thie proceeding was instituted. The Board of Estimate, having been vested by the Legislature with the power of framing the regulations and restrictions provided for by the acts of 1914 and 1916, could not, in the absence of express legislative authority, depute to an inferior board the power to dispense in its discretion with compliance with such regulations. If the Board of Estimate had euch power to be exercised or not in its discretion, it could not delegate such discretion to a subordinate administrative or ministerial board. The question has ceased to be of importance for future casee, because of the amendment made thie year to Section 242b, which expressly authorizes the Board of Estimate to confer such power on the Board of Appeals.'"

Position of Murray Hill Owners.

Edmund L. Bayliss, of the law firm of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, who has been representing Mr. Morgan and the Murray Hill Aesociation, considered tbe matter eettled by the action of the Board of Estimate, which, in his opinion, was the body with superior power in the proceeding.

In discussing the long etruggle of Murray Hill residents against trade invasion, he said:

"On behalf of those who have homes in the restricted Murray Hill district the following etatement is pertinent as ehowing some of the more important of the grounde upon which they base their strenuous objectione to the efforts of Lord Astor to break down one of the vital points in the western boundary of the Murray Hill district by eecking to erect on the west side of Madison Avenue, between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets, a seven-story commercial building covering the entire front of the block and extending westward 195 fset.

"The Murray Hill residential district contains every grade of private residence. In the side streets, near Third Avenue, are the homes of those of modest means while the wsterly part of the district is occupied by the homes of persons of considerable fortunes. The fight of all of theee householders to protect their homee has been continuous since the early part of the year 1916, commencing before the adoption of the zoning resolution of July 25, 1916. These householders have felt and still feel that their only safeguard is to maintain and preserve the boundaries of their district as laid down by tha Board of Eetimate and Apportionment pursuant to the zoning resolution. If the barrier is lifted at any point, it will be impossible to prevent the gradual absorption of the entire district by business.

Defends Zoning Law.

"The eight lots on the west side of Madison Avenue, between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets, owned by Lord Astor, are restricted to a residential use by the zoning resolution. That resolution was adopted by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment after the most thoroughgoing investigation, and the districts allotted respectively to business and residential uses were carefully considered and selected. It is generally agreed that the zoning resolution constitutes ono of the most important steps ever taken on behalf of the people of New York in etabilizing and maintaining real estate values.

"The members of the present Board of Estimate and Apportionment have consietently defended the zoning resolution and have recognized tbat no change has occurred in the Murray Hill neighborhood to warrant the serious modification sought by Lord Astor.

"With reference to Lord Astor's attitude, it should be noted that he is the owner of real estate in this city assessed at more than $55,000,000, all of which apparently is benefited by the zoning resolution sava only the eight lots on Madison Avenue. For the sake of leasing those lots for business purposes he is, it would eeem, ready to attack the zoning resolution, and he is willing to do this even though these eight lots have already appreciated in value more than 600 per cent. since 1870."

A NEW BUILDING CODE.

To be Drawn for the Protection of Construction Workmen.

Labor Commissioner Louis Wiard has named Deputy Commissioner Richard J. Cullen Chairman of an Advisory Committee appointed to frame rules for the purpose of reducing the number of accidents, many of them fatal, that occur when new buildings are being erected. A study of tha matter has revealed the fact that more men are killed and injured in constructing factory and commercial buildings than occur in them when they are in operation.

The Advisory Committee is composed of prominent building contractors, construction engineers, and representatives of the various crafts employed in construction work. In framing a new code on building operations the commission realizes that it will be difficult to adopt safety measures that will protect life and limb of workingmen, and will also not serve to add to the cost of construction. Commissioner Wiard said:

"While available statistics indicate that casualties and fatalities in the course of construction of buildings, both factory and commercial, are really heavier than in the operation of the industrial plants located in these structures when completed, the provisions of State law governing building operations are fragmentary and loosely drawn.

"While the task is a large and difficult one the commission has every confidence that the Advisory Committee and Board of Industrial Code will be able to work out a code on building operations that will be effective, elaetic, comprehensive, and enforceable."

Jersey City Building.

Plans were filed at Jersey City by Harry J. Max for the construction of a four-story brick sixteen-family apartmen house to be erected on a plot 50 by 143 on the northerly sida of Fairview Avenue, near Bergen Avenue, on the Hill section of Jersey City. Nathan Wellitoff, the architect, places the cost at $45,000.

W. & A. Fletcher Company have awarded to William Crawford the contract for the construction of a three-story brick factory building 50 by 145, to be erected on the east side of Hudson Street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth Streets, Hoboken. Charles Fall, the architect, places the cost at $50,000.

Monthly Tenante.

The Ottinger bill, amending the real property law, in relation to agreements for the occupation of real estate, passed the Legislature and has been signed by the Governor. This amends the law by providing that unless the occupation of property shall be specified in writing that the occupation shall be construed to be a monthly tenancy.

Buye Mountain Lakes Home.

William Vander Koogh of New York City has purchased at Mountain Lakes, N. J., a dwelling located on a plot 150 by 240 feet, having a frontage of 150 feet on Briarcliffe Road and 170 feet of shore frontage on Wildwood Lake.

SEIZING PRIVATE PROPERTY

By A. W. WARNER of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

Owners of real estate and personal property which has been or may be requisitioned for military purposes are to be more justly dealt with in this war than in any of our previous wars.

In the civil war it was years in many cases before any satisfactory settlement was made with owners whose property had been taken, and others died before any action was taken on their cases. Under Secretary of War Baker the War Department has carefully planned a practicable process for making prompt and equitable settlements with euch owners.

For this purpose a Board of Appraisers has been appointed, at the direction of the President, within the War Department; a judicial body acting under the Chief of Staff. The members of this board, composed of Lieut. Col. Montgomery and Lieut. Col. John F. Dean, have been selected for their special knowledge of the value of property, and conform to the high standard of qualification which Secretary Baker now demands in every branch of the army.

Under the plan adopted, owners of property which has been permanently or temporarily taken from them for military purposes may promptly collect the value of the property from the Government. In this way the endless wait, which usually attends the taking of property for public purposes in street opening and widening proceedings, is avoided, and a better feeling is created than is customary in such cases.

It is hoped that the majority of cases can be settled by agreement. In casee where no agreement can be reached the valuations will be tried before a member of the Board of Appraisers, much the same as it would be tried in eminent domain proceedings, except that the Government is represented by the member of the board trying the case, unless he calls upon the Judge Advocate General to have a representative present, which would probably be done in important cases or where large eums of money were involved.

The testimony in the cases would consist, in addition to the usual proofs of title, of evidence of value by the rules and methods in use by competent appraisers, most of which have been worked out to their present scientific state by New York City appraisers. The same method is to be followed throughout the United States.

I believe the purposes for which the Board of Appraisers was appointed would be greatly furthered if the board had been given executive as well as judicial powers. In accordance with my original suggestions to Mr. Baker. It is not alone necessary to pay owners promptly and fairly for the property that is taken from them, it is equally necessary to have a person or persons with whom they may deal and from whom they may obtain information as to what is being done with their property, what it is to be used for, when it is to be given up, and other facts upon which they may base the course of their own affairs.

Undoubtedly it is not the intention of military officers to treat owners other than fair, but by reason of their more important and pressing other duties it not infrequently happens that they are left in an atmosphere of considerable uncertainty when their property has been taken, or they are informed that it is about to be taken. It should be the Government's aim to become as diligent a debtor as it is an insistent creditor.

If the board in question had executive as well as judicial powers it would be possible to get promptly in touch with known individuals who, on account of special familiarity with the subject and the fact that it would be their exclusive business to take care of such matters, would give prompt and efficient service to persons whose property was taken.

It could concentrate to such extent as to prevent the taking of property through one channel for all branches of the service, or at least such board could be called upon for representation at or about the time of the taking. Much of the feeling of uncertainty with which many agents and owners regard the War Department would be dispelled, for the reason that the absence or difficulty of confirmation which has attended their dealings with apparently accredited representatives of the different branches.

Owners and agents, in their zeal to assist the army, have themselves to blame frequently for acting on the supposed authority of well-meaning officers who have gone out looking for accommodations, only to find that the final authority did not confirm the arrangement, sometimes after tenants have been put out and many people inconvenienced. Tho impressions thus created would be avoided by the Board of Appraisers being made executive as well as judicial.

Another important thing that is missing in the solely judicial board is the gathering of facts at the time of the taking where no immediate settlement is made. Nobody can successfully contest an owner's claim for excessive compensation for damage to a building years after it has been taken when there is no record made of its condition at the time of the taking by the requisitioner. Such facts should be carefully gathered by the Government in each case for its own protection.

Another reason for making the board executive as well as judicial is the care with which requisitions of property must be made. An officer makes himself personally liable for damages when he deviates from the narrow path in which he may requisition property, and, oddly enough, orders from a higher officer do not relieve an officer from such liability when the higher officer's orders do not keep in the path of authority.

Quoting 54 United States Reports 115: "Private property may be taken—for the purpose of converting it to the use of the public; but the danger must be immediate and impending, or the necessity urgent for the public service, such as will not admit of delay, and where the action of the civil authority would be too late in providing the means which the occasion calls for." "The officer who made the seizure cannot justify his trespass by showing the orders of his superior officer. An order to commit a trespass can afford no justification to the person by whom it was executed."

OWNERS ARE NOT LIABLE.

Judgment for Injuries Caused by a Tenant Is Not Sustained.

An opinion just handed down by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court is to the effect that landlords are not liable for the negligent acts of their tenants, and that they cannot be held in damage suits for injuries resulting from such acts. The suit in question was an appeal from a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, who sued for damages because a board fell from a fire escape and injured her son. The judgment has been reversed by a unanimous vote of the Appellate Court. Part of the opinion reads:

"Assuming that the duty devolved upon the defendants at common law as owners to forbid these unlawful practices (placing articles on fire escapes) by their tenants, it appears that they forbade tenants to obetruct the fire escapes, and if they did not obey it cannot be found or held that failure to perform such duty was the proximate cause of the accident.

"It would be pure speculation to infer that tha tenants, who for their own comfort were constantly violating the law, would have obeyed if they had been warned. The defendants are only liable for their own negligence, or that of their agents or employes with respect to matters concerning which they owed a duty to the person injured, and they cannot be thus indirectly held liable in damages for an unlawful and negligent act of one not their agent or employe, and sustaining to them at most merely the relation of tenant."

NOT A RESTRICTION.

Important Zone Law Decision by Appellate Division.

Zone law restrictions to real estate under the rules adopted by the Board of Estimate July 25 are merely in the nature of police regulations and are not encumbrances, according to a prevailing opinion of the Appellate Division of the Suprema Court signed recently by Justices Smith, Laughlin, and Shearn. Justices Clark and Dowling filed a dissenting opinion.

The action of the Appellate Divieion reversed the judgment of Justice Hotchkiss in the Supreme Court in favor of the Lincoln Trust Company against the Williams Building Corporation.

The trust company obtained a judgment to compel tha Williams Corporation to take title to a building fronting on Edgecombe and St. Nicholas Avenues, in accordance with a contract of sale entered into August 21, 1917.

It was agreed in the contract that the plaintiff would convey the property "free and clear of all encumbrancee."

It was alleged that later on the defendant refused to complete the purchase on the ground that the zone law of the Board of Estimate placed certain restrictions upon the property.

300 "SIMMONS" Brass Bedsteads $10,080 Worth for $7,056 — At Savings of 25 to 33⅓%

Government needs of space have driven the Simmons Company—makers of the finest quality of brass and enameled Bedsteads—out of a portion of their New York warehouse.

Hence they are condensing their local stocks—giving up such patterns as they had on hand in only limited supply—perhaps two to ten or twelve of a style. We have bought them at a saving that allows us to sell them at ¼ to ⅓ below their regular prices at the time of their purchase. Since then, there has been a further rise; so that they are actually 40% below today's retail values, figured on their market value.

The Bedsteads are splendidly made, in desirable patterns. The favorite 4-ft. size predominates; though all sizes are included. All finishes—bright, satin and polet; and a very wide price-range—

$15.00 to $26.50 For Bedsteads of $21.50 to $38.00 Grades

Four of the excellent styles are illustrated—there are many more. Also, a group of

STYLE HINTS OF PARIS AND FIFTH AVENUE

Models as Sellers of Liberty Bonds Wore New and Wonderful Creations—French Forecast of Tailored Suits Instead of Coats and Dresses.

QUITE the newest thing in the way of a fashion idea was the use of models, dressed in the topmost height of fashion, as sellers of Liberty bonds along Fifth Avenue. The only trouble about trying to distinguish the models from the rest of humanity lay in the fact that the majority of Fifth Avenue promenaders were so well dressed that they interfered with the distinctiveness of the show. For the models, mind you, were gowned so as to remain a part, though a glittering part, of the picture. Who could resist an expensive passion for patriotism when the plea came from so fetching a bit of femininity?

One of theee pattern ladies wore a blue serge cape over a blue serge frock. The cape was lined and the frock trimmed in scattered places with Royal blue satin of a soft and charming hue. It was a lovely way of livening up the everlasting blue serge, for the brightness of the satin appeared when the wind blew, or when the skirt swished unduly, adding a touch of verve when it was least expected.

Another blue serge costume—a lot of them were blue serge—had an overskirt cut in four paneled sections, each one tucked across in four places. The bodice had surplice tendencies—that is, it was cut pointed to the waistline. And inside of this opening appeared the smartest little waistcoat that you would ever want to see. It was all of fine tucks, and bits of ruffled lace edging doing its best in the cause of preserving feminine softness to the last degree. There were little tight turnback cuffs, too, of this same combination of thinnesses, and a hat of electric blue flowers on its turban brim was most effective with the darker blue of the gown.

And still another blue serge creation—a cape again this time—was worn with a hat, mushroom in shape, made of checked blue and white silk gingham. Its only adornment was a blue grosgrain ribbon band about the rather high crown, with two ends of it dropping over the brim at back.

Strolling along the Avenue one came suddenly face to face with a model wearing a white broadcloth gown beautifully cut and draped. It was covered by a flowing cape of deep, dark blue and topped by the smallest of tightly fitting turbans, also of dark blue. That get-up was charming and harmonious, the white line of the gown at the front being totally Springlike in its effect.

A blue serge tailored suit, with skirt of proper tight proportions, had a coat provided with three perky little circular flounces in lieu of a peplum. A deal of distinction was added to the general appearance of the cult by the addition of an unusually long chinchilla stole-shaped scarf, wound straight across the front, standing high under the chin, crossed in the back, and brought around to the front again under each arm, where the model held an end gracefully in each hand. With this suit was worn a hat of drooping natural colored leghorn straw, corded at its edge with a cherry red velvet cord. Its crown had four red velvet poppies plastered to it at four regular positions.

One of the models wore a printed chiffon gown that had about it something even more lovely than most of these newer chiffon things already described. It was a blue and white print, white holding the predominating position, and it was draped over a dark blue satin foundation. To keep the chiffon from standing out unduly, the skirt was edged around the very bottom with a row of blue crystal beads. This suggestion of a weight preserved the long, straight line, which is such a necessary feature of anything attempting to call itself smart. A cape of dark sable fur was the outer covering for this gown, which, without the fur, might have been called too airy fairy Lillian for a coolish Spring day.

Other than this, the fashion event of the week was the big textile exhibit at the Grand Central Palace. It was overwhelming in its vastness and went to prove that our American industries contributing to our uses of fashion had developed and grown to a remarkable extent. The things at the exhibit of most direct interest to those who are thinking about fashion were the silk and woolen materials. These promise well for the dresses to come in our future. Never were silks more colorful and more sumptuous in texture; never were woolens softer and more luxurious. What we are to be allowed of woolen covering in the coming month will at least be satisfying in the feeling it will give its wearer.

At the fashion show in connection with the exhibit were seen any number of interesting costumes made up from American-made materials and American-made designs. They carried one forward into the hotness of Summer with surprising swiftness, for a great many had to do with sport togs. Sweaters were there in large quantities, made from every sort of silk and wool of all colors. Some had sleeves and some were knitted without any sign of sleeves, and all of them were worn with an air distinctly sportsmanlike.

The Sleeveless Jacket of Velvet.

In fact, the sleeveless jacket promises to be a real feature of the coming season. It is seen all about the town in various phases of invention. Perhaps it is the one of velvet that is most favored by the ladies who are planning their country wardrobes. It is usually done in a really dark or really bright shade—that is, dark blue or brilliant green, black or shining orange. It is worn with a white skirt, sometimes kilted and sometimes made scantly full of that glistening surfaced satin material so searched after where out-of-door clothes are concerned. A heavy white silk or satin blouse made in tailored fashion completes the scheme. This blouse is apt to have a pleated front and a high, though crushed, collar, which completes what is, beyond a doubt, a trig and serviceable out-door rigging.

When a Gown of Silk Jersey Has Only Artistic Draping for Its Qualifications.

To go back to the fashion show at the Textile Exhibit: There were shown there a number of Batik chiffon hostess gowns that were beautifully done. One of a dark, rich green had its large spreading design done in a lighter tone of green, with a few spots of yellow orange scattered about it. It was made to hang straight from the shoulders. Over it was hung a shoulder cape which had a habit of spreading out behind in a sort of a cloud as its wearer walked about.

Another Batik negligée was done in rose and blue figures on a background of creamy white. It had about it an angel quality, and the simplicity of its design and construction were truly fascinating. By the way, Batik has led the way for a multitude of printed patterns used for silk—and most successfully used, too. One of these at the exhibit had the fitting name of "camouflage" attached to it.

A new material which has as its destination the Fall trade is a sort of brocade inspired, at a guess, by the Chinese. The figure in satin is of the same color as the background in a woven silk, and the design spreads over the surface of the silk in a continuous pattern. It is a wonderful effect, whether the color be light or dark, but the most beautiful of the shades are in a strange blue, a dark plum color, an interesting taupe, and a terra cotta red that defies description. These heavy silks have been used largely for street dresses during the Spring, and there is every reason to expect that they will have even more of a vogue when the Fall days come along.

News comes from Paris that the latest development of the moment is the popularity of the tailored suit. One could not have foreseen this strange turn of events, because everything pointed in the direction of coats and dresses for a predominating Summer fashion. Now all is changed. The smartly clad ones in Paris are wearing suits, the more tailored the better, it is said. They have pleated and ruffled jabots for their only relief, and sometimes a pleated ruffle appears below the end of the tightly fitting sleeve.

This bit of news is worthy of our passing attention for the reason that it may point to popularity for suits here in America when the Winter comes along. It is true that we could all return to them with love and fervor, for we have been tied to dresses with top coats for a long while past, and we long for a change, if only to go back to the old love.

From Paris comes the additional news that the last word in blouses calls for an apron front. This blouse looks like a tunic with a belt when viewed from before, and from behind it is a simple waist, ending properly, as it should, at the waistline. It has a simple neckline, without mention of collar, but with a band of dotted mull shaped plainly to it. A repetition of this trimming band occurs at the lower end of the apron, which point is about twelve inches below the normal waistline. And, you see, the belt at the back of the blouse then slips around to the front, where it fastens and holds the apron part in place.

All of the newest sleeves are large at both ends—that is, they fairly come out of the waist in order to make the armholes as big as it is possible to be. They disdain cuffs and are as likely as not to have kimono ends flopping anywhere they have a mind to. These sleeves, it is said, probably will lead for the Winter styles. It is easy to see that they will materially change the silhouette, making it full and loose just above the waistline, where heretofore it has been slimness personified.

Bags, shopping and otherwise, have come to play as important a part in the gowning of a fashionable woman as any other integral part of her attire. Many are the wondrous shapes and sizes. The beaded bags are, of course, the most handsome, and they are being woven now in designs artistic enough to turn one's head. If a woman remains uninspired when she is permitted to witness a bag so exquisite, then she is indeed to be pitied.

The French are featuring velvet bags, to be carried with light Summer dresses. They like a contrast in materials as well as in color, and this is their latest way of achieving the result. Usually the bags are mounted on a frame, and the frame, as a rule, is of wood, either polished or treated in some other way, to make it harmonize completely with the rest of the bag. Why wood? Oh, yes, there is a deep, dark secret behind that little idea. Touch wood, you know, is the magic term, and if one be perpetually touching wood as one bears along one's shopping bag, then is one never likely to fall into danger.

Shell is another favorite for frames. And the beauty of the color of real tortoise shell adds to the appearance of the plainest of bags. Plain as they may be on the outside, they are exquisitely, not to say elaborately, fitted inside with all the accessories, from mirror to eyebrow pencil. In one Frenchwoman's bag was stowed away a shell cigarette holder, slim and beautifully formed, flashing the narrowest sort of a band of diamonds around its holding end. That bag, by the way, was embroidered by hand in an old-fashioned close design of gold and silver threads, mounted on black velvet and lined with heavy black satin. It was of an oval shape, bound with a gold cord and mounted on a wooden frame.

ADVERSE REPORT ON WOMEN CONDUCTORS

NEW YORK CITY has grown accustomed to its women street car conductors as an apparent necessity until peace comes. They bring the war home to thousands every day as a reminder of men who have been called to the front, and as an illustration of woman doing her bit. Some of them, it has been noticed by closer observers, have looked very tired at times, especially late at night, and the question has been heard now and again: How are they going to stand it?

But few persons are aware that an official investigation, by the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics, has been conducted in this city into that very question. A report of it, by Benjamin M. Squires, will appear in the forthcoming issue of the Monthly Review of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics. The verdict is against the employment of women in this work.

"From the facts brought out in this report," says Mr. Squires, "it must be evident to any thinking person that it is practically impossible to make the conditions of street railway employment even tolerably endurable to women employes, and that the operation of street cars is one of the last occupations into which women should be lured or forced. There are thousands of clerical and factory positions now filled by men which could be filled just as well or better by women. Common sense dictates that women be first placed in those positions where conditions are most favorable and most readily adaptable for their employment. If the exigencies of war make it necessary to put women into the less desirable employments, such as street railway operation, the public should first oblige such industry to prepare itself for the employment of women by providing the irreducible minimum of decency and comfort before it is permitted to employ them."

Two of the conditions adverse to the employment of women on street cars, as cited by Mr. Squires, are the long hours and the irregularity of these hours.

"The hours that employes are actually engaged in operating the cars gives but little notion of the suitableness of the employment for women," he reports.

"The 'within time,' or the period between the time of reporting at the barn and the time when they are released for the day, gives a much better idea of the demands of the occupation upon the time of the employes. For the most part, the time between 'swings,' or portions of the day's work, is simply dead time, with the choice of loafing on the street or about the car barn.

"Thus, on the New York Railways Company's lines, 13.6 per cent. of the total days worked by woman conductors during a period of seven days were completed in less than ten hours, whereas 62.9 per cent. required twelve hours and over within which to complete the day's work. On the surface lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, 16.1 per cent. of the total days worked by women conductors during a period of seven days required less than ten hours within which to complete the day's work and 48.5 per cent. required twelve hours and over. On the subway-elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company 36.5 per cent. of the total days worked by woman guards and conductors required less than ten hours within which to complete the day's work, and 30 per cent. required twelve hours and over."

The hours vary widely. Many of the women begin at midnight, or later in the night, according to Mr. Squires's report.

"No canvass has been made of woman employes to ascertain why they responded in such large numbers when word went out that the street railway companies would use women on their cars. With some it was undoubtedly economic stress, with others novelty, with others the seizing of the opportunity to enter an industry previously closed to them; still others have been attracted by the prospect of earning more than in other occupations open to women. A few have no doubt been actuated by patriotic motives and the appeal to be of service. From the large number of applicants, the companies have been in a position to choose those most apt and physically able to remain in service. The age limits are 21 to 45, and a large percentage of applicants is rejected.

"Comparative figures are not available to show the relative stability of women in this work. From Dec. 4, 1917, to Feb. 15, 1918, however, the New York Railways Company took on 522 women, not including those who were students on the latter date. During the same period 100 women left the service of the company. The surface lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company took on 238 women conductors between the dates Dec. 14, 1917, and Feb. 15, 1918, not including those who were students on the latter date. During this period 70 left the service. The subway lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company took on 348 guards during the period Oct. 24, 1917, to Feb. 15, 1918, not including students on the latter date, and 51 left the service of the company. This indicates that in spite of the opportunity afforded the companies for careful selection, a rather high percentage of women have either found the work disappointing and have left the service or were found to be unsatisfactory and were discharged.

The highest percentage increase of wages in the period 1914-1918 on either the New York Railways Company or the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is 26 per cent., according to this report. "The increase in the cost of living for the same period," says Mr. Squires, "is 47 per cent. This, coupled with the prevailing high rate of wages in other industries, is at least a contributing factor in the shortage of male labor for street railway work. Women are being paid the same wages as men in the industry. Wages have not actually been lowered by the introduction of women into the employment, but quite probably wages have been prevented from rising."

Other considerations that weigh against women in this work are pointed out by Mr. Squires in these words:

"It is necessary to take into account the nervous strain resulting merely from riding for hours at a time on a car that is constantly starting and stopping, and that of handling crowds at rush hours. On many cars the conductor is obliged to be on his feet constantly, and the principle has been clearly established that a woman cannot work at employment requiring constant standing without seriously endangering her health. Moreover, the conductor is exposed to cold, damp, and draughts, even on the best type of inclosed vestibule and centre door cars. On the closed vestibule car there is added the strain of opening and closing the door at each stop.

"The point has been made repeatedly by the companies during the investigation that even when women have a choice they frequently select night runs. At this time the cars are, of course, less crowded and the work less strenuous except, perhaps, during the after-theatre rush hours on certain lines. Some of the women have remarked that they preferred the night runs because it left them the day free to do other things. Others with families have said that the night runs enable them to look after the children and prepare the meals during the day. The disastrous consequences of employing women on night work to enable them to work all day for their families have been so thoroughly demonstrated in other industries that it needs no further demonstration in street-car operation. Lack of sufficient rest must very soon so lessen the vitality that the woman is not only unfit for street railway service but unable to resume her former place either in the home or in industry. There should be added to this a consideration of the dangers to which a woman is conceivably exposed in having to go home unattended, sometimes through practically deserted streets, at hours of the night when police protection is least."

SOCIETY PLANS FOR OUTDOOR SEASON

Debutantes Planting Potatoes—Younger Set to Sell Forget-Me-Nots for Belgian Babies—Pilot-Aviator of New York in Romantic Adventure in the Air—Society Pledging Itself Not to Wear Bird Ornaments During War.

THE 1st of May brought a lull in the patriotic-social activities, which were varied and brilliant throughout April, but the social calendar will be filled quickly, for these are the days when projects grow overnight, with society so eager to sponsor and patronize.

The first week of May is really like the threshold between the indoor and outdoor season, the latter depending a great deal on the weather. The early Summer promises to be replete with open-air affairs for war relief, and the colonists at the fashionable resorts, already beginning to assemble, will soon inaugurate the benefit garden parties and the like.

From Newport comes word that three young society women there have started to till the soil on a leased plot of land, and will raise vegetables of all sorts. This plan will no doubt be taken up by many of the Summer colonists, some of whom are already actively engaged in raising poultry. A visitor from France tells of the excellent work Mrs. Vincent Astor is doing at the cafeteria conducted for soldiers and sailors at Bordeaux, where she washes the dishes, trudging from table to table with big pitchers of milk.

Tomorrow women of society, young and old, will work in allotted zones throughout the city in the interest of our first flower day, when forget-me-nots, the official flower of Belgium, will be sold on the streets, here and in all of the large cities of the nation, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of the destitute families of Belgium, especially the babies.

The one-day drive of selling Queen Elizabeth's sovereign flower will be quite unique even for New York, although the institution has been in vogue among the other warring nations for the last four years.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is the Chairman of the Committee under the auspices of which the drive will be held, with Mrs. Payne Whitney as Vice Chairman and Mrs. Arthur Iselin as Secretary. The sub-committees are to be composed of twenty members of the younger set. Miss Grace Vanderbilt is to be in charge of the district from Fiftieth to Fifty-ninth Street; Miss Louise Iselin, from Sixty-fifth to Seventy-fifth Street, and Miss Joan Whitney, from Seventy-fifth to Eighty-fifth Street.

At the same time that the Queen's flower is being sold hundreds will take advantage of the opportunity to visit the Belgian official war exhibition at the American Art Galleries, 6 East Twenty-third Street.

Now that the army, represented by the very clever young soldier-actors from Spartanburg, S. C., with the musical comedy "You Know Me, Al," have had their fling, the navy is to come in for its share of attention. It is announced that some time during the week of May 27 a song and dance revue entitled "Bigg-Bang!" is to be produced by the officers and men of the Pelham Bay Park Naval Training Station in one of the large New York theatres.

Commander W. B. Franklin has given his approval for this performance, which is to swell the exchequer of the welfare fund, in order to build a permanent theatre at the station. There will be over 200 officers and men in the cast and orchestra, and the list of patronesses will be a large and notable one.

Of course, everybody is trying to follow the rules of the Food Administrator these days. Women of society know to a nicety just how to plan a Hoover repast, but the man of big business affairs, especially at luncheon, often wears a hopeless look on his face as he studies the menu.

The thing is to use the foods specified and yet to enjoy a perfect and harmonious diet. There is an unending variety of vegetables to choose from at this season of the year, and for the benefit of those who wish to arrange a changing assortment of seasonable vegetables which combine all the mineral salts, calories of food values, the following have been suggested: Spinach, corn mush baked with cheese, potatoes, dry beans or lentils, poached egg, and corn bread.

WHAT might be termed formal war romances keep increasing, announcement for the most part coming by cable from France. Hardly a week passes now but that an engagement or marriage is announced between the young soldiers of prominent New York families and the young women of society who are doing their bit abroad. If they are the culmination of any unusual romance, the spice has been lost en route.

War fiction runs the gamut of human emotions, and it must be admitted that so far, since the entry of the United States into the conflict, society has had to depend solely upon fiction for the thrill of wartime romance. Perhaps this is because Mars, in the awful carnage and destruction, has crushed all that is tender and sentimental. Still, romance is bound to survive.

A letter recently received from France tells how a young man from New York, of French parentage, a pilot-aviator in Foch's army, became engaged to a French girl after a romantic adventure in the air. The writer is a member of the Crescent Athletic Club in Brooklyn, and the recipient also a member of the club, and now Sergeant Major on General O'Ryan's staff. The letter has just been published in The Crescent, issued monthly in the interests of the club.

After telling of a thrilling spill, in which he found himself almost unhurt among the shapeless pieces of his airplane, the aviator proceeds as follows:

"Last Summer, on a beautiful Sunday afternoon, another instructor and myself were taking a joy ride over the country, and were flying low, so as to reconnoitre the different châteaux spread all over that part of France. While over one of them we saw a crowd of young fellows and girls waving at us. The sight of a tennis court, a pond, a lawn, and such a crowd of youths was too much for us.

"We circled around for a while, and, spotting a suitable piece of ground, we landed near by. There was a rush toward our machine. We introduced ourselves. At once we were invited to partake of the games, and next day we bicycled to the château, only a little over a mile distant from the camp.

"Until these people left the country for Paris I was a regular visitor, and never paid especial attention to the girl of the house. But when for Christmas she came to the country with her mother I found out I liked her very much, and by the time she was ready to go again we had told each other of—what do you think? Now all arrangements have been made between both families."

Among the very recent marriage news from Paris was the message telling of the wedding there on Tuesday of Mrs. John G. A. Leishman, Jr., to Lord Alastair St. Clair Leveson-Gower, son of the late fourth Duke of Sutherland and heir to the estate of his brother, the present Duke. The report of the marriage was the first intimation that Mr. and Mrs. Leishman had been divorced. Mr. Leishman is a son of the ex-Ambassador to Germany.

The bride was formerly Miss Helen Demarest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Demarest of this city, and her marriage to Mr. Leishman took place in Italy in 1911. Lord Alastair, who is 28 years old, is a Lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards and has won a military cross in the war. His mother, who is a half-sister of the Countess of Warwick, was married about four years ago to Major Percy D. Fitzgerald, D. S. O., and is conducting a hospital in Belgium, where her daughter-in-law is to assist.

Nuptials for May, so far announced, are few and scattered. Whether this comes from the superstition of brides remains to be proved. War-hastened marriages are not affected by omens or weather, and the month is bound to have its quota.

St. George's Church, in Stuyvesant Square, has had a run of smart war weddings of late, just as they will centre at some other large church, uptown, for days in sequence. Bright Spring days bring out crowds to the park from the beehive of humanity further east, and every bride is sure to have a gallery, so large often that the police have to clear the canopied passage into the church.

An important wedding there yesterday was that of Miss Annette Markoe, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James W. Markoe, and Lieutenant William Jay Schieffelin, Jr., Field Artillery, U. S. A., a grandson of Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard and a great-grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt. Their engagement was announced early in the week.

Miss Nathalie du Vivier, daughter of Mrs. Charles A. du Vivier of 155 East Seventy-second Street, and John O'Connor of this city, are to be married on Wednesday in the Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's Cathedral. On Saturday, Miss Rosemonde Wyman, a daughter of Mrs. Edward Frothingham Wyman of 152 West Fifty-eighth Street, and Royal Winter Wetherald, an Ensign in the Flying Corps, U. S. N. R., will be wed in the chapel of St. John's Church.

Miss Vivian Vernon, daughter of the late S. E. Vernon of this city and Mrs. Royal H. Willis of 829 Park Avenue, will be married to Leo Nunes of Leghorn, Italy, on Saturday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, in Grace Church.

Murray Vernon is to give his sister in marriage, and Miss Virginia Vernon, a cousin of the bride, will be her only attendant. Alfred A. Poole of England is to act as best man. The ushers will be Dr. Royal H. Willis, Lieutenant the Marquis Spinola of the Italian Army, Frederick C. MacDonell, Sebastiano Raimondo, Alfred P. Morewood, and Heddiford Pitt. Mr. Nunes is in this country buying munitions for the Italian Government.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. Rogers are making their home near Rutland, Vt. Mrs. Rogers was formerly Miss Alma J. Hoykendorf, daughter of Mrs. Peter Hoykendorf of Scarsdale, N. Y., and she was married to Dr. Rogers a week ago Saturday, in St. Thomas's Church, with a reception afterwards at the Gotham.

Commander and Mrs. William B. Franklin of 156 East Seventy-ninth Street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Grace Franklin, to William Murray Black, Jr., son of Major William M. Black, Chief of Engineers of the United States Army.

Miss Franklin's father is in command of the naval training camp at Pelham Bay. Mr. Black's father recently returned from the front with Secretary Baker.

Miss Grace Hendrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood Hendrick of 139 East Fortieth Street, is to marry Rodney Chase, son of the late Henry F. Chase of Waterbury, Conn. Their engagement has just been announced. Miss Hendrick, who was a débutante of the Winter, is now a student at Bryn Mawr. Mr. Chase was a member of the class of 1920 at Yale, but left the university to enter the Naval Aviation Service.

CHARITABLE affairs will dot the month, several interesting events being scheduled for the next fortnight.

A concert for the benefit of the Home for Homeless Boys, in East 123d Street, will be given in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton on the evening of May 15. Mrs. Tarleton Winchester, violin, and Mrs. Russell Landale, soprano, both of whom are amateurs, will appear, and an orchestra from the home will play.

Mrs. Philip A. S. Franklin is Chairman of the entertainment, and among the patronesses are Mrs. Charles D. Halsey, Mrs. Arthur Ryle, Mrs. William Floyd-Jones, Mrs. Lawrence B. Elliman, Mrs. William B. Franklin, Mrs. Walter Jennings, Mrs. Clarence C. Chapman, Mrs. Theodore H. Price, Mrs. W. R. K. Taylor, and Mrs. Edward Frost.

The Canadian Club of New York will give a benefit concert and patriotic rally for the benefit of the children and women dependents of American, Canadian, and British soldiers from New York and vicinity, fighting with the Canadian forces, at the Hippodrome this evening. Long before the United States entered the great struggle many American boys joined the Canadian forces, and were among the first soldiers to "go over the top." The members of the Canadian Club in New York have not forgotten this, and in planning this benefit, they want to help those who first answered that call.

Three one-act plays will be presented by the Snarks and the Amateur Comedy Club on the evening of May 15, at the Plaza, for the benefit of the American Girls Aid. After the performance there will be general dancing. Tickets may be obtained at the Plaza, the American Girls Aid, 293 Fifth Avenue, and from Mrs. Robert L. Strebeigh, 43 East Sixty-first Street.

Society is resting on its laurels today after the Liberty Loan campaign. There were many picturesque features of the campaign, some of which have not been chronicled, although their efforts were most gratifying. The Mayfair War Relief had an auto truck filled with girls, who worked for the success of the loan every day since the drive started, at Twenty-third Street and Broadway. Some days they took in as much as $22,000. Miss Kathryn Bache, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jules S. Bache, was in charge of the truck. She and her aids have taken the engineers' course, as well as typewriting, and can speak French, German, and Italian. In a short time they will be sailing for France to be useful workers.

The recent German offensive has driven from their homes thousands of French women, children, and old men, who were bravely trying to till the soil immediately behind the French and British Armies, and thus support their soldiers. These refugees themselves now desperately need the aid which the Secours National Committee, through its efficient organization, acting in cooperation with the American Red Cross, is giving. A serious situation has been caused by the recent offensive, and the present needs are appalling, with the funds all but exhausted. Mrs. Whitney Warren is Treasurer of the Secours National, at 16 East Forty-seventh Street, to whom all inquiries should be addressed.

The recent meeting of the Natural History Club, of which Mrs. Charles Cyrus Marshall is President, proved that society has not forgotten about the birds during the tensity of wartimes. The club is sending pledges now all over the country, and if any one wishes to obtain one and sign it, a note to Mrs. Marshall, at 2,239 Tiebout Avenue, New York City, will bring it by return mail.

This pledge reads: "Recognizing the economic value of birds, and particularly their importance with relation to the food supply, because of their aid to agriculture, I hereby promise that, during the continuance of the present war, I will not purchase, or wear, any hat or ornament, in the making of which is used any bird, or bird feather, the taking of which involves the destruction of the bird's life; that I will not, except in case of necessity, use for food any insectivorus wild bird, and that I will on all suitable occasions use my influence to induce others to pursue a like course."

SCIENTIFIC CARE FOR EXPECTANT MOTHERS.

NEW YORK CITY stands fourteenth in comparison with a list of sixteen civilized countries in the care of its expectant mothers. There are 40 per cent. of the babies in this city who die in the first month from injuries at birth or lack of prenatal precautions by the mother, and 80 per cent. of those deaths are preventable, Julia Lathrop of the National Children's Bureau says that more women die between the ages of 15 and 45 from diseases incident to childbirth than from any other one cause except tuberculosis, and that 90 per cent. of these deaths are preventable.

The National Child Labor Bureau is beginning this month a fight to save the lives of 100,000 children. In this city the Maternity Centre Committee of doctors and prominent women and their patients whom they have interested in the work are beginning an active fight to prevent this great loss of life among both children and mothers. The first big meeting in the interest of the work was held at the house of Mrs. John S. Rogers, 753 East Seventy-ninth Street, on Monday, April 15.

The city has been divided into ten zones, and in each of these is to be a maternity centre where there will be nurses to go out among the people, find the prospective mothers, and see that they have the same medical advice that the rich mother receives, and that they carry out the advice when it is given. Three of these maternity centres are already organized and will soon be in full working order.

In connection with the centres prenatal clinics will be opened as soon as possible in the different zones, an average of one to every ten blocks, that the mother may not be obliged to go from one end of the city to another, as is often the case, to visit the hospital clinic.

The best obstetricians in the city are interested in the movement. Dr. Edwin B. Cragin, President of the Sloane Hospital for Women, in asking for money for the work, (the money being needed chiefly to pay the nurses, for there are few overhead charges and little expense for house and rent, as the work will be done as far as possible in connection with existing conditions,) said:

"I would not dare to ask for nurses at this time for any work that was not as important as this. Give $1,000 for a nurse, and if you can't afford an entire nurse, give at least $50 for a cap."

Already one maternity centre has been fully organized by the Woman's City Club of New York at 219 East Seventy-ninth Street, and it has aided 1,000 mothers in something less than a year of service.

Every afternoon at the Centre there is a little gathering of mothers who come together to make up simple layettes. The Centre has the patterns and a sewing machine at the mothers' disposal. The garments are made of outing flannel, which the Centre furnishes at the wholesale price of about 17 cents a yard—material they could not get elsewhere for less than twice the money. Thrice a week a Mothers' Club meets at the Centre. The women knit baby caps or soldier-husband sweaters, and have music and a Virginia reel.

One of the things that are to be worked for in connection with the maternity centres is the establishment of a system of working housekeepers or nurses' helpers. Mothers with large families frequently are obliged to get up and attend to their families two or three days after the child is born, to the serious detriment of their health. These assistants will do away with this necessity.

The City Club Centre is planning an additional branch in the form of a central kitchen, where nourishing food that the mother needs may be bought at nominal cost and taken home for her own and her children's use. Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Jr., is Chairman of the Administrative Council for the City Club, and other members are Mrs. Willard Straight, Mrs. Frank Vanderlip, Mrs. Albert de Silver, Mrs. Ernest C. Poole, Mrs. James P. Warbasse, and Mrs. Samuel Lewisohn.

REINDEER MEAT AS FOOD.

IT will not be long before reindeer meat is more than a delicacy in the United States, according to William T. Lopp, Superintendent of the Alaska School and Reindeer Service, who was visiting in this city last week. The service is under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior. At present the supply of reindeer in Alaska is not sufficiently extensive to warrant large shipments of the meat to the United States, but Western packing houses have already displayed a keen interest in the new food, and cold storage houses for reindeer meat have been built in several Western States.

"Twenty-five years ago a small importation of reindeer was made into Alaska from Siberia across the Bering Strait," Mr. Lopp said. "In ten years there were 1,280 deer, and now the herds have increased to the number of 100,000 or more. Reindeer meat is a tasty and choice viand that will contribute a valuable asset to the national food supply. Once started, the supply will never cease, as reindeer increase very rapidly. A novel system of handling by Indians and Eskimos has been developed by the department, so that nearly all the reindeer in Alaska, with the exception of those in use as domestic animals, are the property of the natives. The right to them is supervised, of course, by the Government.

"Besides being food, the reindeer is valuable in other ways. Hides and leather are obtained from the dead animals, and, while the horns are not valuable, the hair makes excellent harness padding.

"The Eskimos are a fine race of people, and take to the handling of reindeer better, I think, than the Indians, whose chief industry is the directing of the co-operative stores. When the natives first took hold of the reindeer service it looked for a time as if a 'reindeer aristocracy' would be developed among them. After much effort a system of distribution of the animals was worked out. The Eskimos and Indians were apprenticed to the tending of reindeer for a certain length of time, at the expiration of which each received six deer—four females and two males. At the end of the second year, say, he got six females and two males, and then at varying intervals eight females, and so on, until at the end of his apprenticeship he would have a nucleus upon which to start his herd.

"When he was graduated from the 'reindeer college' he usually had about fifty deer, and the laws governing the work forced him to take on an apprentice when his herd had reached 150 deer. As it grew he would be compelled to take on other apprentices. Today, James Keokuk, an Eskimo, owns 1,500 deer, while 'Reindeer Mary,' who was famous for her herd of the animals, ran the number up to nearly 1,000 and employed a number of apprentices."

AMONG THE KAISER'S STRANGE UTTERANCES

Latest Wails Only One of Many Boastful and Sentimental Speeches Since the War Began in 1914

THE German Kaiser's expression of grief at the devastation caused "by a ruthless foe," with its accompaniment of tears brimming from his "eloquent eyes," has lately been quoted in the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger. The strange occurrence rings but slight change on one of "the All Highest's" two predominant moods. Since the outbreak of war his conversations and messages quoted in the German papers have expressed either confidence in the ultimate victory of the mailed fist under the special patronage and protection of "our old God," or, like this latest outburst, sentimental sorrow over the pain and loss for which he holds "the enemy" responsible.

Here is a typical declaration. It is part of an address to the troops in Lorraine Dec. 14, 1916:

"The brave endurance and iron tenacity with which you have repulsed all enemies on all fronts for years has made it possible for me to address to my adversaries a proposal for peace negotiations. Whether or not they will accept I do not know, and the result is uncertain. The act is in God's hands, as is our whole struggle. He will decide upon it, and we will leave it to Him. We must not argue with what He orders.

"We will be grateful to Him that we have thus far the honor of being His instruments in the Divine Judgment that has come upon our enemies. Let the decision fall as it will. The hewing will proceed further, until our adversaries have had enough."—From the Leipsic Neueste Nachrichten.

At about the same time, an address to troops in Alsace was quoted, in which, with "warlike gestures," the Kaiser "spoke in words most wrathful in contempt", or allied efforts in the East and declared that the judgment of God had fallen upon the enemies of Germany. He continued:

"The old God of Battles directed. We were His instruments and were proud of it."—From the Cologne Gazette.

Here are brief extracts from an address to the soldiers at the Somme, quoted Oct. 25, 1916:

"The world's history knows no parallel to the greatness of your deeds. For centuries these battles of the Somme will stand as a blazing model for the conquering will of a united people. In you the German will finds expression under whatever circumstances to prevent the enemy from prostrating us to the ground, and to stand firm against French insolence and British stubbornness. • • • Even though it continues hard and endures long, yet the Lord of Hosts is with you. Those at home have besought Him and He has inspired you with strength and courage."—From the Berliner Tageblatt.

Every one remembers the report quoted from German papers here just before the German defeat at the Marne: "For our victory we are thankful in the first place to our old God. He will not desert us, since we stand for a just cause. • • • We shall not relent, and we shall get to the enemy's hide. We shall not lose our faith and trust in our good old God up there."

Following is a significant remark, quoted from a conversation with the German author, Max Bewer, on Oct. 26, 1917:

"The German sword will regain us the respect of all the world. In France the detestable word 'boche' is getting ever rarer. Just wait! Things will become different. The sword makes us respected."—From the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger.

An interesting juxtaposition is offered by the autograph letter on the subject of peace, written to von Bethmann Hollweg, then Chancellor, just a year before, on Oct. 31, 1916:

"My dear Bethmann: I have since been turning over our conversation thoroughly in my mind. It is clear that the peoples in the enemy countries, who are kept in hard endurance of the war by lies and frauds and deluded by fighting and hatred, possess no men who are able or who have the moral courage to speak the word which will bring relief—to propose peace.

"What is wanted is a moral deed to free the world, including neutrals, from the pressure which weighs upon us all. For such a deed it is necessary to find a ruler who has a conscience, who feels that he is responsible to God, who has a heart for his own people and for those who are his enemies, who is indifferent to any possible willful misinterpretation of his act, and possesses the will to free the world from its sufferings.

"I have the courage. Trusting in God, I shall dare to take this step. Please draft notes on these lines and submit them to me, and make all necessary arrangements without delay."—From the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

On Feb. 3, 1915, a Bavarian newspaper published some interesting interviews between the Kaiser and the German novelist, Dr. Ludwig Ganghofer, on visits to Great Headquarters. Extracts are as follows:

"I heard and saw an example of the Emperor's quiet patience with slanderous statements that should be instructive for us all. Remarks of such a nature embitter him, but even in his greatest excitement he never loses the mastery over his tongue. I heard him say in such a case: 'That is strong, but it is silly also. It is fortunate that truth always is wiser in the long run, and that it has longer legs.'

"The knightly conduct of individual opponents in the field gladdens Emperor William, and rarely have I heard any man speak so justly and appreciatively of the good qualities, the courage and the accomplishments of the nation's enemies. Even against England I heard from the Emperor no unmeasured word spoken in anger. Every verdict he pronounces, severe as it sometimes is, is always within the bounds of supreme reserve. Nevertheless, there is a slight but hardly noticeable vibration in his Majesty's voice when the subject is our Germanic cousins across the Channel.

"In a conversation with the representative of a neutral State the Emperor once said: 'You are a sportsman. When in a horse race the weaker animals gradually drop out and only the two strongest are left, have you ever seen the jockey of the horse which threatens to fall behind strike with his whip at the jockey of the more ambitious and stronger animal?'

"The man questioned shook his head. The Emperor continued: 'Why does England strike at us? Why does she not rather strike at her own weakening horse?'

"Yet other words of the Emperor must be remembered. On one occasion he made this remark:

"'Many people who judge us Germans solely by outward polish and term us barbarians seem not to know that there is a great difference between civilization and "Kultur." England certainly is a highly civilized nation. One notices this always in the drawing room. But to have "Kultur" means to possess deep conscience and high morale. My Germans have conscience and morale. When they say in other lands that it was my intention to found a world empire, that is the funniest nonsense ever said about me. But in the morale, industry, and conscience of the German people is to be found a conquering power that will open the world for them.'"—From the Münchener Neueste Nachrichten.

In August, 1915, a long article describes the "changed Kaiser," the "joyous, triumphant Kaiser," who greeted the news of the sweeping invasion of Russian Poland. On that occasion the Emperor made the following remark about that victory: "Energetically to wish for something which is necessary helps to attain it!"

The year which added the United States to the list of Germany's foes brought characteristic announcements from the Kaiser. On Feb. 12, 1917, in an interview with Hans Müller, author and playwright, in Vienna, he said:

"Do you know that in Belgium we are restoring all the ruined churches, taking care of all the works of art, as well as works of historical value? Yet, we are only barbarians! • • •

"Now the whole world knows who it is that wishes to bring more suffering on humanity. Strange, isn't it, that the fact that the Entente Powers are protecting the murderer of Archduke Francis Ferdinand is so generally overlooked. What a short memory the world has! When I met today my dear old friend the Baron Rumerskirch the thought again came to consciousness in me very strongly that over our enemies hangs the shadow of a crime. On our side is truth and justice and right, and in order that truth and justice and right may be victorious we are justified in using every weapon. • • •"—From the Vienna Neuen Freie Press.

And in May, 1917, addressing the soldiers on the Arras front:

"We will continue to fight until we secure a complete victory against those who have attacked us. May the God of armies give us blessing in the war which has been forced upon us, so that our children and grandchildren may live free in the German Fatherland."—From the Deutsche Tageszeitung.

Addressing soldiers on the Aisne, in May, 1917:

"The decision lies near at hand. You will turn it in our favor, as you have on every previous occasion, because you realize what you are fighting for—the future of your children and grandchildren, the future of the beloved Fatherland of us all."—From the Berlin Tageblatt.

On Oct. 18, 1917:

"So M. Painlevé wants Alsace-Lorraine, does he? Good, but he must come and take it!"—From the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger.

On July 24, 1917:

"At the reception given recently in Berlin by Emperor William to members of the Reichstag, the Emperor, in conversation with Philipp Scheidemann, the Socialist leader, spoke slightingly of America and expressed the conviction that the United States would not play a decisive part in the war."—From the Augsburg (Bavaria) Post-Zeitung.

In the order to the army and navy, sent by dispatch from Berlin Dec. 31, 1916, the Emperor declared: "The gallant deeds of our submarines have secured for my navy glory and admiration forever. • • • God also in the future will be with us." The proclamation to the German people, officially published in Berlin in January, 1917, concluded with the following sentence: "The God who planted his glorious spirit of freedom in the hearts of our brave peoples will also give us and our loyal allies, tested in battle, the full victory over all the enemy lust for power and rage for destruction."

In September, 1917, however, the Emperor permitted himself to express, not only joy and triumph but regret that he did not have a larger navy. In conversation with a German painter, he said:

"If my people had not so embittered the first twelve years of my reign in my naval plans! If those gentlemen had only known what one more squadron means on the sea they would act today and for all future times quite differently."—from the Düsseldorf General Anzeiger.

The sentences from the Emperor's famous manifestoes of August, 1914, "Forward with God!" and Aug. 1, 1915, "Before God and history my conscience is clear. I did not will the war," are unforgettable, as is the remark to the war correspondents quoted in a dispatch from Berlin, on his birthday in January, 1915, "My principle is the word of old John Knox, that 'one man with God is always in the majority.'"

FRENCH MASONS RESENT CRITICISM

AN article entitled "Caillaux's Secret Power Through French Masonry," by Charles Johnston, published in THE TIMES SUNDAY MAGAZINE SECTION of Feb. 24, has aroused much discussion. A number of prominent members of the Masonic order in America have disputed the assertion that atheism flourishes among French Masons, and that their influence has aided the Caillaux element in French politics. John H. Cowles, Secretary General of the Supreme Council of the Thirty-third and Last Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, Southern Jurisdiction, with offices in Washington, has sent to THE TIMES a letter he received recently from R. Raymond, Grand Orator of the Supreme Council of French Masons, in which M. Raymond says in part:

"M. Caillaux is not a Mason. His influence is and always has been null among Masons of the Grand Orient and still less, if possible, with those of the Scottish Rite. He has never been either officer or member of any Masonic Council of Direction.

"It is true that a certain number of Deputies and Senators are Freemasons, more or less active, but their action has always been republican and inspired by those principles of liberty for which we, with you, pour out our blood.

"Unhappily, Latin Freemasonry is not as powerful as its enemies say it is, because if it had been so its beneficent influence would have aided in alleviating more evils and enlightening the people with the high ideas which are its basic principles.

"It has always been admitted that the word 'liberty' includes, with Masons, 'liberty of thought,' which is to say that all wholesome ideas are listened to and developed by them, but that all financial or other combinations have no interest for Freemasons who, in their temples, carry on the education of men worthy of the name.

"Freemasons are neither atheists nor anti-militarists, as is insinuated; certain among them have had to contend with those who sought to abolish liberty of thought, liberty of the instruction of children, and liberty in the criticism of our old institutions and administrations, the failure and downfall of which are proclaimed by the present war, thus confirming Masonic ideas and the justice of Masonic statements.

"To all these allegations of hidden or occult action among Freemasons we oppose our most strenuous denials; and if he who wrote the article is honest, and of good faith, we have to say to him that his good faith has been strangely imposed upon. Besides, if France has been saved, it has not been by the three-year law, (three years are not necessary to the making of a good soldier, as you very well know,) nor has it been by those who attack Freemasonry, of which they complain, but by the entire nation, foreign to all these base political struggles and living only its liberty.

"Many Freemasons have died for their country, preaching by example; while their enemies seek to propagate dissension and disunion by their accusations, and prosecute their political hatreds instead of burying them in the common devotedness.

"French Freemasons know their duty. They are guided, not by men, but by their Masonic conscience, penetrated by our principles. Instead of speaking evil of these enemies, they show forth the example of courage, of devotion, of national unity, and of total sacrifice in the defense of our great Masonic principles.

"All Freemasons here in France are admirers of the discourses of your wonderful President, who has so clearly and so eloquently summed up their own thoughts at this present moment, when the fate of the world is being decided, and, side by side, we are united for the final victory of our ideas.

"General Joffre is, in fact, a Freemason, but, like all Freemasons, he remains free, without need of any guide for his actions other than his conscience, enlightened by Masonic truth."

DR. AMSTER'S STORY OF HARM DONE BY HYLAN

Ex-Commissioner Recalls in Detail the Petty Economies That Crippled Health Department's Efficiency.

THAT Dr. J. Lewis Amster resigned as Health Commissioner not primarily because he was told to dispense with certain men on his advisory staff or because of the question of legality of the different health bureaus, but because of the inability forced upon him to live up to the standard of efficiency of work he had set for himself in accepting the post, was emphasized by him in an interview after his withdrawal.

"When I accepted the position," he said, "I did so at a great sacrifice of position as private practitioner. I felt, however, that the job of being Health Commissioner of New York was one sufficiently important to warrant any personal sacrifice. I knew the needs of the department, I appreciated the fine health work it had been doing all along, and felt that I could do my share in continuing to make it the highly organized and efficient instrument it has always been considered. It may be of interest to your readers to know that the Health Department of the City of New York has for the past few years been considered a model to all the cities over the continent. My aim was to improve this model where possible.

"One of the first things I plann d to do was to create a system of borough autonomy in the health work. In speaking with physicians in the various medical organizations of the city—by the way, those are the outside influences I brought to bear upon my work, the influences to which the Mayor objected—it was continually impressed upon me that the health work in the different boroughs was not well co-ordinated, that there was needless overlapping among the different departments in the different boroughs, that there was no one person who could be held responsible for the work in his borough, and that as a result much that should have been done was left undone, and much that should not have been done was allowed to slip through.

"By Feb. 20 I had worked out a plan of borough autonomy to be tried in the Bronx and Queens. This I submitted to the Mayor. My plan was, first, one of decentralization in so far as the boroughs were to be separated and the problems peculiar to each brought forward and attended to by people who had made a study of them, followed by closer centralization when these problems were referred back to the Health Department. Co-ordination between the bureaus of the departments and the Assistant Sanitary Superintendents, who were to be vested with responsibilities of the work in the different boroughs, co-ordination and co-operation ng the various directors of the was my aim.

discovery of a health need in a ough by the man who lived and worked in that borough, the presentation of that need to the proper bureau, the discussion of it by men who held their positions by virtue of their knowiege of the needs and methods of dealing with these needs, and the final action on the need or problem by employes in the borough where the needs were, felt—that was my idea. All this I tried to inculcate into the tentative plan which I submitted to the Mayor. Nothing was done about it, no criticism offered, favorable or adverse. It was simply ignored."

The following was the plan submitted by Dr. Amster to the Mayor:

Feb. 20, 1918.

The Commissioner, the Directors of Bureaus, Borough Autonomy, Bronx and Queens.

On and after Feb. 20, 1918, in the Boroughs of the Bronx and Queens, the responsibility for the administrative work of these boroughs, with the exception of the functions of the Bureau of Hospitals, Bureau of Laboratories and Bureau of Records, will rest upon the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent. He is expected to know, direct, and, by proper supervision, check the daily work of his subordinates, and is directly responsible to the Commissioner, through the office of the Deputy Commissioner, for the prompt and proper performance of the work.

The Directors of bureaus will outline the policy and determine the program of the bureau, and be willing and ready to offer helpful suggestions as to the manner of accomplishing the same.

The Director will be responsible for the transmission directly to the Assistant Sanitary Superintendents in the above-named boroughs, of any and all orders pertaining to the bureau work, at the same time forwarding a copy to the office of, and for the information of, the Deputy Commissioner.

The consent of the Director of the bureau involved must be obtained by the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent before making changes in existing orders or alterations in established procedures.

Any failure or neglect to properly perform the required program of the bureau must be reported in writing by the Director of the bureau to the office of the Deputy Commissioner, where same will be noted and forwarded to the Commissioner for his information.

Inability to comply with the requests of Directors of bureaus must be reported by the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent in the Deputy Commissioner. The adjustment of the work of the various bureaus, in order to prevent any unjust distribution of the field force, will be undertaken by the Deputy Commissioner and Directors of the bureaus involved.

The Directors of bureaus or their accredited representatives shall be afforded every opportunity to satisfy themselves as to the manner in which the work of the bureau is being performed, and accorded free access to the files, and constructive criticism is invited.

The employes of the department in the Boroughs of the Bronx and Queens, with the exception of those employed in the Bureau of Records, Bureau of Hospitals, and Bureau of Laboratories, receive all orders from and are directly responsible to the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent, and indirectly to the Deputy Commissioner and Commissioner.

All orders, reports, and official communications will clear through the office of the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent.

"The question of economy," continued Dr. Amster, "was the one uppermost in the mind of the Mayor, economy irrespective of and not respecting the fact that in an age of specialization the man with the greatest knowledge and ability in his own line of work is the man who in the long run is the most economical; that the person who can put his finger on a sore spot in an important crisis in a minimum of time with a maximum of results is infinitely more valuable than the less able and cheaper man, who potters about and uses empirical methods on occasions where drastic and sure methods are needed; and that the first man by very virtue of his knowledge and his confidence in this knowledge is a man of spirit and independence who would refuse to take orders or suggestions from one who is inferior to him in his special work, whereas the second man might in his ignorance and desire to please, at any cost, be more easily moved or swayed by the political power above him.

"I believe in economy myself, but in economy of the right kind. I, too, believe that expenses should be cut down where possible. I don't, however, believe that expenses should be cut down at the cost of expert authority.

"The plan of the Mayor was to eliminate the bureaus, a system that had grown out of actual needs and a system which had been built up as a natural and scientific process of Health Department evolution. The point he made was that a large amount of money was being wasted on salaries of Directors.

"A large amount of money was being wasted, but not on salaries for Directors. These men are all specialists in their fields and held their positions as a result of competitive civil service examinations, in which they had come out on top. The waste that there was lay in minor points of internal organization—overlapping, doubling up, carelessness in assignment of duty, and the like. I kept working on these points in an effort to improve conditions, and on March 7 I submitted a statement to the Mayor showing him what I had done to limit the expenses of the department, as well as giving him an idea of the plans and investigations that were going on. The following is a copy of this report:

To his Honor the Mayor of the City of New York.

Sir: In accordance with your request of Feb. 14 I have the honor to submit the following report of work accomplished in this department by way of economy and improvement in service since Jan. 1, 1918.

An analysis of the reports received from the various bureaus of the Department of Health shows a marked increase in the amount of work performed during January and February of the present year over the same months of 1917. A number of new procedures were instituted and other procedures developed without additional cost. The fact that this was accomplished without increase in cost represents a distinct saving to the city.

First and foremost, the city death rate for the past two months of this year shows a decrease of 1.49 over the same period of 1917, which represents a saving of 2,646 lives.

A reassignment of positions has been made on a businesslike basis, whereby sufficient remuneration is paid for individual service and, at the same time, a higher efficiency established. With this reassignment of forces and non-filling of positions previously occupied and vacated by resignations or transfers, this department expects to save the city many thousands of dollars annually.

The Hospital Admission Bureau has recently been moved from quarters previously occupied at a rental of $1,900 yearly to "rent-free" quarters and more conveniently located.

Assignments of work have been planned to eliminate time spent in traveling and permit employes to devote more time to the actual work of the department.

The work of nurses has been surveyed, and useless visits have been eliminated.

Tabulation machines are employed to summarize statistics, thus permitting a great saving of time and energy.

Certain printed forms have been condensed and combined or eliminated, and a great saving of money can be shown, though the work has only been begun.

Automobile service has been decreased to a minimum.

A larger number of patients have been treated in departmental hospitals at a diminished per capita cost.

Request has been made by the army and naval authorities to care for an unusual number of soldiers and sailors who will require hospital attention in our departmental institutions. Arrangements are now being made to carry out these requests, and we hope to give efficient services to the Government without materially interfering with the normal functions of our hospitals.

The Food Bureau has accomplished a considerable saving of food through its successful efforts to have condemned food overhauled and salvaged.

A survey is being made of the medical services of Riverside Hospital, and plans are being made to change from paid visiting staffs of physicians to voluntary staff, which will result in a saving of approximately $4,000 a year.

The following investigations are now being carried on by this department:

1. Inquiry into the unusual number of deaths resulting from illuminating and coal-gas poisoning.
2. Investigation into the high cost of milk in the City of New York.
3. Conservation measures for the unnecessary waste of perishable food products that come into the city at the railroad terminals and docks. This investigation is being carried on in co-operation with the Federal food authorities.

These economies represent only the beginning of what I hope to accomplish in this department.

"The work with the sera and toxins and the work of the Public Health Education Bureau were some of the big things in which the Mayor and myself constantly clashed," said Dr. Amster. "It is on the score of these two, primarily, that I expect Federal intervention unless further interference with their activity is held off.

"For a long time the City of New York had been supplying the Federal Government and the Government of Canada with toxins and sera for the treatment of tetanus, typhoid, smallpox, pneumonia, diphtheria, and other diseases. These were sent abroad to the armies in France. On account of conditions prevailing there it was difficult to get or manufacture this material in sufficient quantities to meet the needs in the base hospitals. The soldiers needed the sera, the Governments were looking for them, and we could manufacture them here at a small cost. We sold at cost price. As a business proposition it was not efficient, I'll admit. That was the big thing in the eyes of the Mayor. As a patriotic and health duty, its importance cannot be fully appreciated. Yet this important work was held up for a period of ten days on account of lack of sufficient appropriations. Before I resigned I ordered the department making the sera to go ahead with its work irrespective of the lack of funds. Our supply both for home use and foreign use was running short, and something had to be done.

"The public health work was another thorn in the side of the Mayor. Again, with the perspective of a man looking through the small end of a telescope, he thought he could save the city a great deal of money by abolishing it. The question of education on health matters is always an important one. Especially so is it today. What with about 25 per cent. of our physicians having given up their practices to get into active service and the increased amount of illness prevalent during any period of war, the problem of health looms large in a municipality of our size. The care of the child, treatment of malnutrition cases, methods of prevention of communicable diseases, sanitation, food conservation—all these are matters which can be brought to the attention of the people at large only through a bureau such as the Public Health Education Bureau. The authorities at Washington would not allow that bureau to be abolished. We are a port of entry. This means a port of entry of disease as well as of individuals. If worse comes to the worst, the Government will, I believe, take over the work of the Health Department as a war measure. The Overman bill empowers it to do that.

"As to the question of legality, that was settled years ago by the Corporation Counsel. He wrote to the Health Commissioner: 'The maintenance of the five new office bureaus or divisions established Oct. 28, 1913, will not conflict with the statutory duties and powers of the Sanitary Superintendent or Assistant Sanitary Superintendents.'"

TRAINING WORKERS FOR JEWISH WELFARE

By ISAAC LANDMAN.

THERE is a unique institution in New York that is doing a remarkable service for the Jewish men in the American Army and Navy. It is the Training School for Field Representatives of the Jewish Welfare Board. Twenty instructors, each an expert in his field, are giving their best effort, in the shortest time possible, to train the men whom the Welfare Board is sending out into the camps, cantonments, and naval stations.

The board, prior to reorganization last Winter, had sent into the camps and cantonments a number of representatives who were doing heroic work for the Jews in the rapidly increasing national army. They were men who had volunteered for the sake of the cause. Most of them had not even an intimation of what their duties might possibly be when they reached headquarters. As one of them, who is now an instructor in the training course, says, "When I arrived at the camp I didn't know the difference between a Corporal and a General."

Two problems confronted Chester J. Teller, the new executive director of the Welfare Board, when he took hold of the work in December—how to build up a corps of camp representatives and how to train them for their particular task.

The first problem was soon solved. A propaganda of information, dealing with the needs of men of the Jewish faith in the army and the navy, was launched. This was followed by an appeal for workers.

Mr. Teller honored me by calling me into conference on the proposed training school. I had enjoyed a unique experience on the Texas border and with Pershing's expeditionary column in Mexico during the Fall of 1916. At that time, under the auspices of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and under the direction of the War Office and General Funston, I visited every camp of regulars and National Guard between Brownsville, Texas, and Colonia Dublan, Mexico. My duty was to organize the men of the Jewish faith for the conduct of religious services on Rosh ha-Shanah and Yom Kippur. Incidentally I had also organized several Y. M. H. A. centres in towns along the route. From my first interview with Secretary Baker, in Washington, through the last conversation I had with General Pershing, in Colonia Dublan, I marveled at the constant courtesy and untiring co-operation in my work on the part of the army officers.

I was not satisfied to leave Mexico and the border until I had ascertained the reasons for such generous and whole-hearted co-operation; so when I called on General Pershing to express my thanks, and those of the conference and of the Jewish men under his command, I put this question to him: "Will you kindly explain to me why every officer whom I met and under whom I worked exerted himself to the utmost to make my task easy, and to assure a responsible and efficient organization of these services for the men of the Jewish faith?"

General Pershing answered without a moment's preparatory thought. "It is the business of an army man to face death," he said, "and when a man faces death he wants to know the why of life, and religion is the only human experience that has attempted to solve the why of life."

This conversation with General Pershing and his concise reply to my question flashed into my mind during the conference with Mr. Teller. It was the starting point for the curriculum.

The need of Jewish welfare workers, especially trained for their work, should be apparent to every Jew. The Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus, to whose funds the Jews have contributed liberally, can and do supply all the recreational requirements of the army and navy men. But Jewish men in the army and navy on active duty need religious services. Their officers are desirous that they have them. The Y. M. C. A. and the K. of C., obviously, cannot supply this need.

Moreover, there are orthodox and reform Jews, and there are Jews who have no religious affiliation whatever. Even the atheists and agnostics are, in the statistical data, Jews. All of these have immediate and "back home" problems that are as foreign to the understanding of Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. Secretaries in the camps as they are in the cities.

Some of the Jewish men are recent immigrants, or the sons of recent immigrants, who came to America before the war to escape military conscription in Russia or Rumania. Some can scarcely understand English. Some have no conception of the reasons why America is in the war. Some are pacifists of the Bolshevist type, and some are conscientious objectors. Some won't eat trefa and won't shave off their beards. Some have family troubles that should be attended to by the organized charities at home. Some are in the hospitals and guardhouses. Some are lonely, despondent, unhappy. All of them have been suddenly transplanted from their civil occupations and home environment into a new and strange life.

At the outset, then, the training school course, necessarily intensive, aims at instructing the workers in the types of Jewish men they will find at the various camps.

No less important is the instruction given in army and navy organizations by accredited officers of the army and navy.

The training course introduces the students to the types of officers, as well as to the types of men, they will come in contact with. Many officers, both of the old line and of the recent training camps, do not understand the psychology of the Jew. The Welfare Board representative is in a position to straighten out numerous situations that unhappily give rise to the cry of anti-Semitism, but which are due solely to misunderstanding. Accordingly, the Welfare Workers are taught the fundamental principles of Judaism and Christianity, and how to present Judaism and Jewish peculiarities to non-Jewish officers and to fellow-privates in the ranks.

In all matters not distinctively Jewish our workers are taught to co-operate with the other national agencies now established in the camps. To co-operate effectively our men must understand the aims and purposes of these agencies. Hence the course calls for instruction in the philosophy and practical methods of the Y. M. C. A., the K. of C., the Pershing Commission, and the Red Cross.

Experience has proved to us that the men of the Jewish faith in the American Army and Navy will give a good account of themselves in our struggle for world liberty. If their minds are at ease while training, if they can feel that there is always some one at hand to solve whatever difficulties may arise out of misunderstandings, if they are assured that everything is well at home and that, in case of misfortune, a great institution like the Welfare Board is present to step into the breach, if they are confident that the civil Jewish population stands behind them with all the strength of their hearts and souls and possessions, the Jewish men will give a doubly good account of themselves in their morale and in their fighting power.

HUMAN TANKS IN WAR

No belligerent has shown more resourcefulness than the Italian in devising novel means of offense and defense. The Italian Army was the only one to enter the war with a trench helmet and a steel chest-protector, and it is now provided with a more efficient body-shield than is possessed by any other of the warring nations.

Early in the war it was discovered by the Italians that many lives could be saved in skirmishing at close quarters if the soldiers carried or pushed bags of sand in front of them, and the present body-shield has been an outgrowth of that idea. They are made in the one-man and two-man type. The former are worn by infantry advancing in the open, attached to the shoulders by a pair of light steel arms, and are long enough to protect the head and vital organs of a man standing erect.

Lying at full length, or even crouched, it covers him completely. Each shield is pierced with a small, round eye-hole and an oblong loophole for firing from, both of which may be closed by a sliding door when not in use. The two-man shield is principally used in wire-cutting. It is carried on the back of one man, who may also work his rifle from a loophole in the top, while a second man works a long wire-cutter through a hole at the bottom. It is held up by short legs if the first man desires to move independently.—Wide World Magazine.

NOVEL CASES IN THE COURTS

In Armstrong v. Armstrong, 118 N. E. 916, decided by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, it is held that where cruel and abusive treatment is a ground for divorce, neither words nor acts not involving physical injury, though causing unhappiness and loss of health, are proof of cruel and abusive treatment, unless they were uttered or committed with malicious intent to injure. The court said: "The spouse may be guilty of drunkenness or other vices; his habits or disposition, his indifference, neglect or desertion, may cause mental worry and injury to health, but these acts, standing by themselves, are not enough to make out a case of cruel and abusive treatment . . . unless it is shown that the language was uttered or these acts were committed with a malicious intent and for the purpose of injuring the libelant."

In Deming v. United States, 247 Fed. 463, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals holds that a wife is a competent witness in a prosecution in a Federal district court against a husband under the White Slave act, notwithstanding that the law of the State where the prosecution is pending forbids her to testify against the husband except in cases involving physical violence to her person.

The occupation of a residence by twelve or fifteen members of a religious order in garb, who have a small altar in one room where regious services are conducted every morning, and the occasional use of the building for inducting novices into the order before invited guests, and the assembling of children in it on Sunday afternoons, are held not a violation of a covenant that the building shall be used for residence purposes only, in the Washington case of Hunter Tract Improvement Company v. Catholic Bishop Corporation, 167 Pac. 100, L. R. A. 1918A, 297.

One who at time of making contract is completely intoxicated may avoid it, notwithstanding that intoxication was voluntary, but not if he is only partially intoxicated.—Glenn v. Martin, [illegible] S. W. 456.

That no equitable lien or mortgage can be charged upon or enforced against a lot in a public cemetery for material purchased to improve and beautify the lot is held in the Alabama case of Kerlin v. Ramage, L. R. A. 1918A, 142.

Pneumonia contracted by a member of the Fire Department from becoming wet in the performance of his duties is held not to result from an accident, within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation act, in the Michigan case of Landers vs. Muskegon, 163 N. W. 43, L. R. A. 1918A, 218. The evidence was to the effect that, on the occasion in question, the firemen got wetter than usual, and this was due to the fact that the fire was in a boat, and, owing to the peculiar situation of the boat, considerable of the water was dashed back upon the firemen and they all became very wet. The case also showed that the firemen were on duty for nearly twelve hours before the fire was extinguished. It seems very clear that, under the decisions referred to, the severe wetting, and the long period of time in which the firemen were compelled to be in that condition, might very properly have been considered an accident. Certainly, if the position of firemen necessarily or ordinarily carried with it the necessity of being drenched to the skin and of working in that condition for a period of twelve hours, there would be very few applicants for such position.

Ordinance forbidding bathing in lake within city limits, from which water supply is drawn, but which is private property of owners of bordering lands, where city has acquired no right to water by purchase or eminent domain, is invalid as taking of property without just compensation.—Pounds v. Darling, Fla., 77 So. 666.

Declarations by one subsequently killed on a railroad track that when he got ready to go he would throw himself in front of a train and that one on the track at the point where he was killed could not be seen by the engineer are held not admissible in evidence as tending to show suicide in Greenacre v. Filby, L. R. A. 1918A, 234.

A telephone company handling a great number of calls each day in a large city will not be required to furnish its subscribers monthly itemized bills of local messages for which a charge has been made, it is held in the New York case of Tracy v. New York Telephone Co., P. U. R. 1918A, 128, where it would impair the service by requiring a great amount of additional work, and would not result in greater accuracy than the present method of recording messages by pressing an electric button connected with a recording machine.

The New York Times in Chicago

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am prompted voluntarily to express to you my constant appreciation of The New York Times, which is so far above the standards of efficiency of any other newspaper in supplying the real, worth-while news of the day that even after reading all the Chicago newspapers daily I find I am not up to date until I have received The New York Times and digested its contents two days later.

The marked contrast is that your publication gives me the news of the world in which I am vitally interested, rather than the local news which seems to satisfy publishers of the average newspaper.

For instance, the copy of the House bill of Congress authorizing the Third Liberty Loan was not available in Washington until April 2. Various officials of the Federal Reserve Bank, Chicago, and the Executive Department of the Liberty Loan Committee of Chicago (Seventh Federal Reserve District) were also anxiously awaiting information regarding the proposed Congressional act.

It was not until April 2, when I received The New York Times of March 30 containing a full copy of the act, that I was able to use it in supplying the desired information to them.

At 5 o'clock tonight the Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank asked me if I had a copy of the act and I was glad to send him the above clipping of The Times of March 30. Either the Treasury Department is hopelessly unable properly to serve the Federal Banks or a 2-cent investment in The Times beats every other service known to Chicago.

C. FREDERICK CHILDS.

MANY NEWSPAPERS FOR OUR MEN IN FRANCE

Periodicals in the English Language Have Been Springing Up Both in Paris and Along the Front for Their Benefit

NO less than half a dozen American and British newspapers are being published in Paris for the soldiers of the English, Canadian, Australian, and American forces in France. Among the new publications in the English language are The Morning, published by Le Matin, and The Stars and Stripes, official newspapers of the American expeditionary force; The London Daily Mail's Paris edition, The Chicago Tribune's Paris edition, the official American aviation paper, Plane News, and another aviation paper, Flights and Landings.

Stephane Lauzanne, editor in chief of Le Matin, now in New York City, in commenting on the new publications the other day, said:

"The aim of the publishers of English language papers in Paris was wholly to add to the contentment of the British, and especially the American forces in France. Contributing to the happiness of these soldiers on active service in a foreign country means adding to their efficiency. No doubt it used to annoy the newly arrived, homesick American recruit to see his French comrade nonchalantly reading his home paper, when the best the American could do was to receive news a month old. Now the news is going into the trenches, to the battlefield, and even to the remote villages where American troops are billeted."

Two copies of The Morning, although they were the ninth and fourteenth issues, were the first Mr. Lauzanne had seen. Most of the English language newspapers are printed weekly. All except The New York Herald's Paris edition were established within the last Winter and most of them within the last three months. Although there is cable news in The Morning, there are no date lines after the fashion of the American newspapers. The Herald, Chicago Tribune, and Mail print their cable news in the American style. The Stars and Stripes, which is printed for our army in the Paris office of The Mail, has a large sporting section, also cartoons, short stories, and jokes. The bulk of its news concerns activities among Pershing's troops. The Plane News, published in camp "now and then," carries aviation news almost exclusively.

The characteristic of these newspapers is cheerfulness. They are full of sunny comment and hopeful news. There are accounts of events in Washington and other capitals, and the editors also find space for little items from small Western and Mid-Western towns. Much humorous matter is included—jokes of war origin as well as old-timers.

Said Augustus Post, Secretary of the Aero Club of America, after he visited many sections of the battlefront recently:

"The men are literally crazy for news from home. They are indescribably happy when they receive papers from their own city or town. Each one is more interested in the gossip and twaddle of his community than he is about the doings in Congress.

"These men are living in dreams. War is too terrible for any one who has not been in it to realize. The men do not think of war any more than they have to. They dream of home. They live in the past and visualize the present—not as it is for them at the front, but as it is at home. Much of the morale of an army depends on the happiness of the men, and much of the contentment of the men depends on news and papers from home. It is a wonderful thing for them to be able to get news so quickly as these new Paris publications give it to them. The good results can hardly be estimated. But that is not sufficient. Send them also papers from home as often as possible. It will do much toward their efficiency."

From one of the new periodicals it is learned that there is a big demand in the trenches for American songs. According to The Morning, not only are the American troops singing the old favorite American songs, but the Canadians, Australians and other British soldiers, and even the Frenchmen, who do not comprehend the words, have taken up such airs as "John Brown's Body," "Marching Through Georgia," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp!" In acknowledgment of this popularity, The Morning prints in each issue a well-known American song.

"THE HATCHET" KILLS MONOTONY OF THE SEA

IT isn't only when they get over there that the boys of the A. E. F. have their own newspaper. There are daily papers on the transports, too. Such is The Hatchet. It is the size of one small sheet of typewriter paper, printed on both sides, and in its four columns it contains fun, facts, advice, poetry, anecdotes, and the latest news for the troops on the way. With the exception of a contributor or two, the revelation of whose identity could not give aid or comfort to the enemy, The Hatchet contains no names of men, ships, places, units or anything else that has to do with the voyage. It follows the rules of the censorship so closely that it can be sent home without further examination. It is published on the transport by a staff of changing personnel and delivered free each day, through the Sergeants, to every soldier aboard.

"The Road to France," a poem by Daniel M. Henderson, appropriately filled half the first page of The Hatchet on the first day of a recent voyage. On the first page, too, was this message from the commanding officer:

"1. It is important that all co-operate intelligently and zealously with the naval authorities in charge of the ship. For months many of us have been shooting on naval rifle ranges, and those so favored are aware of gratitude, already due the Navy for its assistance. As the voyage progresses, all of us will have further cause to thank the Navy. Let us express our gratitude by helpful co-operation and willing obedience to naval regulations, most of which have as their object the safeguarding of the many lives aboard ship.

"2. I know the members of this command well enough to feel perfect confidence that in an emergency they will conduct themselves in a manner suited to the title 'soldiers of America.'"

A large part of the remainder of the paper's issue was occupied that day with news from London, Paris, Washington, and the A. E. F.

On the second day the editors thought it time to introduce the transport's sister ships. There was published, consequently, the following:

"Who's Who to Port and Starboard?

"It is mighty jolly—this traveling en famille, as the French say. Sister ships floating all round, signals wigwagging back and forth, hitting up the sign language as lively as a pair of gossips in a deaf-mute asylum.

"But when a reporter for The Hatchet wants to tell you right out in print who our nice neighbors are—the censor jams on the lid and we're tongueless. Take the one-funneled sister to port, for instance; all we can say is that she was named for a distinguished American; while the two-funneled party carries a monicker that smacks of Southern Europe. Aft there trails a high, single-funneled ship whose name begins with a consonant and contains five letters, while the weird lady to starboard, camouflaged till she looks like a futurist blueberry pie in swimming, is a tiny little ship with a foreign-flavored name that suggests labors ministerial—and joys bucolic.

"Now you know 'em all by heart, please respect our confidence. Don't mention 'em except in whispers!"

One of the principal features of The Hatchet this trip was the series of parodies entitled "Mother Goose at Sea." Here are some of the rhymes:

"Sing a song of sisters,
Seven ships at sea,
Semaphoring chattily,
'Tres bien' and 'Oui!'

"When the night has settled,
Silence rules the deep—
'Cause the Hun might catch you
Talking in your sleep!"

"Little Boy Blue, come blow your horn,
And show me the way a life belt's worn:
Fasten one mattress fore and aft
And sing me to sleep on a bobbing raft."

"Tom, Tom, the pacifist's son,
Sailed to France to down the Hun;
When he returns he'll sure insist
On putting the Fist in pacifist."

"Diddle, diddle, dumpling, our son John
Goes to bed with his trousers on;
Campaign hat and hobnailed boot—
Ain't his swimming costume cute?"

The Hatchet contains much besides jokes. Some of its poems are serious—and very good; it offers stimulating advice and pertinent comment; its news columns are most informative; and here and there one finds brief sketches, of which the following is an example:

"Way aft on the boat, where the colored troops are quartered, there is a scene strangely picturesque and mystical in its light and shadows. Every night, when darkness falls, the deck over stern becomes deserted, except for the black figure of a pacing sentry.

"Pushing open the screened door leading to aft companionway, a faint murky light looms from the steep iron stairway. Half way down, pause and look! Under the handrail you will be gazing upon a large, dimly lit room on a further deck below.

"The only light, near the wall, is shaded; it touches the white hair of an army officer. He is sitting on a camp stool which is placed on a table. Around him on all sides is a sea of colored faces. The iron bunks, which tier the wall three high, give seating space for some, and legs dangle over edges and the heads of those beneath. The room, darkened and heavy with smoke, is filled with men. Silence is complete except for the voice of the speaker, who is telling the story of Joan of Arc. He is speaking to them in the same way as if telling a fairy tale to children.

"They listen with intentness. Every night this is seen, and the simple history of France and her people is gradually being unfurled to these children of America."

On April 6, an aniversary number was published, with appropriate commemoration of our entry into the war, and on the next day The Hatchet's simple report of the special anniversary service must have brought poignant thrill to the people "back here" to whom the boys sent their copies of the transport's little paper. Published for the entertainment and information of the soldiers aboard ship, the transport newspaper offers friends here at home an illuminating record of transport life.

It was not until the next to the last day of the "Volume II" voyage that the identity of the editors was to some extent revealed in the paper's columns.

OLD SIXTY-NINTH'S EDITORIAL EFFORT

THE American soldier's opinion of the enemy is presented concisely in the first issue of a four-page newspaper published by members of Company C, 165th Infantry, (the old 69th Regiment of New York.) It is one of the pioneer publications of the American forces in France and is called See—What Happens.

In an article entitled "Hand-Made Soldiers" is described the difference between the American and the German soldier, as follows:

"Those of us who have seen him in action do not underestimate the power of the German soldier. He is a perfect fighting machine, the greatest machine-made product that Prussian militarism, after forty years of effort, has shown civilization. But Fritz will be beaten.

"The difference between the American and German soldier is the difference between hand-made and machine-made lace. The latter is a perfect product. Its stitches are in much closer accord and in much better alignment than are those of the hand-made kind, and yet it is not valuable. Tests have proved this.

"The American soldier is a hand-made one. Not as perfect as is his machine-made rival, he is nevertheless more valuable, because he uses, and is encouraged in the use of, what the German soldier is forbidden to use—his own brains."

American privates are fast thinkers. It has been said often by American Army officers that some of their privates, who did not know what it was to handle a rifle, could command men after a few months of training. As everybody knows, each American soldier has the opportunity of getting an officer's commission, but such is not the case in Germany. The German soldier must go into the army when he becomes of age, and seldom does he advance himself.

Another article, "Our Enemy the Friend," contains this paragraph:

"Before the Hun tore to shreds the scraps of paper which had been signed with the blood of his honored dead, 'Our Friend the Enemy' was a common expression. Today our country faces the same words differently arranged and finds in them a tragic meaning. 'Our Enemy the Friend' is the foe that our dear ones at home are in a finish fight with. It is a cruel fight, but Americans must triumph."

"THE EXHAUST" AMUSES AMBULANCE WORKERS

THE month of April saw the appearance of Volume I., Number 1, of The Exhaust, a four-page paper to be published monthly by the members of the S. S. U. 523, "in the particular locality where they may happen to be at the time." The S. S. U. 523 has nothing to do with submarines! It is the Section Sanitaire Etats-Unis 523, one of the ambulance organizations at the front. In the first number of its newspaper it announces modestly that it is the best organization of all; it is from Princeton; its cars bear the Princeton tiger as an emblem, and in The Exhaust it breaks loose in merriment for the entertainment of its members and its friends. It satirizes the expression of war aims and idiosyncrasies of its own members; it has a great deal of fun over a great many things, with a vast amount of slang, many cheerful personal allusions, and an omnipresent spirit of jolly comradeship. But it has its serious moments, and, in its own way, it presents bits of news. Here is one item that shows how the editors deal with the current events of their section:

"During the last two months the section has lost, by transfer, two of its charter members. First, Sergeant 'Gaby' Lee was given the right to wear a Sam Browne and is now piloting the S. S. U. 624. Then our own 'Mary' Owen decided to take his barracks bag and have his candied figs sent to section 586.

"The two deserters had worked side by side in New York before the last half of the Hohenzollern brain gave way, and both enlisted with us back in the old days when it was not certain whether we were going to drive ambulances or carry stretchers.

"With Lee gone—and one glimpse at his elongated form would convince the most casual observer that he left a pretty big hole in our ranks—Owen could not resist the temptation of affiliating with the section having the backing of his Alma Mater, the University of California.

"We envy both 624 and 586 their new acquisitions. Both have proved that they are Class A ambulancers, and, what is more, good chaps to be with when something happens."

The Exhaust boasts a goodly array of cartoons, too, one of which offers ironic suggestions as to "how to stall your engine without getting out of the car."

Among the burlesque peace terms proposed by one of the ambulance drivers are the following:

"In order to imbue the minds of the German people with a spirit of anti-militarism, they are to be drilled publicly one-half hour each year by Sergeant Edward A. Stevens.

"The German House of Parliament to be made responsible for all political murders in the city of Philadelphia.

"In order to remove von Hindenburg as a possible international menace, he is to become, automatically on the signing of this peace, Vice President of the United States."

Here are some of the bits of serious advice, culled from one of The Exhaust's editorials:

"Play out your part like a man, not a ham actor. You're on the stage all the time.

"Use your freedom, but take care not to abuse it by too loud a mouth, carelessness in dress, or the ignorant rebelliousness of a man who exposes his manhood by his stubborn refusal to become the soldier he has elected himself to be."

Other editorials and paragraphs speak to "the Princeton spirit" on the battlefield as well as the gridiron, pay tribute to the "honor system," and express the admiration and affection felt by the section for its French officer, Lieutenant Edward Motte.

Lieutenant Motte is the French censor of the paper, Lieutenant Thomas Butkiewicz the American censor; Richard D. Brooke, editor; Walter L. Hopkins, cartoonist and "art staff;" John B. Little, business manager, and Henry G. Gilland, "copy boy."

"The value of the Duo-Art Piano is almost incalculable. It is the instrument of a new musical art."
—Harold Bauer

THE DUO-ART PIANO

"IT is marvelous" say the scores of people who are daily hearing this wonderful instrument. The originators of the Pianola have in this Duo-Art Piano evolved a perfect medium for bringing piano music into the home. There is no comparison between the Duo-Art and any other "player" or "reproducing" piano. It stands supreme in every particular.

1. Tone Color—Having twice the number of tone gradations to be found in other instruments, it attains a delicacy of shading, a perfection of "tone color" impossible in any other reproducing or player instrument.

2. Time Control—The famous patented Metrostyle not only regulates the time, but instructs and guides the one playing, assuring the correct tempo interpretation of the selection.

3. Accenting the Solo—by means of the wonderful Themodist, which brings out the solo (or melody) perfectly, at the same time controlling the accompaniment so that it properly supports the solo.

4. No Pedaling—the air chamber is constantly supplied without foot pedaling, permitting the one playing to devote his entire attention to interpretation.

5. Simplicity of Construction—No complicated or troublesome mechanisms.

6. Reproducing the Actual Playing of the Great Pianists—by means of the wonderful Duo-Art Record Rolls. These compositions are played and cut into the paper roll at the same time. They are carefully edited and O.K.'d by the pianist who played them. Practically every great pianist of the present day has pronounced the Duo-Art Reproducing Action—"Unequalled, Supreme."

THE Duo-Art is a pianoforte, and may be played by hand in the usual manner. It is the original Pianola, playing any 88-note music roll, and offering unlimited possibilities for individual interpretation. It reproduces perfectly the actual performance of the great pianists. We urge you to come in and let us play it for you—let us show you its exclusive and wonderful features.

GENERAL NEWS AND NOTES OF THE MUSICAL WORLD

Dropping the Pilot of Premier Symphony—Citizens of Boston Take Task Major Higginson Resigns.

THREE significant letters added to its name gave striking evidence within the last week of the passing of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as an institution controlled by one man, its founder and sole guarantor during thirty-seven years, to be succeeded by a governing board of nine trustees and by an organization hereafter to be known as "The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc."

Major Henry Lee Higginson invited to his home twenty-five leading citizens of Boston, all of whom were patrons of his orchestra and persons of musical taste like himself. To these men and women in a private meeting, unreported beyond a formal announcement in the papers next day, he declared the time had come for him to lay the burden down. He left it to the meeting to decide whether the famous orchestra should be abandoned or, with their help, should be continued under the guidance of younger men.

President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard University was one of Major Higginson's guests, and he became the spokesman for the others in a stirring tribute, which should become public some day, recalling the services of the Boston Symphony and of its founder to the cause of music in America. President Eliot said it would be nothing short of a public calamity if the orchestra were to come to an end, and the upshot of it was that his opinion was also the sense of the meeting.

Judge Frederick P. Cabot, who was named as President of the new orchestra board, is a Judge of the Juvenile Court of Massachusetts, and one of the Trustees of Radcliffe College. He is also a relative of Major Higginson, whose mother was Mary Cabot of Boston. M. A. De Wolfe Howe, another of the new board, is official historian of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a former associate editor of The Youth's Companion and The Atlantic Monthly, and biographer of Charles Eliot Norton.

Among the others, Ernest B. Dane is a banker, the President of the Brookline Trust Company. His wife, who was Miss Helen Pratt of New York, has for years maintained weekly organ recitals in the great music room of their Brookline home, as famous in its way as is Mrs. Gardner's art gallery in the Fenway. The rest of the board, recalling several well-known family names of Boston, includes John E. Lodge, Frederick E. Lowell, Arthur Lyman, Henry B. Sawyer, Galen P. Stone, and Bentley W. Warren.

Boston's Choice of a Conductor.

First among the tasks of Major Higginson's successors was the choice of a conductor in place of Dr. Muck, now interned at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. It was announced at once that negotiations were in progress which had for their purpose the engagement of a conductor who "will be welcomed by the public and will maintain the commanding musical position of the orchestra."

The Trustees believed their undertaking of the direction of the orchestra to be "justified by guarantees already secured toward placing it upon a sound financial basis," and they entered on their duties "with a full realization of the significance of the orchestra to the life of their city and country." With regard to the selection of a conductor for next year, no announcement was made pending final action of the board.

Among the names of conductors proposed, according to unofficial reports, were Sergei Rachmaninoff, Arturo Toscanini, Sir Henry Wood, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Leopold Stokowski, and many other more or less remote possibilities. As remarked in Boston, if the choice was to be made from Europe, it was confined to France, Italy, and England of the belligerent countries, to Holland and Scandinavia of the neutral, and to Russia.

Of these, Rachmaninoff alone, on his one visit to America in 1909-10, had conducted the Boston Symphony in his own works. Gabrilowitsch, another member of the group actually here and active now, was generally believed the most available. Toscanini, who would add distinction to a list hitherto drawn from Teutonic countries, has remained in Italy since the war.

For the rest, Sir Henry Wood had made a dignified and enduring rather than brilliant record in London. Stokowski was thought to be under obligation to stand by Philadelphia, for which he left his former Cincinnati post a few years back. Two leading Parisians were already under American contracts—Monteux, at the Metropolitan, and Hasselmans, promised to the Chicago Opera next Fall.

The Boston Symphony players ended their home season last night, led, as for five weeks past, by Ernst Schmidt, one of their own number. The usual series of Summer "pops" was announced to begin tomorrow, under Agide Jacchia.

Philadelphians to Play Here.

The Philadelphia Orchestra is to give five subscription concerts in New York next season, playing as a regular visitor in Carnegie Hall on Tuesday afternoons, Nov. 19, Dec. 17, Jan. 21, Feb. 11, and March 11. This series, planned by the Philadelphia management independently without local subsidy, will take the place of single visits made annually for some years past, which were financed by the Friends of Music here in New York. In its home town on April 20 the orchestra ended its eighteenth season.

Fifty concerts were given in the Quaker series, with four extras or benefits, and forty-three on tour. Of the twenty-five programs, each twice performed in the famous old Academy of Music, the compositions credited to allied nations reached a remarkable figure, outnumbering those from Teutonic sources in the ratio of about 50 to 30 names. Four American works in the list were Kelley's "New England" symphony, Foote's "Omar Khayyam," Rubin Goldmark's "Samson," and Philip Goepp's "Heroic March."

Minneapolis Players on Tour.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, however moderate its home series, is now making one of the longest Spring tours undertaken by any organization this year. The fifteenth season ended with a twelfth and final symphony concert in the Auditorium of Minneapolis on March 27, when Mme. Galli-Curci was the star. A last appearance of the orchestra some days later was the nineteenth of a series of "pops," making thirty-one dates in the home town.

Conductor Emil Oberhoffer and his men began their twelfth annual tour on April 7, to continue until June 4, traveling as far south as Memphis and Little Rock, east to Findlay, Ohio, and west to Hutchinson, Kan. Mr. Oberhoffer's symphony series covered Teutonic and allied music in the ratio of twenty-one to twenty-eight. There were six Americans, Mrs. Beach, Borowski, Chadwick, MacDowell, Oberhoffer, and Oldberg.

Chicago Orchestra's Season.

The Chicago Orchestra, supreme in the West and far too rarely heard anywhere in the East, completed on April 20 its twenty-seventh season, during which time it had but two conductors, the late Theodore Thomas and his former assistant and present successor, Fred Stock. Mr. Stock made a world's record by producing in practically every program played since America entered the war at least one work by an American composer, a formidable list already printed last Dec. 5 in THE TIMES.

Mr. Stock's Americans included Ballantyne, Borowski, Brune, Carpenter, Chadwick, Cole, Delamarter, Gilbert, Goldmark, Hadley, Herbert, Loeffler, MacDowell, Oldberg, Otterstrom, Skilton, Smith, Sowerby, Stock, Strube, and Weidig. A comparison of allied and Teutonic music gave the figures 80 and 60, respectively. There were twenty-eight programs for the fifty-six concerts in the orchestra's own hall—others on tour not stated—and the Chicago series since these concerts began in 1891, fourteen years under Thomas and thirteen under Stock, reached a grand total of 1,324, exceeding the record of New York's oldest orchestra in America.

Cincinnati Welcomes Ysaye.

Since the appointment of Eugene Ysaye, the great Belgian violinist, as permanent conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, the position of the Ohio River town as a music centre has assumed a new interest. Dr. Kunwald, the former conductor, was about the first leading musician among enemy aliens interned by the Federal authorities last January. Mr. Ysaye will begin his term with the orchestra next Fall, but he is now in Cincinnati to direct it in that city's most famous festival.

The twenty-third of the Cincinnati biennial May festivals, founded by Theodore Thomas in 1873, will be held from Tuesday to Saturday of this week, May 7 to 11. The veteran chorus of 340 voices will be assisted by a thousand children from the public schools. Some of the works to be sung are Kelley's "The Pilgrim's Progress," for which the Music Hall is sold out in advance; Haydn's "The Seasons," Bach's "St. Matthew Passion," Rossini's "Stabat Mater," and Wolf-Ferrari's "La Vita Nuova" in conclusion.

Ann Arbor's May Festival.

Patriotic features will mark the twenty-fifth annual May festival at Ann Arbor, Mich., which completes a quarter century of activity on May 15 to 18 inclusive. Six concerts will engage stars of the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Companies, together with instrumental soloists, while the massed forces will include the University of Michigan Choral Union and a large chorus of children, as well as the Chicago Orchestra.

Cesar Franck's "The Beatitudes" will open the festival at Ann Arbor, and another principal production in concert form will be Bizet's "Carmen." A children's chorus will sing Benoit's cantata, "Into the World." Rudolph Ganz, pianist, will appear in the same program, and on the closing day there will be an organ recital by Joseph Bonnet.

Bethlehem Choir to Sing.

From all parts of the country there is demand for tickets for the 1918 Bethlehem Bach Festival, to be held May 24 and 25 at Lehigh University. Dr. J. Fred Wolle will lead the 250 singers, with the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Moravian Trombone Choir. Bach's "Ode of Mourning" is among the cantatas for the opening day, while two Saturday sessions will be devoted to the B minor Mass.

Norfolk Festival in June.

George W. Chadwick's "The Land of Our Hearts," a short choral work just published by the Boston Music Company, has been selected for performance at the Norfolk festival, to be held at Litchfield, Conn., in June.

10,000 to Sing in "Elijah."

Lieutenant Sousa is to lead a chorus of 10,000 in Mendelssohn's "Elijah" at the Polo Grounds on Sunday, June 2, in aid of the War Savings campaign. High school and college students and members of choral societies who will take part are now training under Dr. Frank R. Rix, George H. Gartlan, Louis Koemmenich, Edward G. Marquard, C. Mortimer Wiske of Newark, and T. E. Morgan. Among the stars announced to sing is Mme. Schumann-Heink.

THE CURTAIN FALLS ON CLAUDE DEBUSSY

MUSIC has its milestones, as peace has its victories, "no less renowned than war." The curtain falls on the season of 1917-18, a year of total eclipse for much that the world held precious in art and life. Yet one event stands out in a retrospect of these latter days, the death of the strangely silent Claude Debussy.

"What his own countrymen would say of him," remarks The London Times, "would be that he has spoken with the true voice of France, and we, using a slightly different expression, should say that he broke the yoke of German music. Future generations may look back on his pioneer work as we now look back on Claudio Montaverde."

Composer on His Work.

Debussy's own view of his masterwork, "Pelléas et Mélisande," is told in a translated latter to a lifelong friend in England, a letter which The Daily Telegraph of London believes has not hitherto been published. The composer wrote that, on reflection, he found it rather difficult to speak of "Pelléas" and to underline its characteristic portions, so he begged his correspondent to excuse what follows:

"Before all, you will do well to eliminate from discussion the question whether there is, or is not, melody in 'Pelléas.' It must be decisively understood that melody—or song (Lied)—is one thing, and that lyrical expression is another. It is illogical to think that one can make a fixed melodic line hold the innumerable nuances through which a character passes. That is not only a mistake of taste, but a mistake of 'quantity.'

"If in 'Pelléas' the symphonic development has, on the whole, small importance, it is to react against the pernicious neo-Wagnerian aesthetic which presumes to render, at the same time, the sentiment expressed by the character and the inner thoughts which impel its actions. In my opinion, these are two contradictory operations, from a lyrical point of view, and, when united, can only weaken each other. Perhaps it is better that music should by simple means—a chord? a curve?—endeavor to render the successive impulses and moods as they are produced, without making laborious efforts to follow a symphonic development, foreseen, and always arbitrary, to which one will necessarily be tempted to sacrifice the emotional development. That is why there is no 'guiding thread' in 'Pelléas,' and its characters are not subjected to the slavery of 'Leit-motive.' Take note that the motive which accompanies 'Mélisande' is never altered. It returns in the fifth act unchanged at any point, because, in reality, Mélisande is always unchanged in herself, and dies without any one—or, perhaps, only old Arckel—ever having understood her.

"The simplicity of 'Pelléas' must be insisted upon. I spent twelve years in removing from it everything of a parasitic nature that might have crept into it. Never did I seek in it to revolutionize anything whatever. But the habit has grown of dragging music into places of ill-repute, or of making of it a game of skill that none can understand without hard training. I have endeavored to prove that people who sing can yet remain human and natural, without ever needing to resemble madmen or puzzles. That at first disturbed the professionals, and also the simple public, who, accustomed to being moved by means as false as they were grandiloquent, did not at first understand that all that was being asked of it was a little good-will. That is all I can find to tell you. The rest belongs to anecdote, on which I am badly 'documented,'" was the composer's conclusion.

Ave atque Vale, Debussy.

James Huneker, writing in the Philadelphia Press of the recent passing of Claude Debussy, hailed him as "a musician doubled by a poet," the most subtle composer since Chopin, and, compared with Schoenberg and Stravinsky, almost a conservative. "In a decade he may be called a reactionary, for nowadays life is short and art is swift." Long before his death the gifted Frenchman had been critically ranged. It would be rash to say he had achieved his artistic apogee, as he might have had surprises in store; but it was safe to conclude that "Pelléas et Mélisande" was his lyric masterpiece, and that the dewy freshness of the "Apres-midi d'un Faune" would not be repeated.

"In 1903 I was introduced to Claude Achille Debussy one Summer evening in the Boulevard des Italiens. He spoke a few polite words, and impressed me as a man who had early used himself up because of his intense inner life. He wrote much musical criticism at one time, chiefly memorable for its unsympathetic attitude toward Schumann and Wagner, not because of reasons patriotic, but no doubt the result of a natural reaction against the chief educative forces in his development. Without 'Tristan and Isolde' there would be little of artistic novelty in 'Pelléas et Mélisande,' unless we include Moussorgsky and the whole-tone scale. Later, I asked of Maurice Maeterlinck his opinion of Debussy's musical setting to his play.

"It was an imprudent question, as I had forgotten the row over the opera, I knew that Maeterlinck's wife, Georgette Leblanc, sang the 'Mélisande,' but that Mary Garden ('Il faut cultiver notre Jardin,' Voltaire wrote in 'Candide,') had captured the rôle at the Opéra Comique. Now, Mr. Maeterlinck is a polite man and his answer was guarded, nevertheless his dislike of the music pierced his phrases. To him it was evident that his play needed no tonal embellishment, that it was more poetic and dramatic without the Debussy frame. He is right. Yet the combination of poet and composer is irresistible. Claude Achille Debussy is one of the rare Little Masters who suffered all his life from a nostalgia for the land that lies east of the sun and west of the moon, the land of fantasy and evanescent dreams. His music will live."

As to Pelleas and Melisande.

The music to "Pelléas et Mélisande," which America heard—"thanks to Oscar Hammerstein"—is, in Mr. Huneker's opinion, so absolutely wedded to the moods and situations that as absolute music it is unthinkable. And the moods are usually "con sordino." Notwithstanding his musicianship Debussy is obviously a "literary" composer; that is, his brain must be first excited by a dramatic situation, a beautiful bouquet of verse, the contemplation of a picture, or an episode in fiction. Why ask whether the initial impulse to his music be the Mona Lisa or a quatrain by Verlaine, a recondite mood of Baudelaire? Without anxious preoccupation, the composer has caught the exact note of Maeterlinck, and he maintains that note throughout the opera. As it is impossible to divorce music and text—Debussy seems to be Maeterlinck's musical other self—so it would be useless to allude to the characteristic qualities of the score. It is like some antique and lovely tapestry that hypnotizes you as it slowly moves across your consciousness.

"It is the dream-haunted atmosphere of Edgar Allan Poe, the Poe of the dark Tarn of Auber, of Ligiea and Ellenora, of Berenice and Helen, those frail apparitions who are as incorporeal as they are exotic. It is the complete envelopment of the poem by an atmospheric musical haze shot through with gleams of light never shown on land or sea that is fascinating. We forgive its drugged monotony, its occasional cacophony, its lack of action, its few stirring climaxes. After waiting for a passionate outburst, when it does come it is overpowering in its intensity. The tact of omission has never been pushed so far.

"In the piano partition little may be gleaned of its poetic fervor, its reticences, its delicate landscapes, psychological subtleties. The pattern is never in evidence, yet the web is spun exceeding fine. His orchestration reveals the silver grays of Monet and the fire-tipped iridescence of Monticelli. His musical palette proclaims Debussy a discreet impressionist, one in the key of Verlaine, who loved nuance, not flaunting brilliant colors. 'Pas la couleur, rien que la nuance . . . et tout ce reste est littérature,' sang Paul of the asymetrical jaws and supernal thirst.

"Naturally this highly peptonized aural diet is not very nourishing. Like the poetry and prose-poems of Stephane Mallarme, a little of Debussy suffices. He is precious. His ideas are limited. Nevertheless, there is magic in his music, the magic of evocation which only the dozen 'superior persons scattered throughout the universe,' of whom Huysmans speaks, may understand."

Little wonder, exclaims Huneker, that he interpreted Mallarme, Verlaine, Maeterlinck, Baudelaire in tone. He was affiliated to that choir of sensitive souls, a poet himself if he had not written a har of music.

Some Orchestral Echoes.

New York's orchestras had closed their season when Debussy's name flashed over the cables last month, but symphony bands in other cities were still active, and by coincidence the composer's first nocturne, "Clouds," was played in his memory both in Boston and Chicago. Philip Hale in the Eastern city wrote that it was a question which of Debussy's orchestral compositions would best illustrate his peculiar genius in a memorial service.

"There are some who say his indisputable genius shines brightest in his symphonic sketches, 'The Sea.' Would not 'The Afternoon of a Faun' or 'Iberia' be a fuller revelation? To us it seems that by these two compositions, the string quartet, some of the songs and piano pieces, and 'Pelléas and Mélisande' he will be known by the generations to come. For Debussy's place among the immortals is assured.

"William Wallace in a remarkable book maintains that we are only on the threshold of the temple where the muse is enthroned. There she waits patiently for her priests and worshippers. Debussy gave to musicians the keys to new chapels in this temple.

"For musiclovers he broadened the horizon. He suffered the fate of innovators; he was ridiculed, he was called a charlatan, a poseur—what was he not called? He has suffered, too, from imitators, suffered in this respect with Wagner and Richard Strauss.

"Young composers, forgetting that Debussy triumphed in the Paris Conservatory, where the strictest forms of composition are inexorably taught, having themselves little technical equipment, have produced vapid, chaotic works.

"On the other hand, he has influenced the mighty of his generation. The French, the Italians, even certain Germans and Englishmen, write now far otherwise than they would if Debussy had not ahown the way."

Boston and the Ballet.

The Metropolitan ballet in Boston, by special arrangement, had a day to itself in the recent week's visit of New York's opera tbers. Rimsky-Korsakoff's revolutionary "Coq d'Or" had its first performance in the neighboring city, following a successful series here, and with it was seen Gilbert's "Dance in Place Congo," the work of a Bostonian, a prophet not without honor in his own country and his own place.

Mr. Hale, in The Boston Herald, said of "Le Coq d'Or" that children of 6 or 60 could see it. "unconscious of satirical intent or bitter application, as they read 'Gulliver's Travels' without thought of the Dean's terrible irony." Boston's blue spectacles played an odd trick when a critic wrote of the strange charm of the performance by singers who voiced the chief characters of the drama, "sitting side by side, dressed uniformly in drab." At the New York production these artists had certainly appeared in robes of red.

"Mme. Garrison sang the extremely difficult music of the Queen purely, fluently, and expressively. Mme. Howard and Messrs. Didur and Diaz displayed a fine appreciation of the ironical text. We mention them because on them reated the burden of song. And what shall be said of Mr. Bolm's King, Mr. Bartik's General, Mr. Bonfiglio's Astrologer, of Quesnio Smith's Amelfa, so anxious about Dodon's 'peaceful sleep'? No description would do justice to their joyous folly.

"To attempt a description of the courtiers, attendants, Bojars, soldiers, or Queen's attendants would be as vain as an effort to picture in words the beauty of the costumes, the wild stage settings, the lighting, the evolutions, marches, and processions. Mme. Galli in repose and in movement was a delight to the eye. At the same time it must be said that the necessity of timing inexorably the action to the music in some instances gave the appearance of rigidity to principals and subordinates.

"Henry F. Gilbert's ballet, 'The Dance in Place Congo,' was performed for the first time in Boston. Mr. Monteux conducted. The chief dancers were Mme. Galli, as the quadroon girl, and Messrs. Bonfiglio and Bartik as the rival lovers. The scene was beautiful; the crowd was adroitly managed; there was vivid, turbulent action; but we were disappointed in the music. Mr. Gilbert is a composer of indisputable talent.

"There are some impressive pages in this score, but as a whole it is persistently boisterous, without relieving episodes. In spite of his Creole themes there is little true Southern color, nor is the sensuousness or sensuality of the quadroon girl found in the music itself. Mme. Galli danced and acted with savage fury. The rivals and the crowd were not far behind her in this respect,"

PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK.

WITH a program so filled by volunteers that Mr. Sousa is to start at 7:50 o'clock sharp, Geraldine Farrar has sold out the Metropolitan for tonight's "patriotic music festival" arranged by her for the benefit of the Stage Women's War Relief. The opera orchestra will open the program, and after "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" there will be a musket drill by fifty Naval Reserves from Pelham Bay and a signal drill by men from the Electrical School at the Navy Yard. Irene Franklin and Grace La Rue will sing, Robert Emmett Keane will speak, and Leon Rothier will give the "Marseillaise."

John McCormack will appear midway in the concert in a group of favorite songs. In the second part Miss Farrar will sing the second act of "Madama Butterfly," with Rita Fornia, Thomas Chalmers, Angelo Bada, Pietro Audisio, and Ella Bakos, conducted by Gennaro Papi. Efrem Zimbalist will play violin solos, and George M. Cohan will sing his marching song, "Over There."

Lieutenant Sousa will conduct 350 men of the massed bands from the Third Naval District. Richard Ordynski will muster 600 persons on the stage for "The Star-Spangled Banner." There will souvenir programs, with a portrait of Miss Farrar, the original painting to be sold at auction, being by Neysa McMein, a woman artist, who has been accepted as a volunteer with the American camouflage force in France.

Claudia Muzio, soprano of the Metropolitan, and Max Rosen, the violinist, will appear in a festival concert at Cooper Union tonight to celebrate the completion of six years' work by the People's Music League. Interest attaches to Rosen's appearance downtown, for he grew up on the east side, studied at the Music School Settlement, and appeared as a boy in Cooper Union before sailing for Europe to study under Auer.

The People's Music League was started six years ago by the People's Institute to bring good music to people who could not afford to pay concert prices. In the last year more than 200 concerts were given by the league, about 100 in the public schools, some twenty-five at Cooper Union, and seventy by neighborhood orchestras and choral societies founded by the league.

Since 1912 six orchestras have been organized—the Beethoven with 100 members, the Schubert with forty-five, the Mozart with thirty, the Cooper Union, the West Harlem, and the Harmony Band, as well as the Paole Zion Singing Society, which is devoted exclusively to Jewish music.

The Music School Settlement will hold its free monthly concert at the Settlement House, at 55 East Third Street, this afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Arthur Farwell will conduct the Senior Orchestra in Pergolesi's "Concertino" in F minor, Handel's "Pastoral Symphony" from "The Messiah," and the waltz from Tschaikowsky's "Serenade" for strings. The vocal ensemble, led by Laura Elliot, will sing Handel's "O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Mo?" and a "Hymn to the Madonna," arranged from an old folksong of the Netherlands.

Beth Levin Siegel, pianist, and Mary Levitt, soprano, will appear at the Young Women's Hebrew Association this evening for the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors' Welfare Fund. Miss Siegel will play music of Brahms, Chopin, Liszt, and MacDowell, and Miss Levitt will sing airs by Horsman, Mrs. Beach, and others from Tschaikowsky's "Jeanne d'Arc" and Catalani's "La Wally."

Hanna Brocks Oetteking, soprano, assisted by Umberto Martucci at the piano, will appear at the Young People's Branch of the Educational Alliance tonight in a program of songs by Carey, Handel, Debussy, Chausson, Mahler, Reger, Eugen Halle, Cecil Burleigh, Uca Waldrop, and W. Keith Elliott.

Karl Jorn, tenor, and Adamo Didur, bass, are announced to sing this afternoon at the Karl Marx celebration in Carnegie Hall.

May Peterson, Leon Rothier, Mischa Levitzki, and Sara Gurowitsch will assist at the Strand Theatre on Thursday afternoon in a benefit for the Ambulance Unit which the Women's Homeopathic Hospital is sending to France.

The Swedish Singing Society will give a concert in Carnegie Hall next Sunday.

FREE TO THE PUBLIC.

Samuel A. Baldwin at his free organ recital at the City College this afternoon will play preludes by Bach and Handel, a fugue of Buxtebuds and a canon by Schumann, Nevin's "Will o' the Wisp," Rubinstein's "Melody in F," and the fifth organ symphony of Widor.

Debussy's "The Good Shepherd" is on Mr. Baldwin's program next Wednesday, with airs of Bach, Wagner, and Schubert, Becker's sonata No. 4, and the finale from the first symphony of Vierne.

Brooklyn Academy Concert.

Mathilde Charrot, soprano, will sing Wednesday evening at the Brooklyn Academy, presenting airs from "Aida" and "Traviata." Kathryn P. Gunn will play the violin obbligato in Gounod's "Ave Maria," and Emilia Quintero will assist at the piano.

People's Symphony Benefits.

Ethel Leginska, pianist, will give two recitals for the benefit of the People's Symphony Society on May 17 at the Brownsville Labor Lyceum, Brooklyn, and May 24 at Morris High School in the Bronx.

Singing for Boys Over There.

Some experiences of Americans now singing for the army in France are told in their letters to T. S. McLane of the entertainment section of the Y. M. C. A., the latest of these being from a New York choir singer, Beulah Dodge, who once succeeded Edna May in "The Belle of New York." Miss Dodge wrote:

"I strained my voice, and it was badly injured by singing in the thick cigarette smoke while I was having a heavy cold. The result was that I was completely disabled with an acute attack of laryngitis. I had resigned myself to never singing again, and really didn't much care, if I had given pleasure at all to the blessed boys who are giving all for us.

"For eight weeks I turned my attention to helping out in other ways at the Y. M. C. A. and at canteens. In the meantime, in spite of the attentions of three physicians, my voice—or a voice—returned, and I am again journeying about with the Liberty Quartet. I think it will be all right now, and I'll be more careful in the future.

"It was a joy to have Bill Janaushek finally catch up with us. It is impossible for an ensemble to do creditable work without an authoritative musical director. Bill is that, and we'll be mighty glad when he finishes his trip with Elsie Janis and returns to us, for we are sure enough going to pieces without him. The success of the quartet everywhere has been marked, and I am mighty glad to be with it again.

"We are all too happy for words, and not one but wishes to remain for two years, as you say, or for the duration of the war. I don't wish to return to America while there is one of our boys left here. I feel like mothering and sistering the whole army, and am dreading the future void when the great drama is finished and the curtain falls."

WARTIME MUSIC ACTIVITIES.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who is to appear at Camp Dix on May 8, has been devoting her season to singing in the American Army camps.

Elizabeth Tudor, soprano, will assist the Orpheus Club of Ridgewood in a concert tomorrow at Camp Merritt, N. J.

Lieutenant Fitzhugh Haensel has returned from France after several months' service with the Intelligence Department of the army.

Francis Rogers, with Mrs. Rogers, is returning from a tour of 100 concerts in the trenches in France for the Y. M. C. A.

David Bispham, the American baritone, is among the stars of music and drama who have offered their services to the theatre over there.

Captain Mario Guardabassi, once a singer at the Metropolitan, is now in this country with the Italian war mission to America.

Lucien Muratore, the French tenor of the Chicago Opera, has been singing the "Marseillaise" for the Liberty Loan.

Mischa Elman, the violinist, gave the use of his seven-passenger limousine for the Liberty Loan drive in New York.

Rudolph Ganz is going home to Switzerland for the Summer, playing on the way in Paris and in American camps in France.

John W. Frothingham, serving with the Red Cross in Serbia, has closed his New York music bureau till the end of the war.

War Tax Figures.

For the first time New York's annual outlay on a season's music may be verified or audited, so to speak, by comparison with the last year's reported collections of the war tax on theatres and amusements.

Unofficial figures credit the Metropolitan Opera with paying about $170,000 to the Government since last Fall, the concerts in Carnegie Hall, $40,000; the recitals in Aeolian Hall, $20,000, and other sources, $20,000 more. The total of $250,000 is one-tenth of the value of tickets sold or given away, so that the year's music stands the public and promoters about $2,500,000.

Statisticians have figured that the season of 1917-18 has included something like 200 opera performances, 132 symphony concerts, 128 song recitals, 100 miscellaneous benefits and private affairs, 45 piano recitals, 50 chamber music concerts, 38 violin recitals, 26 choral concerts, 10 'cello recitals, and a few scattering events, making the grand total around 800.

PLANS OF THE MUSICIANS.

Cantor Josef Rosenblatt of the Hungarian congregation Ohab Zedek, who recently refused a $1,000-a-night salary as tenor of the Chicago Opera, is to be heard in a series of song recitals throughout the country, making his first appearance at Carnegie Hall on Sunday afternoon, May 19, in a program of Russian, Hebrew, Italian, and English songs and operatic airs.

Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra of San Francisco, will give an orchestral concert of modern French music in Carnegie Hall on Friday evening, May 17, when he will present César Franck's symphony in D, Debussy's two nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals," the "Afternoon of a Faun," and Chabrier's "Spain."

Mischa Elman, the violinist, with Nina Morgana, soprano, and Morgan Kingston, tenor of the Metropolitan, will appear in the season's last concert under the auspices of the Brownsville Labor Lyceum, to be held Sunday evening, May 19, at the Hippodrome.

St. Mark's M. E. Church choir will give a concert Monday evening, May 20, in Carnegie Hall, presenting negro spirituals, arranged by E. A. Jackson, and "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," by Coleridge-Taylor.

Josef Hofmann has announced a piano recital on May 21 at Carnegie Hall for the Red Cross drive, with a brief address by Theodore Roosevelt.

Hugh Allen and Julia V. Grilli will give late season song recitals at Aeolian Hall respectively on May 14 and 25.

The Music School Settlement for Colored People will hold a benefit concert on May 27 at Aeolian Hall.

Kitty Cheatham is to sing May 11 at Macon, Ga., in a festival week of the Chautauqua of the South.

Various Coming Events.

Anna Fitziu will sing an air from Hadley's "Azora," accompanied by the composer, at a concert of the American Music Optimists to day at the Hotel Marseilles. There will be violin solos by Samuel Gardner.

Leah Melament, pianist, will play a concerto of Grieg this evening at the Waldorf-Astoria with the orchestra under Joseph Knecht.

MID-WEEK PICTORIAL

THE MERRY MONTH OF MAY IN THE THEATRES

Ibsen and The Suburbs

By JOHN CORBIN.

IT is very interesting, and rather surprising, the unanimity and the bland confidence with which those who do not happen to care for Ibsen dispose of him by quoting Henry James. Ibsen is the dramatist of Suburbia! The life he depicts is that of a small nation remote from cosmopolitan influences, and is therefore without interest for us.

Who are we—and who is Henry James? We are the nation that, caught in the throes of the world's profoundest agony, nourish our souls on the graces of the "Oh!" school of musical comedy and on the jocularities of Potash and Perlmutter. Henry James is the novelist of the twilight zone. Once upon a time he lived in the sunnier edge of the human penumbra, and his novels were the delight of a certain rare and exquisite aristocracy of taste. Then he plunged into the remoter borders of night and was lost to all but the most intrepid explorer. Emerging from a foray into the pathless tangles of his syntax, Frank Moore Colby entitled his essay "In Darkest James." What he had found there was at once miasmic and innocuous. "A wraith meets a spook at a midnight supper. Adultery follows as a Q. E. D." But no one is shocked. For "Mr. James's style is its own sufficient figleaf."

And who is Ibsen? Few people have ever really liked his plays—certainly not I, who am rather amazed at finding myself their champion. Given a leisure evening and an alternative choice, most of us would instinctively turn from "Brand" to "The Tragic Muse," from "Ghosts" to "The Turn of the Screw." But the great world judges otherwise. In Middle Europe Ibsen's influence resulted in a new school of dramatists—Sudermann and Hauptmann, Schnitzler and Bahr. In England it worked profoundly upon Shaw and touched even Pinero to the development of all that is best in him. France, most impervious of all nations to outside forces, resisted Ibsen mightily, and yet was never again quite the same. Even among us, latest and most lethargic of peoples, there is a public not quite satisfied with a theatre which would ignore all that is grim and stirring in human life. And still we parrot the cry that Ibsen is the dramatist of Suburbia.

Dogma is, of course, to be avoided. Puddinhead Wilson was right: if it weren't for differences of opinion there wouldn't be horse racing. Much less dramatic criticism! But Ibsen is no longer a question of opinion; he is a matter of fact. Some playwrights are suburban. All but one are at best national. Ibsen alone among the men of two generations towers above local demarcations and is a world dramatist. To dispute this is not to err in judgment; it is to be faithless to fact.

By what virtue has he risen to this eminence? It was remarked some weeks ago in these columns that, though Ibsen is commonly identified with the modern social drama, he was not in any true sense of the word a social thinker. He lived in the generation that saw the first great spread of socialism, yet he ignored the movement quite, leaving it to his feebler followers to write plays of socialistic propaganda. No eye ever saw more clearly than his evils in the institution of marriage, yet he uttered not one word as to a means by which, as an institution, marriage may be pettered. Acclaimed as the champion of revolted woman, he steadfastly refused to declare himself a suffragist.

On this last point there is a certain confusion of evidence—which is, however, more apparent than real. In his "Samliv med Ibsen," John Paulsen relates that, under Mrs. Paulsen's influence, Ibsen became "to a certain degree a champion of woman's rights." Yet Paulsen himself records anecdotes that tell very clearly how "certain" the degree was. Ibsen denied to women even the small virtues usually granted to them. "No woman can write a good cookbook," he declared. His conviction that "no woman can sew on a button so it will stay on" was so profound that whenever his own buttons came off he went to his room and sewed them on himself. Paulsen relates that his wife would secretly go over the job and, if it were not done properly, finish it. "Don't destroy this illusion in him," she cautioned her husband, "it gives him so much happiness." The fact that such a woman could gain only a qualified approval of her cause needs no comment. In public Ibsen definitely refused adherence to it. His feminism bears a curious resemblance to that of another great dramatist, Euripides. He felt with equal keenness the hardships in the lives of women and the defects in their character; but he was indifferent to political "wrongs" and "rights."

The fact seems to be that Ibsen was utterly incapable of constructive social thinking. He himself said that he could follow out no thought to the end without coming upon self-contradictions. Nor was he able to see any constructive progress in the past of the human race. "There are actually moments," he wrote to Brandes, "when the whole history of the world appears to me like one gigantic shipwreck, and the only important thing seems to be to save one's self. From special reforms I expect nothing. The whole race is on the wrong track; that is the trouble." To such a mind the raw material itself out of which reforms are constructed was unintelligible—the common needs of our common humanity, the increase of happiness and power that come through social union. "I have never had any very firm belief in solidarity. . . . If one had the courage to throw it overboard altogether it is possible that one would be rid of the ballast which weighs down one's personality most heavily." In short, the radicalism which in the true sociologist is intellectual and constructive was in Ibsen emotional and destructive. He is commonly called an individualist, and that he assuredly was. But he was more than that. He was an individualist to the *n*th degree—in effect, an anarchist. And that is the true secret of the "self-contradiction" that beset his thinking. For no tyranny could be more destructive of individual self-realization than a world would be which had renounced all bonds of social organization. The thing which gives unity and meaning to "the whole history of the world" is the progressive effort to gain the larger life that comes through social "solidarity" without incurring the blight upon individuality that comes with over-organization and despotic control. This is a commonplace to the man in the street, but to Ibsen it was a concept undreamed of.

Though sociologically a child, however, Ibsen had one faculty in consummate force—the instinct for character. The world of his experience was small and provincial—suburban, if you will. But to despise it for that reason is to betray the complete and perfect snob—the snob social, the snob intellectual, and the snob spiritual. Henry James had a mind of the utmost rarity and delicacy of charm, a literary art of the most exquisite; but he willfully cut himself off from the main currents of human living, and so dwindled into a trafficker in wraiths and spooks, into a tormentor of our beautiful English speech. Ibsen took men and women as he found them—frankly, robustly, passionately—and made a language that had been unknown in the world of letters resound throughout the nations.

All about him men individually strong and pure of soul were cramped by organized wealth and commercial standards in living—and he gave us Stockmann, "An Enemy of the People." Yet, if "thought out to the end," Stockmann's revolt involved a "self-contradiction." Not all reforming individuals are made of heroic stuff. So Ibsen gave us Gregers Werle, and his piffling "claims of the ideal." Again, all about him women were struggling out of their narrower life of the era of household industries into the broader life of the era of the industrial revolution—and he gave us Nora, who left her "Doll's House" to find her soul in the new world. But not all women are sound and strong enough for this high quest—and so we have Hedda Gabler and her sterile, self-destructive hankering after a larger life. That Ibsen was intellectually conscious of economic and social changes that produced and gave meaning to these characters is more than doubtful. But he felt them keenly in the terms of concrete human life—and character, not ideas, is the stuff of which great drama is made. In all nations the world of his day was teeming with Stockmanns and Gregers Werles, with Noras and Heddas. Superficially the environment they live in may seem as uncouth as their Norwegian speech. But inwardly they are one with us, and they speak to us with the overpowering force of our common humanity.

It may be questioned, however, whether their interest for us is not, for the present at least, fading. Forty years ago the most moving of all impulses, outside of Germany, was that of individual self-realization, and of this Ibsen was the supreme exponent in the drama. Germany was experiencing the contrary impulse—the impulse toward the larger social organization. In one sense of the word—which now seems strange, but may soon become familiar — the Kaiser, no less than Karl Marx, is a Socialist. The one stands for autocratic power, whereas the other was a democrat; but both believe, or think they believe, in a State which is organized "all for each and each for all." Greater than the individual will, in the life of the bee, is the will of the hive—and the ideal of the pure Socialist is identical. Today the world knows the power of such social organization—is staggering beneath the weight of its onslaught. Practically we have found no surer means of resisting it than by an increase of "solidarity," a tightening of the social bonds—of which universal service is one incident among many. Spiritually also the world is in a ferment of social aspiration. That the essential liberties of mankind should be permanently abated is unthinkable. Pure socialism, whether autocratic or democratic, will doubtless remain the ideal of insects and Germans. But it is possible that we may come to realize that we can reach a higher development only through a somewhat less individualistic and somewhat more social organization. If this is indeed the trend of the modern impulse, then the days are numbered in which the message of Ibsen will seem to us vital and moving.

Nora and Nazimova.

NORA, who abandons her "doll's house," and with it her husband and children, is the type of feminine individualism—indeed of feminine anarchy. The drama of her revolt may seem to us today somewhat stale, for we are all too familiar with it. The present problem is how to reclaim the "free" woman to her high and exclusive destiny as mother of the race. The "miracle" which Nora dreamed lies far in the future. But dramatically the play still seems among the strongest works of Ibsen. Mme. Nazimova is at her best in it. Some of us may still find an insuperable obstacle in her harsh and inarticulate speech, her external and exaggerated "assumption" of character. But to those more tolerant souls to whom such things are negligible incidents, the performance may be commended. Her technical cleverness and the vigor of her personality have never been more fortunately in evidence.

Here Is the Cast Which the American Red Cross Has Recruited for the Three Weeks' Tour in J. Hartley Manners's "Out There," the Photograph Having Been Taken on the Stage of the Criterion Theatre Last Wednesday Afternoon, Upon the Occasion of the Second Rehearsal. The Confirmed Playgoer Will Probably Recognize All of Those in the Picture, but It Is Not Amiss to Mention Them. In the Top Row, Therefore, are George MacFarlane, Burr McIntosh, Laurette Taylor, H. B. Warner, George M. Cohan, Chauncey Olcott, Helen Ware and O. P. Heggie. In the Bottom One: Eleanora de Cisneros, Mrs. Fiske, George Arliss, Julia Arthur, James T. Powers, Rose Stahl, and James K. Hackett. Holding the Script is Mr. Manners. Since the Photograph Was Taken One Change Has Been Made in the Cast—the Substitution of the Well-Remembered Beryl Mercer for Rose Stahl. The Tour Will Begin in Washington a Week from Monday, and the New York Performances Will Be Given at the Century on May 17 and 18.

A Play for Men in Uniform

SOLDIERS and sailors are invited tonight to the Playhouse to witness a performance of "The Man Who Came Back," given under the joint auspices of the Stage Women's War Relief, the New York Community Service, and William A. Brady. All men in uniform will be admitted free of charge—that is, up to the capacity of the theatre. If previous entertainments of this sort are a criterion, which they indubitably are, it would be well for those desiring admission to arrive early. Only uniformed men will be admitted.

The play takes the place of the customary Sunday night vaudeville show at the Playhouse. This afternoon's vaudeville program for uniformed men, customarily given at the Casino, will be transferred today to the Astor.

ON THE LONDON STAGE

THEATRES in London are now required to close promptly at 10:30 o'clock, and as a result many of the performances begin as early as 7:30. The original order governing the closing of the theatres set 9:30 as the hour, but the united protests of the managers were successful in obtaining an hour's grace. The earlier closing, coupled with the activity on the Western front and the consequent fact that few leaves of absence are being granted at present, has resulted in a decided falling off in theatrical attendance. For the first time this season the London producer is finding but little difficulty in obtaining a theatre in which to exhibit his wares.

The most popular of the new pieces in London is "By Pigeon Post," a war melodrama by Austin Page. Most of the reviewers hail it as the best of the war plays, and in these circumstances it would be strange if it were not soon produced in New York, considering the success here of other war dramas of English extraction. The author of "By Pigeon Post" is a newcomer among playwrights, whose pseudonym, Austin Page, is said to conceal only partly the identity of a well-known London theatregoer.

These few words of description from The Daily Telegraph may be counted upon to whet the appetite of the lover of melodrama: "It (the play) has a good story, the action is rapid and direct, the tension is steadily maintained, while, although the serious interest largely predominates, there are, scattered about, pleasant little passages of comedy which serve admirably to lighten the graver aspects of the plot. 'By Pigeon Post' is a war play, and one of the most ingenious that the present struggle has produced. It brings us into close contact with actual or, at any rate, possible events. It helps us to realize something of the intricate and comprehensive nature of the machinery by means of which the great war game is carried on. The scene itself is suggestive. We are in the library of a peaceful old château situated on the borders of French Lorraine. Little of is original character or atmosphere remains, however. The place has suddenly been converted into a busy hive of martial activity; it has its wireless installation, carefully camouflaged, its pigeon post service, its secret doors and sliding panels; it is now the home of cypher codes, secret messages, phosphorescent writings—something of a novelty this, on the stage. In short, you have all the paraphernalia and mechanism needed to arouse the curiosity and arrest the attention of an eager and expectant audience."

An actor named Arthur Wontner has made a great success in the leading rôle, and Madge Titheradge is seen as the heroine. The play is running at the Garrick.

Of American plays in London there is literally no end. Max Marcin's "Cheating Cheaters" scored only an average success at the Comedy, and has already been succeeded by Eugene Walter's thriller, "The Knife," which appears to be highly popular. C. Aubrey Smith is playing the Robert Edeson rôle. At the Plymouth the Margaret Mayo-Salisbury Field farce, "Twin Beds," was produced successfully about the middle of April. The London censor, although he objected to "Twin Beds" as a title, saw fit to O. K. "Be Careful, Baby," and it is under this meticulous title that the piece is running. Helen Raymond, well known here as a farceuse, is the only American in the cast, and appears to have scored the success of the entertainment.

The Selwyn family is further represented in London by "The Naughty Wife," Fred Jackson's farce. Although the fact was never blazoned to the public on this side of the water, Edgar Selwyn was actively concerned in the writing of this piece, and the London programs announce that the play is "by Fred Jackson, elaborated and revised by Edgar Selwyn." It is running at the Playhouse, with Charles Hawtrey in the Charles Cherry part.

On April 20 Rida Johnson Young's farce, "Captain Kidd, Jr.," was produced at the Queen's Theatre, and jumped into immediate popularity, in London, for some reason, it is known as "Lot 79." The revival of "Peg o' My Heart," at the St. James a week ago, does not fall strictly within a list of American activities, but Mr. Manners's long residence in this country makes it permissible to include it. Moya Mannering is the present Peg.

Doris Keane and "Romance" have ended their engagement of nearly three years at the Lyric, "Inside the Lines" is gone from the Apollo, "Brewster's Millions" has halted, and "The Thirteenth Chair" is shortly to be withdrawn from the Duke of York's. Lest the number of American pieces be thought to be decreasing, however, it might be mentioned that "Going Up" will be produced at the Galety early in June, with Joseph Coyne in the Frank Craven part; that "Fair and Warmer" will be put on at the Prince of Wales some time this month, and that "Very Good Eddie," "Her Soldier Boy," "Nobody's Widow," "The Very Idea," and "The Man Who Came Back" are other American plays which London will see before long.

To say nothing of the fact that "Nothing but the Truth," at the Savoy, is one of the most substantial successes in London. A special performance was recently given for the Queen at another theatre, the entire production being moved over for the occasion.

Concerning "Belinda" it would not be fair to reveal too much, considering the fact that the American premiere of the piece is only thirty-six hours distant. Enough, then, that the London cast includes Irene Vanbrugh, Dion Boucicault, Dennis Neilson-Terry, and Ben Webster, and that The London Times hails the piece as "delightfully frivolous." It has been playing at the New Theatre since April 8, and is being preceded by a pantomime concocted by no less a person than Sir Arthur Wing Pinero. It is entitled "Monica's Blue Boy," and is reported to be charming throughout.

The new Israel Zangwill farce, "Too Much Money," came to the Ambassadors' a few weeks ago with a record of having vastly amused the provinces, just as pieces frequently are carried to New York over the prostrate bodies of out-of-town citizens who died laughing. And, as not infrequently happens here, the piece failed to impress the metropolis. The Telegraph finds that the play had "moments," but that for the most part it was "solemn stuff." Lillah McCarthy is the star.

The possibility of Jose Collins's appearing here next season in "The Maid of the Mountains," in which she has scored her great London hit, appears to have become considerably less by the engagement of Miss Collins to star at the London Daly's for three years. Incidentally, "The Maid of the Mountains" is still the attraction at Daly's and bids fair to go on indefinitely.

Other successes which continue are the Barrie play, "Dear Brutus," at Wyndham's; "The Boy," a musical version of Pinero's "The Magistrate," at the Adelphi; "A Little Bit of Fluff," at the Criterion; the Maugham comedy, "Love in a Cottage," at the Globe (soon to be withdrawn); "Chu Chin Chow," at His Majesty's; "Seven Days' Leave," at the Lyceum; "The Better 'Ole," at the Oxford (an American production of this is pending); Hall Caine's "The Prime Minister" (rewritten since its presentation here) at the Royalty, and Seymour Hicks in "Sleeping Partners," a French farce, at St. Martin's.

The Times, apropos of the death of Sir George Alexander, contains an interesting paragraphic census of the English actor-managers. Not only Sir George, but Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Kendal have recently died, and Sir Squire Bancroft, Sir Charles Wyndham, and Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson are in retirement. Of the remainder, Cyril Maude is devoting more of his time to America than to England, and Arthur Bourchier and Seymour Hicks are now acting under managements other than their own. There remain, therefore, as active actor-managers, only Gerald Du Maurier, Oscar Asche, Dennis Eadie, Percy Hutchinson, Gladys Cooper, and Marie Lohr—and the last two of these are not actor-managers at all, but actress-managers.

Henry Miller and Billie Burke in the Silks and Laces of the Days of Louis XV., or, in Other Words, as They Appear in "A Marriage of Convenience," at Henry Miller's Theatre.

WHAT NEWS ON THE RIALTO?

REHEARSALS of "Out There," with its imposing Red Cross cast began on Tuesday at the Criterion, but it was not until Wednesday that the full company was assembled. When it gathered, at 1 o'clock on Wednesday, that the photograph which looks out immediately to the West might be duly taken, it undoubtedly constituted the most distinguished collection of talent which has appeared in any single cast in the history of the American theatre.

Not the least important fact to be chronicled in connection with the first rehearsal is that the last of the fifteen members of the cast arrived less than twenty minutes after the specified hour. This was George M. Cohan, who stole fifteen minutes from the urgent rewriting of a play to take part in the ceremony of the photograph.

Up to a late hour yesterday all had gone smoothly, despite the traditions having the quarrelsome habits of stars as their basis. As matters are now progressing, in fact, a great many people are destined to be disappointed. Among them is the newsgatherer who happened into George C. Tyler's office one day during the last week and inquired if the management of the troupe intended to publish a daily casualty list.

Although it is not possible, of course, to predict definitely the attitude of the Government toward German dramatic enterprises by the time next season rolls around, it is the present plan of Rudolf Christians and his company to continue to operate in this city next year. The news that the company was relinquishing the Irving Place Theatre at the end of this season, taken in connection with the closing of the German theatres in Milwaukee and other cities, had been construed to mean that there would be no further performances in German in this city for the duration of the war. Now comes the announcement, however, that the Germans will give their plays at the Garden Theatre next season. Mr. Christians, in announcing this fact in a curtain speech at the Irving Place last Tuesday, made mention of the "unending courtesy" of the American Government toward his enterprise.

The Plymouth Theatre has found its greatest prosperity through the series of Ibsen productions now being made at that house. Both "The Wild Duck" and "Hedda Gabler" did all but crowd the theatre during the weeks that they were played, and now "A Doll's House," wisely reserved for the climax, is actually packing the house to the final row. On several occasions during the week, in fact—notably the Wednesday matinée—the audience extended even back of the last row, which is but another way of saying that there was a row or so of standees. The run of "A Doll's House" is announced to continue for another two weeks, but the theatre's present prosperity—a prosperity which not even Mr. Housum's "Gipsy Trail" could induce—makes an extension of the engagement practically a certainty.

Lionel Adams, a recent addition to the cast of "A Pair of Petticoats," is the only actor except Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson who ever played the rôle of the Stranger in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." Adams played the part at the head of a Southern company which visited a variety of towns which Sir Johnston found it impossible to touch.

Speaking of Sir Johnston and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," what has become of the movie version of that play for which Sir Johnston posed many a long month ago? Is it, haply, being saved for the Forbes-Robertson tercentenary?

Australia is to have "The Thirteenth Chair," and with Margaret Wycherley in her original rôle, some time during the coming Summer. While on the subject of Australia, Guy Bates Post is now duly playing there in "The Masquerader," and unbiased reports are to the effect that all is well. Post will play eight weeks each in Sydney and in Melbourne, and will then go on tour in the piece in this country.

Approximately 1,400 players are reported to have offered their services to the executives of America's Over There League, expressing a willingness—a keen desire, as a matter of fact—to entertain American soldiers in France. It is unlikely that any but vaudevillians will be accepted; at best, a very few companies may make the trip, but composed only of players who are individual entertainers as well. The first players to go, according to the sleuths of Variety, will be Mrs. Vernon Castle, Irene Franklin and Burt Green, Walter C. Kelly, Swor and Avey, Mercedes and his enigmatical act, and Chief Caupolican, a real aborigine.

"The Maid of France," the Brighouse playlet now on the program at the Greenwich Village, is about to reach vaudeville with Josephine Victor as its star. An ex-Washington Square sketch, "A Private Account," will be played at the Palace this week under the title of "The Fine System," with José Rubin and Olive Wyndham in the play's only rôles. It was Mr. Ruben who acted it with the Washington Squarers, the other part being then taken by Margaret Mower. Also headed for vaudeville is the residue of the Spanish "Land of Joy" company, which will close in Chicago this week, and—perhaps—Conway Tearle in a sketch.

Helen Moeller, who created something approximating a sensation at her appearance at the Metropolitan not long ago, has become an actress. At all events, she will be in the cast of "His Host's Wife," a farce which A. H. Woods is about to produce. The supposition is that Miss Moeller will be called upon to dance some time during the action of the piece.

The Treasurers' Club, which lists New York's box office men among its members, will give its annual benefit performance at the Hudson Theatre tonight.

THE NEW PLAYS

A LITTLE new life will be infused into the theatrical season this week by the presentation of a pair of new pieces—one a comedy from London, to be acted by Ethel Barrymore, and the other a Summer musical show. In addition, a religious drama will begin a deferred engagement on Lexington Avenue tomorrow night.

BELINDA—Tomorrow night at the Empire Theatre.

Ethel Barrymore's third and probably last play of her Empire season is a comedy in three acts by A. A. Milne, a piece recently given its first production in London with Irene Vanbrugh in the leading rôle. The London production, however, is treated elsewhere in these pages; so far as New York is concerned it should be noted that Ethel Barrymore will be Belinda, and that her company will embrace Cyril Keightley, E. Lyall Swete, Richard Hatteras, Eva Le Gallienne, and Clara T. Bracy. The piece calls for a cast of but six.

As a curtain raiser the Barrie playlet, "The New Word," will be repeated, with Mr. Swete in the part taken by Norman Trevor when the piece was produced at the Empire a year ago as one of a trio of short Barrie plays.

THE KISS BURGLAR—Thursday night at the George M. Cohan Theatre.

This is a musical show by Glen MacDonough and Raymond Hubbell, the latter the Hippodrome composer, and will serve to bring forward as a musical comedy actress Fay Bainter, whose last appearance in these parts was in "The Willow Tree." The provinces have acclaimed the production with something more than their customary abandon, wherefore the impresarios of "The Kiss Burglar" feel confident that New York will do likewise. Be that as it may, the piece will begin its engagement here on Thursday at the George M. Cohan.

The title is explained by the fact that somebody steals a kiss from the Grand Duchess of Orly while she is visiting in New York—wherefore it will be seen that "The Kiss Burglar" is a Summer show. Assisting Miss Bainter will be Harry Clarke, Grace Field, Denman Maley, Cyril Chadwick, and Armand Kaliz. Julian Mitchell and Edgar MacGregor have attended to the staging.

"The Mystery of Life," the religious play which was to have been seen at the Lexington Theatre last night, will be revealed tomorrow night instead. The piece is the work of J. F. X. O'Conor, a well-known secular writer, and calls for a cast of more than 150. It will be played by professionals.

The Hippodrome will be devoted tonight to a program under the auspices of the Canadian Club of New York, the proceeds of which will go to the dependent families of soldiers from New York fighting with the Canadian Army.

After all, there will be another German production at the Irving Place Theatre before the season is brought to a close. This will be a musical comedy, "Der Bettelstudent," which will begin a brief engagement next Thursday night.

With the passing of the regular attractions the amusement parks will begin to come to the fore again. The first of these to announce its opening is Palisades Park, which will duly take up its task of amusing the multitude on Saturday night of this week.

DR. AMSTER'S STORY OF HARM DONE BY HYLAN

Ex-Commissioner Recalls in Detail the Petty Economies That Crippled Health Department's Efficiency.

THAT Dr. J. Lewis Amster resigned as Health Commissioner not primarily because he was told to dispense with certain men on his advisory staff or because of the question of legality of the different health bureaus, but because of the inability forced upon him to live up to the standard of efficiency of work he had set for himself in accepting the post, was emphasized by him in an interview after his withdrawal.

"When I accepted the position," he said, "I did so at a great sacrifice of position as private practitioner. I felt, however, that the job of being Health Commissioner of New York was one sufficiently important to warrant any personal sacrifice. I knew the needs of the department, I appreciated the fine health work it had been doing all along, and felt that I could do my share in continuing to make it the highly organized and efficient instrument it has always been considered. It may be of interest to your readers to know that the Health Department of the City of New York has for the past few years been considered a model to all the cities over the continent. My aim was to improve this model where possible.

"One of the first things I planned to do was to create a system of borough autonomy in the health work. In speaking with physicians in the various medical organizations of the city—by the way, those are the outside influences I brought to bear upon my work, the influences to which the Mayor objected—it was continually impressed upon me that the health work in the different boroughs was not well co-ordinated, that there was needless overlapping among the different departments in the different boroughs, that there was no one person who could be held responsible for the work in his borough, and that as a result much that should have been done was left undone, and much that should not have been done was allowed to slip through.

"By Feb. 20 I had worked out a plan of borough autonomy to be tried in the Bronx and Queens. This I submitted to the Mayor. My plan was, first, one of decentralization in so far as the boroughs were to be separated and the problems peculiar to each brought forward and attended to by people who had made a study of them, followed by closer centralization when these problems were referred back to the Health Department. Co-ordination between the bureaus of the departments and the Assistant Sanitary Superintendents, who were to be vested with responsibilities of the work in the different boroughs, and co-ordination and co-operation among the various directors of the bureau was my aim.

"The discovery of a health need in a borough by the man who lived and worked in that borough, the presentation of that need to the proper bureau, the discussion of it by men who held their positions by virtue of their knowledge of the needs and methods of dealing with these needs, and the final action on the need or problem by employes in the borough where the needs were felt—that was my idea. All this I tried to inculcate into the tentative plan which I submitted to the Mayor. Nothing was done about it, no criticism offered, favorable or adverse. It was simply ignored."

The following was the plan submitted by Dr. Amster to the Mayor:

Feb. 20, 1918.

The Commissioner, the Directors of Bureaus, Borough Autonomy, Bronx and Queens.

On and after Feb. 20, 1918, in the Boroughs of the Bronx and Queens, the responsibility for the administrative work of these boroughs, with the exception of the functions of the Bureau of Hospitals, Bureau of Laboratories, and Bureau of Records, will rest upon the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent. He is expected to know, direct, and, by proper supervision, check the daily work of his subordinates, and is directly responsible to the Commissioner, through the office of the Deputy Commissioner, for the prompt and proper performance of such work.

The Directors of bureaus will outline the policy and determine the program of the bureau, and be willing and ready to offer helpful suggestions as to the manner of accomplishing the same.

The Director will be responsible for the transmission directly to the Assistant Sanitary Superintendents in the above-named boroughs, of any and all orders pertaining to the bureau work, at the same time forwarding a copy to the office of, and for the information of, the Deputy Commissioner.

The consent of the Director of the bureau involved must be obtained by the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent before making changes in existing orders or alterations in established procedures.

Any failure or neglect to properly perform the required program of the bureau must be reported in writing by the Director of the bureau to the office of the Deputy Commissioner, where same will be noted and forwarded to the Commissioner for his information.

Inability to comply with the requests of Directors of bureaus must be reported by the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent to the Deputy Commissioner. The adjustment of the work of the various bureaus, in order to prevent any unjust distribution of the field force, will be undertaken by the Deputy Commissioner and Directors of the bureaus involved.

The Directors of bureaus or their accredited representatives shall be afforded every opportunity to satisfy themselves as to the manner in which the work of the bureau is being performed, and accorded free access to the files, and coostructive criticism is invited.

The employes of the department in the Boroughs of the Bronx and Queens, with the exception of those employed in the Bureau of Records, Bureau of Hospitals, and Bureau of Laboratories, receive all orders from and are directly responsible to the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent, and indirectly to the Deputy Commissioner and Commissioner.

All orders, reports, and official communications will clear through the office of the Assistant Sanitary Superintendent.

"The question of economy," continued Dr. Amster, "was the one uppermost in the mind of the Mayor, economy irrespective of and not respecting the fact that in an age of specialization the man with the greatest knowledge and ability in his own line of work is the man who in the long run is the most economical; that the person who can put his finger on a sore spot in an important crisis in a minimum of time with a maximum of results is infinitely more valuable than the less able and cheaper man, who potters about and uses empirical methods on occasions where drastic and sure methods are needed; and that the first man by very virtue of his knowledge and his confidence in this knowledge is a man of spirit and independence who would refuse to take orders or suggestions from one who is inferior to him in his special work, whereas the second man might in his ignorance and desire to please, at any cost, be more easily moved or swayed by the political power above him.

"I believe in economy myself, but in economy of the right kind. I, too, believe that expenses should be cut down where possible. I don't, however, believe that expenses should be cut down at the cost of expert authority.

"The plan of the Mayor was to eliminate the bureaus, a system that had grown out of actual needs and a system which had been built up as a natural and scientific process of Health Department evolution. The point he made was that a large amount of money was being wasted on salaries of Directors.

"A large amount of money was being wasted, but not on salaries for Directors. These men are all specialists in their fields and held their positions as a result of competitive civil service examinations, in which they had come out on top. The waste that there was lay in minor points of internal organization—overlapping, doubling up, carelessness in assignment of duty, and the like. I kept working on these points in an effort to improve conditions, and on March 7 I submitted a statement to the Mayor showing him what I had done to limit the expenses of the department, as well as giving him an idea of the plans and investigations that were going on. The following is a copy of this report:

March 7, 1918.

To his Honor the Mayor of the City of New York.

Sir: In accordance with your request of Feb. 14 I have the honor to submit the following report of work accomplished in this department by way of economy and improvement in service since Jan. 1, 1918.

An analysis of the reports received from the various bureaus of the Department of Health shows a marked increase in the amount of work performed during January and February of the present year over the same months of 1917. A number of new procedures were instituted and other procedures developed without additional cost. The fact that this was accomplished without increase in cost represents a distinct saving to the city.

First and foremost, the city death rate for the past two months of this year shows a decrease of 1.46 over the same period of 1917, which represents a saving of 2,646 lives.

A reassignment of positions has been made on a businesslike basis, whereby sufficient remuneration is paid for individual service and, at the same time, a higher efficiency established. With this reassignment of forces and non-filling of positions previously occupied and vacated by resignations or transfers, this department expects to save the city many thousands of dollars annually.

The Hospital Admission Bureau has recently been moved from quarters previously occupied at a rental of $1,900 yearly to "rent-free" quarters and more conveniently located.

Assignments of work have been planned to eliminate time spent in traveling and permit employes to devote more time to the actual work of the department.

The work of nurses has been surveyed, and useless visits have been eliminated.

Tabulation machines are employed to summarize statistics, thus permitting a great saving of time and energy.

Certain printed forms have been condensed and combined or eliminated, and a great saving of money can be shown, though the work has only been begun.

Automobile service has been decreased to a minimum.

A larger number of patients have been treated in departmental hospitals at a diminished per capita cost.

Request has been made by the army and naval authorities to care for an unusual number of soldiers and sailors who will require hospital attention in our departmental institutions. Arrangements are now being made to carry out these requests, and we hope to give efficient services to the Government without materially interfering with the normal functions of our hospitals.

The Food Bureau has accomplished a considerable saving of food through its successful efforts to have condemned food overhauled and salvaged.

A survey is being made of the medical services of Riverside Hospital, and plans are being made to change from paid visiting staffs of physicians to voluntary staff, which will result in a saving of approximately $4,000 a year.

The following investigations are now being carried on by this department:

1. Inquiry into the unusual number of deaths resulting from illuminating and coal-gas poisoning.
2. Investigation into the high cost of milk in the City of New York.
3. Conservation measures for the unnecessary waste of perishable food products that come into the city at the railroad terminals and docks. This investigation is being carried on in co-operation with the Federal food authorities.

These economies represent only the beginning of what I hope to accomplish in this department.

"The work with the sera and toxins and the work of the Public Health Education Bureau were some of the big things in which the Mayor and myself constantly clashed," said Dr. Amster. "It is on the score of these two, primarily, that I expect Federal intervention unless further interference with their activity is held off.

"For a long time the City of New York had been supplying the Federal Government and the Government of Canada with toxins and sera for the treatment of tetanus, typhoid, smallpox, pneumonia, diphtheria, and other diseases. These were sent abroad to the armies in France. On account of conditions prevailing there it was difficult to get or manufacture this material in sufficient quantities to meet the needs in the base hospitals. The soldiers needed the sera, the Governmenta were looking for them, and we could manufacturo them here at a small cost. We sold at cost price. As a business proposition it was not efficient, I'll admit. That was the big thing in the eyes of the Mayor. As a patriotic and health duty, its importance cannot be fully appreciated. Yet this important work was held up for a period of ten days on account of lack of sufficient appropriations. Before I resigned I ordered the department making the sera to go ahead with its work irrespective of the lack of funds. Our supply both for home use and foreign uso was running short, and something had to be done.

"The public health work was another thorn in the side of the Mayor. Again, with the perspective of a man looking through the small end of a telescope, he thought he could save the city a great deal of money by abolishing it. The question of education on health matters is always an important one. Especially so is it today. What with about 25 per cent. of our physicians having given up their practices to get into active service and the increased amount of illness prevalent during any period of war, the problem of health looms large in a municipality of our size. The care of the child, treatment of malnutrition cases, methods of prevention of communicable diseases, sanitation, food conservation—all these are matters which can be brought to the attention of the people at large only through a bureau such as the Public Health Education Bureau. The authorities at Washington would not allow that bureau to be abolished. We are a port of entry. This means a port of entry of disease as well as of individuals. If worse comes to the worst, the Government will, I believe, take over the work of the Health Department as a war measure. The Overman bill empowers it to do that.

"As to the question of legality, that was settled years ago by the Corporation Counsel. He wrote to the Health Commissioner: 'The maintenance of the five new office bureaus or divisions established Oct. 26, 1913, will not conflict with the statutory duties and powers of the Sanitary Superintendent or Assistant Sanitary Superintendents.'"

By ISAAC LANDMAN.

THERE is a unique institution in New York that is doing a remarkable service for the Jewish men in the American Army and Navy. It is the Training School for Field Representatives of the Jewish Welfare Board. Twenty instructors, each an expert in his field, are giving their best effort, in the shortest time possible, to train the men whom the Welfare Board is sending out into the camps, cantonments, and naval stations.

The board, prior to reorganization last Winter, had sent into the camps and cantonments a number of representatives who were doing heroic work for the Jews in the rapidly increasing national army. They were men who had volunteered for the sake of the cause. Most of them had not even an intimation of what their duties might possibly be when they reached headquarters. As one of them, who is now an instructor in the training course, says, "When I arrived at the camp I didn't know the difference between a Corporal and a General."

Two problems confronted Chester J. Teller, the new executive director of the Welfare Board, when he took hold of the work in December—how to build up a corps of camp representatives and how to train them for their particular task.

The first problem was soon solved. A propaganda of information, dealing with the needs of men of the Jewish faith in the army and the navy, was launched. This was followed by an appeal for workers.

Mr. Teller honored me by calling me into conference on the proposed training school. I had enjoyed a unique experience on the Texas border and with Pershing's expeditionary column in Mexico during the Fall of 1916. At that time, under the auspices of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and under the direction of the War Office and General Funston, I visited every camp of regulars and National Guard between Brownsville, Texas, and Colonia Dublan, Mexico. My duty was to organize the men of the Jewish faith for the conduct of religious services on Rosh ha-Shanah and Yom Kippur. Incidentally I had also organized several Y. M. H. A. centres in towns along the route. From my first interview with Secretary Baker, in Washington, through the last conversation I had with General Pershing, in Colonia Dublan, I marveled at the constant courtesy and unlining co-operation in my work on the part of the army officers.

I was not satisfied to leave Mexico and the border until I had ascertained the reasons for such generous and whole-hearted co-operation; so when I called on General Pershing to express my thanks, and those of the conference and of the Jewish men under his command, I put this question to him: "Will you kindly explain to me why every officer whom I met and under whom I worked exerted himself to the utmost to make my task easy, and to assure a responsible and efficient organization of these services for the men of the Jewish faith?"

General Pershing answered without a moment's preparatory thought. "It is the business of an army man to face death," he said, "and when a man faces death he wants to know the why of life, and religion is the only human experience that has attempted to solve the why of life."

This conversation with General Pershing and his concise reply to my question flashed into my mind during the conference with Mr. Teller. It was the starting point for the curriculum.

The need of Jewish welfare workers, especially trained for their work, should be apparent to every Jew. The Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus, to whose funds the Jews have contributed liberally, can and do supply all the recreational requirements of the army and navy men. But Jewish men in the army and navy on active duty need religious services. Their officers are desirous that they have them. The Y. M. C. A. and the K. of C., obviously, cannot supply this need.

Moreover, there are orthodox and reform Jews, and there are Jews who have no religious affiliation whatever. Even the atheists and agnostics are, in the statistical data, Jews. All of these have immediate and "back home" problems that are as foreign to the understanding of Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. Secretaries in the camps as they are in the cities.

Some of the Jewish men are recent immigrants, or the sons of recent immigrants, who came to America before the war to escape military conscription in Russia or Rumania. Some can scarcely understand English. Some have no conception of the reasons why America is in the war. Some are pacifists of the Bolshevist type, and some are conscientious objectors. Some won't eat trefa and won't shave off their beards. Some have family troubles that should be attended to by the organized charities at home. Some are in the hospitals and guardhouses. Some are lonely, despondent, unhappy. All of them have been suddenly transplanted from their civil occupations and home environment into a new and strange life.

At the outset, then, the training school course, necessarily intensive, aims at instructing the workers in the types of Jewish men they will find at the various camps.

No less important is the instruction given in army and navy organizations by accredited officers of the army and navy.

The training course introduces the students to the types of officers, as well as to the types of men, they will come in contact with. Many officers, both of the old line and of the recent training camps, do not understand the psychology of the Jew. The Welfare Board representative is in a position to straighten out numerous situations that unhappily give rise to the cry of anti-Semitism, but which are due solely to misunderstanding. Accordingly, the Welfare Workers are taught the fundamental principles of Judaism and Christianity, and how to present Judaism and Jewish peculiarities to non-Jewish officers and to fellow-privates in the ranks.

In all matters not distinctively Jewish our workers are taught to co-operate with the other national agencies now established in the camps. To co-operate effectively our men must understand the aims and purposes of these agencies. Hence the course calls for instruction in the philosophy and practical methods of the Y. M. C. A., the K. of C., the Fosdick Commission, and the Red Cross.

Experience has proved to us that the men of the Jewish faith in the American Army and Navy will give a good account of themselves in our struggle for world liberty. If their minds are at ease while training, if they can feel that there is always some one at hand to solve whatever difficulties may arise out of misunderstandings, if they are assured that everything is well at home and that, in case of misfortune, a great institution like the Welfare Board is present to step into the breach; if they are confident that the civil Jewish population stands behind them with all the strength of their hearts and souls and possessions, the Jewish men will give a doubly good account of themselves in their morale and in their fighting power.

HUMAN TANKS IN WAR

No belligerent has shown more resourcefulness than the Italian in devising novel means of offense and defense. The Italian Army was the only one to enter the war with a trench helmet and a steel chest-protector, and it is now provided with a more efficient body-shield than is possessed by any other of the warring nations.

Early in the war it was discovered by the Italians that many lives could be saved in skirmishing at close quarters if the soldiers carried or pushed bags of sand in front of them, and the present body-shield has been an outgrowth of that idea. They are made in the one-man and two-man type. The former are worn by infantry advancing in the open, attached to the shoulders by a pair of light steel arms, and are long enough to protect the head and vital organs of a man standing erect.

Lying at full length, or even crouched, it covers him completely. Each shield is pierced with a small, round eye-hole and an oblong loophole for firing from, both of which may be closed by a sliding door when not in use. The two-man shield is principally used in wire-cutting. It is carried on the back of one man, who may also work his rifle from a loophole in the top, while a second man works a long wire-cutter through a hole at the bottom. It is held up by short legs if the first man desires to move independently.—Wide World Magazine.

In Armstrong v. Armstrong, 118 N. E. 916, decided by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, it is held that where cruel and abusive treatment is a ground for divorce, neither words nor acts not involving physical injury, though causing unhappiness and loss of health, are proof of cruel and abusive treatment, unless they were uttered or committed with malicious intent to injure. The court said: "The spouse may be guilty of drunkenness or other vices; his habits or disposition, his indifference, neglect or desertion, may cause mental worry and injury to health, but these acts, standing by themselves, are not enough to make out a case of cruel and abusive treatment • • • unless it is shown that the language was uttered or these acts were committed with a malicious intent and for the purpose of injuring the libelant."

In Deming v. United States, 247 Fed. 463, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals holds that a wife is a competent witness in a prosecution in a Federal district court against a husband under the White Slave act, notwithstanding that the law of the State where the prosecution is pending forbids her to testify against the husband except in cases involving physical violence to her person.

The occupation of a residence by twelve or fifteen members of a religious order in garb, who have a small altar in one room where relgious services are conducted every morning, and the occasional use of the building for inducting novices into the order before invited guests, and the assembling of children in it on Sunday afternoons, are held not a violation of a covenant that the building shall be used for residence purposes only, in the Washington case of Hunter Tract Improvement Company v. Catholic Bishop Corporation, 167 Pac. 100, L. R. A. 1918A, 297.

One who at time of making contract is completely intoxicated may avoid it, notwithstanding that intoxication was voluntary, but not if he is only partially intoxicated.—Glenn v. Martin, [illegible] S. W. 456.

That no equitable lien or mortgage can be charged upon or enforced against a lot in a public cemetery for material purchased to improve and beautify the lot is held in the Alabama case of Kerlin v. Ramage, L. R. A. 1918A, 142.

Pneumonia contracted by a member of the Fire Department from becoming wet in the performance of his duties is held not to result from an accident, within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation acts, in the Michigan case of Landers vs. Muskegon, 163 N. W. 43, L. R. A. 1918A, 218. The evidence was to the effect that, on the occasion in question, the firemen got wetter than usual, and this was due to the fact that the fire was in a boat, and, owing to the peculiar situation of the boat, considerable of the water was dashed back upon the firemen and they all became very wet. The case also showed that the firemen were on duty for nearly twelve hours before the fire was extinguished. It seems very clear that, under the decisions referred to, the severe wetting, and the long period of time in which the firemen were compelled to be in that condition, might very properly have been considered an accident. Certainly, if the position of firemen necessarily or ordinarily carried with it the necessity of being drenched to the skin and of working in that condition for a period of twelve hours, there would be very few applicants for such position.

Ordinance forbidding bathing in lake within city limits, from which water supply is drawn, but which is private property of owners of bordering lands, where city has acquired no right to water by purchase or eminent domain, is invalid as taking of property without just compensation.—Pounds v. Darling, Fla., 77 So. 668.

Declarations by one subsequently killed on a railroad track that when he got ready to go he would throw himself in front of a train and that one on the track at the point where he was killed could not be seen by the engineer are held not admissible in evidence as tending to show suicide in Greenacre v. Filby, L. R. A. 1918A, 234.

A telephone company handling a great number of calls each day in a large city will not be required to furnish its subscribers monthly itemized bills of local messages for which a charge has been made, it is held in the New York case of Tracy v. New York Telephone Co., P. U. R. 1918A, 128, where it would impair the service by requiring a great amount of additional work, and would not result in greater accuracy than the present method of recording messages by pressing an electric button connected with a recording machine.

The New York Times in Chicago

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am prompted voluntarily to express to you my constant appreciation of The New York Times, which is so far above the standards of efficiency of any other newspaper in supplying the real, worth-while news of the day that even after reading all the Chicago newspapers daily I find I am not up to date until I have received The New York Times and digested its contents two days later.

The marked contrast is that your publication gives me the news of the world in which I am vitally interested, rather than the local news which seems to satisfy publishers of the average newspaper.

For instance, the copy of the House bill of Congress authorizing the Third Liberty Loan was not available in Washington until April 2. Various officials of the Federal Reserve Bank, Chicago, and the Executive Department of the Liberty Loan Committee of Chicago (Seventh Federal Reserve District) were also anxiously awaiting information regarding the proposed Congressional act.

It was not until April 2, when I received The New York Times of March 30 containing a full copy of the act, that I was able to use it in supplying the desired information to them.

At 5 o'clock tonight the Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank asked me if I had a copy of the act and I was glad to send him the above clipping of The Times of March 30. Either the Treasury Department is hopelessly unable properly to serve the Federal Banks or a 2-cent investment in The Times beats every other service known to Chicago.

MANY NEWSPAPERS FOR OUR MEN IN FRANCE

Periodicals in the English Language Have Been Springing Up Both in Paris and Along the Front for Their Benefit

NO less than half a dozen American and British newspapers are being published in Paris for the soldiers of the English, Canadian, Australian, and American forces in France. Among the new publications in the English language are The Morning, published by Le Matin, and The Stars and Stripes, official newspapers of the American expeditionary force; The London Daily Mail's Paris edition, The Chicago Tribune's Paris edition, the official American aviation paper, Plane News, and another aviation paper, Flights and Landings.

Stephane Lausanne, editor in chief of Le Matin, now in New York City, in commenting on the new publications the other day, said:

"The aim of the publishers of English language papers in Paris was wholly to add to the contentment of the British, and especially the American forces in France. Contributing to the happiness of these soldiers on active service in a foreign country means adding to their efficiency. No doubt it used to annoy the newly arrived, homesick American recruit to see his French comrade nonchalantly reading his home paper, when the best the American could do was to receive news a month old. Now the news is going into the trenches, to the battlefield, and even to the remote villages where American troops are billeted."

Two copies of The Morning, although they were the ninth and fourteenth issues, were the first Mr. Lauzanne had seen. Most of the English language newspapers are printed weekly. All except The New York Herald's Paris edition were established within the last Winter and most of them within the last three months. Although there is cable news in The Morning, there are no dato lines after the fashion of the American newspapers. The Herald, Chicago Tribune, and Mail print their cable news in the American style. The Stars and Stripes, which is printed for our army in the Paris office of The Mail, has a large sporting section, also cartoons, short stories, and jokes. The bulk of its news concerns activities among Pershing's troops. The Plane News, published in camp "now and then," carries aviation news almost exclusively.

The characteristic of these newspapers is cheerfulness. They are full of sunny comment and hopeful news. There are accounts of events in Washington and other capitals, and the editors also find space for little items from small Western and Mid-Western towns. Much humorous matter is included—jokes of war origin as well as old-timers.

Said Augustus Post, Secretary of the Aero Club of America, after he visited many sections of the battlefront recently:

"The men are literally crazy for news from home. They are indescribably happy when they receive papers from their own city or town. Each one is more interested in the gossip and twaddle of his community than he is about the doings in Congress.

"These men are living in dreams. War is too terrible for any one who has not been in it to realize. The men do not think of war any more than they have to. They dream of home. They live in the past and visualize the present—not as it is for them at the front, but as it is at home. Much of the morale of an army depends on the happiness of the men, and much of the contentment of the men depends on news and papers from home. It is a wonderful thing for them to be able to get news so quickly as these new Paris publications give it to them. The good results can hardly be estimated. But that is not sufficient. Send them also papers from home as often as possible. It will do much toward their efficiency."

From one of the new periodicals it is learned that there is a big demand in the trenches for American songs. According to The Morning, not only are the American troops singing the old favorite American songs, but the Canadians, Australians and other British soldiers, and even the Frenchmen, who do not comprehend the words, have taken up such airs as "John Brown's Body," "Marching Through Georgia," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp!" In acknowledgment of this popularity, The Morning prints in each issue a well-known American song.

"THE HATCHET" KILLS MONOTONY OF THE SEA

IT isn't only when they get over there that the boys of the A. E. F. have their own newspaper. There are daily papers on the transports, too. Such is The Hatchet. It is the size of one small sheet of typewriter paper, printed on both sides, and in its four columns it contains fun, facts, advice, poetry, anecdotes, and the latest news for the troops on the way. With the exception of a contributor or two, the revelation of whose identity could not give aid or comfort to the enemy, The Hatchet contains no names of men, ships, places, units or anything else that has to do with the voyage. It follows the rules of the censorship so closely that it can be sent home without further examination. It is published on the transport by a staff of changing personnel and delivered free each day, through the Sergeants, to every soldier aboard.

"The Road to France," a poem by Daniel M. Henderson, appropriately filled half the first page of The Hatchet on the first day of a recent voyage. On the first page, too, was this message from the commanding officer:

"1. It is important that all co-operate intelligently and zealously with the naval authorities in charge of the ship. For months many of us have been shooting on naval rifle ranges, and those so favored are aware of gratitude, already due the Navy for its assistance. As the voyage progresses, all of us will have further cause to thank the Navy. Let us express our gratitude by helpful co-operation and willing obedience to naval regulations, most of which have as their object the safeguarding of the many lives aboard ship.

"2. I know the members of this command well enough to feel perfect confidence that in an emergency they will conduct themselves in a manner suited to the title 'soldiers of America.'"

A large part of the remainder of the paper's issue was occupied that day with news from London, Paris, Washington, and the A. E. F.

On the second day the editors thought it time to introduce the transport's sister ships. There was published, consequently, the following:

"Who's Who to Port and Starboard?

"It is mighty jolly—this traveling en famille, as the French say. Sister ships floating all round, signals wigwagging back and forth, hitting up the sign language as lively as a pair of gossips in a deaf-mute asylum.

"But when a reporter for The Hatchet wants to tell you right out in print who our nice neighbors are—the censor jams on the lid and we're tongueless. Take the one-funneled sister to port, for instance; all we can say is that she was named for a distinguished American; while the two-funneled party carries a moniker that smacks of Southern Europe. Aft there trails a high, single-funneled ship whose name begins with a consonant and contains five letters, while the weird lady to starboard, camouflaged till she looks like a futurist blueberry pie in swimming, is a tiny little ship with a foreign-flavored name that suggests labors ministerial—and joys bucolic.

"Now you know 'em all by heart, please respect our confidence. Don't mention 'um except in whispers!"

One of the principal features of The Hatchet this trip was the series of parodies entitled "Mother Goose at Sea." Here are some of the rhymes:

"Sing a song of sisters.
Seven ships at sea,
Semaphoring chattily,
'Tres bien' and 'Oui!'

"When the night has settled,
Silence rules the deep—
'Cause the Hun might catch you
Talking in your sleep!"

"Yankee Boy Blue, come blow your horn,
And show me the way a life belt's worn:
Protect my mattress fore and aft
And stay me to sleep on a bobbing raft."

"Tom, Tom, the pacifist's son,
Sailed to France to down the Hun;
When he returns he'll sure insist
On putting the Fist in pacifist."

"Diddle, diddle, dumpling, our son John
Goes to bed with his trousers on;
Campaign hat and hobnailed boot—
Ain't his swimming costume cute?"

The Hatchet contains much besides jokes. Some of its poems are serious—and very good; it offers stimulating advice and pertinent comment; its news columns are most informative; and here and there one finds brief sketches, of which the following is an example:

"Way aft on the boat, where the colored troops are quartered, there is a scene strangely picturesque and mystical in its light and shadows. Every night, when darkness falls, the deck over stern becomes deserted, except for the black figure of a pacing sentry.

"Pushing open the screened door leading to aft companionway, a faint murky light looms from the steep iron stairway. Half way down, pause and look! Under the handrail you will be gazing upon a large, dimly lit room on a further deck below.

"The only light, near the wall, is shaded; it touches the white hair of an army officer. He is sitting on a camp stool which is placed on a table. Around him on all sides is a sea of colored faces. The iron bunks, which tier the wall three high, give seating space for some, and legs dangle over edges and the heads of those beneath. The room, darkened and heavy with smoke, is filled with men. Silence is complete except for the voice of the speaker, who is telling the story of Joan of Arc. He is speaking to them in the same way as if telling a fairy tale to children.

"They listen with intentness. Every night this is seen, and the simple history of France and her people is gradually being unfurled to these children of America."

On April 6, an aniversary number was published, with appropriate commemoration of our entry into the war, and on the next day The Hatchet's simple report of the special anniversary service must have brought poignant thrill to the people "back here" to whom the boys sent their copies of the transport's little paper. Published for the entertainment and information of the soldiers aboard ship, the transport newspaper offers friends here at home an illuminating record of transport life.

It was not until the next to the last day of the "Volume II" voyage that the identity of the editors was to some extent revealed in the paper's columns.

OLD SIXTY-NINTH'S EDITORIAL EFFORT

THE American soldier's opinion of the enemy is presented concisely in the first issue of a four-page newspaper published by members of Company C, 165th Infantry, (the old 69th Regiment of New York.) It is one of the pioneer publications of the American forces in France and is called See—What Happens.

In an article entitled "Hand-Made Soldiers" is described the difference between the American and the German soldier, as follows:

"Those of us who have seen him in action do not underestimate the power of the German soldier. He is a perfect fighting machine, the greatest machine-made product that Prussian militarism, after forty years of effort, has shown civilization. But Fritz will be beaten.

"The difference between the American and German soldier is the difference between hand-made and machine-made lace. The latter is a perfect product. Its stitches are in much closer accord and in much better alignment than are those of the hand-made kind, and yet it is not valuable. Tests have proved this.

"The American soldier is a hand-made one. Not as perfect as is his machine-made rival, he is nevertheless more valuable, because he uses, and is encouraged in the use of, what the German soldier is forbidden to use—his own brains."

American privates are fast thinkers. It has been said often by American Army officers that some of their privates, who did not know what it was to handle a rifle, could command men after a few months of training. As everybody knows, each American soldier has the opportunity of getting an officer's commission, but such is not the case in Germany. The German soldier must go into the army when he becomes of age, and seldom does he advance himself.

Another article, "Our Enemy the Friend," contains this paragraph:

"Before the Hun tore to shreds the scraps of paper which had been signed with the blood of his honored dead, 'Our Friend the Enemy' was a common expression. Today our country faces the same words differently arranged and finds in them a tragic meaning. 'Our Enemy the Friend' is the foe that our dear ones at home are in a finish fight with. It is a cruel fight, but Americans must triumph."

"THE EXHAUST" AMUSES AMBULANCE WORKERS

THE month of April saw the appearance of Volume I., Number 1, of The Exhaust, a four-page paper to be published monthly by the members of the S. S. U. 523. "In the particular locality where they may happen to be at the time." The S. S. U. 523 has nothing to do with submarines! It is the Section Sanitaire Etats-Unis 523, one of the ambulance organizations at the front. In the first number of its newspaper it announces modestly that it is the best organization of all; it is from Princeton; its cars bear the Princeton tiger as an emblem, and in The Exhaust it breaks loose in merriment for the entertainment of its members and its friends. It satirizes the expression of war aims and idiosyncrasies of its own members; it has a great deal of fun over a great many things, with a vast amount of slang, many cheerful personal allusions, and an omnipresent spirit of jolly comradeship. But it has its serious moments, and, in its own way, it presents bits of news. Here is one item that shows how the editors deal with the current events of their section:

"During the last two months the section has lost, by transfer, two of its charter members. First, Sergeant 'Gaby' Lee was given the right to wear a Sam Browne and is now piloting the S. S. U. 624. Then our own 'Mary' Owen decided to take his barracks bag and have his candied figs sent to section 586.

"The two deserters had worked side by side in New York before the last half of the Hohenzollern brain gave way, and both enlisted with us back in the old days when it was not certain whether we were going to drive ambulances or carry stretchers.

"With Lee gone—and one glimpse at his elongated form would convince the most casual observer that he left a pretty big hole in our ranks—Owen could not resist the temptation of affiliating with the section having the backing of his Alma Mater, the University of California.

"We envy both 624 and 586 their new acquisitions. Both have proved that they are Class A ambulancers, and, what is more, good chaps to be with when something happens."

The Exhaust boasts a goodly array of cartoons, too, one of which offers ironic suggestions as to "how to stall your engine without getting out of the car."

Among the burlesque peace terms proposed by one of the ambulance drivers are the following:

"In order to imbue the minds of the German people with a spirit of anti-militarism, they are to be drilled publicly one-half hour each year by Sergeant Edward A. Stevens.

"The German House of Parliament to be made responsible for all political murders in the city of Philadelphia.

"In order to remove von Hindenburg as a possible international menace, he is to become, automatically on the signing of this peace, Vice President of the United States."

Here are some of the bits of serious advice, culled from one of The Exhaust's editorials:

"Play out your part like a man, not a ham actor. You're on the stage all the time.

"Use your freedom, but take care not to abuse it by too loud a mouth, carelessness in dress, or the ignorant rebelliousness of a man who exposes his manhood by his stubborn refusal to become the soldier he has elected himself to be."

Other editorials and paragraphs speak to "the Princeton spirit" on the battlefield as well as the gridiron, pay tribute to the "honor system," and express the admiration and affection felt by the section for its French officer, Lieutenant Edward Motte.

Lieutenant Motte is the French censor of the paper. Lieutenant Thomas Butkiewicz the American censor; Richard D. Brooke, editor; Walter L. Hopkins, cartoonist and "art staff"; John B. Little, business manager, and Henry G. Gilland, "copy boy."

"The value of the Duo-Art Piano is almost incalculable. It is the instrument of a new musical art."
—Harold Bauer

THE DUO-ART PIANO

"IT is marvelous" say the scores of people who are daily hearing this wonderful instrument. The originators of the Pianola have in this Duo-Art Piano evolved a perfect medium for bringing piano music into the home. There is no comparison between the Duo-Art and any other "player" or "reproducing" piano. It stands supreme in every particular.

1. Tone Color—Having twice the number of tone gradations to be found in other instruments, it attains a delicacy of shading, a perfection of "tone color" impossible in any other reproducing or player instrument.

2. Time Control—The famous patented Metrostyle not only regulates the time, but instructs and guides the one playing, assuring the correct tempo interpretation of the selection.

3. Accenting the Solo—by means of the wonderful Themodist, which brings out the solo (or melody) perfectly, at the same time controlling the accompaniment so that it properly supports the solo.

4. No Pedaling—the air chamber is constantly supplied without foot pedaling, permitting the one playing to devote his entire attention to interpretation.

5. Simplicity of Construction—No complicated or troublesome mechanisms.

6. Reproducing the Actual Playing of the Great Pianists—by means of the wonderful Duo-Art Record Rolls. These compositions are played and cut into the paper roll at the same time. They are carefully edited and O.K.'d by the pianist who played them. Practically every great pianist of the present day has pronounced the Duo-Art Reproducing Action—"Unequalled, Supreme."

THE Duo-Art is a pianoforte, and may be played by hand in the usual manner. It is the original Pianola, playing any 88-note music roll, and offering unlimited possibilities for individual interpretation. It reproduces perfectly the actual performance of the great pianists. We urge you to come in and let us play it for you—let us show you its exclusive and wonderful features.

GENERAL NEWS AND NOTES OF THE MUSICAL WORLD

Dropping the Pilot of Premier Symphony—Citizens of Boston Take Task Major Higginson Resigns.

THREE significant letters added to its name gave striking evidence within the last week of the passing of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as an institution controlled by one man, its founder and sole guarantor during thirty-seven years, to be succeeded by a governing board of nine trustees and by an organization hereafter to be known as "The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc."

Major Henry Lee Higginson invited to his home twenty-five leading citizens of Boston, all of whom were patrons of his orchestra and persons of musical taste like himself. To these men and women in a private meeting, unreported beyond a formal announcement in the papers next day, he declared the time had come for him to lay the burden down. He left it to the meeting to decide whether the famous orchestra should be abandoned or, with their help, should be continued under the guidance of younger men.

President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard University was one of Major Higginson's guests, and he became the spokesman for the others in a stirring tribute, which should become public some day, recalling the services of the Boston Symphony and of its founder to the cause of music in America. President Eliot said it would be nothing short of a public calamity if the orchestra were to come to an end, and the upshot of it was that his opinion was also the sense of the meeting.

Judge Frederick P. Cabot, who was named as President of the new orchestra board, is a Judge of the Juvenile Court of Massachusetts, and one of the Trustees of Radcliffe College. He is also a relative of Major Higginson, whose mother was Mary Cabot of Boston. M. A. De Wolfe Howe, another of the new board, is official historian of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a former associate editor of The Youth's Companion and The Atlantic Monthly, and biographer of Charles Eliot Norton.

Among the others, Ernest B. Dane is a banker, the President of the Brookline Trust Company. His wife, who was Miss Helen Pratt of New York, has for years maintained weekly organ recitals in the great music room of their Brookline home, as famous in its way as is Mrs. Gardner's art gallery in the Fenway. The rest of the board, recalling several well-known family names of Boston, includes John E. Lodge, Frederick E. Lowell, Arthur Lyman, Henry B. Sawyer, Galen P. Stone, and Bentley W. Warren.

Boston's Choice of a Conductor.

First among the tasks of Major Higginson's successors was the choice of a conductor in place of Dr. Muck, now interned at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. It was announced at once that negotiations were in progress which, had for their purpose the engagement of a conductor who "will be welcomed by the public and will maintain the commanding musical position of the orchestra."

The Trustees believed their undertaking of the direction of the orchestra to be "justified by guarantees already secured toward placing it upon a sound financial basis," and they entered on their duties "with a full realization of the significance of the orchestra to the life of their city and country." With regard to the selection of a conductor for next year, no announcement was made pending final action of the board.

Among the names of conductors proposed, according to unofficial reports, were Sergei Rachmaninoff, Arturo Toscanini, Sir Henry Wood, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Leopold Stokowski, and many other more or less remote possibilities. As remarked in Boston, if the choice was to be made from Europe, it was confined to France, Italy, and England of the belligerent countries, to Holland and Scandinavia of the neutral, and to Russia.

Of these, Rachmaninoff alone, on his one visit to America in 1909-10, had conducted the Boston Symphony in his own works. Gabrilowitsch, another member of the group actually here and active now, was generally believed the most available. Toscanini, who would add distinction to a list hitherto drawn from Teutonic countries, has remained in Italy since the war.

For the rest, Sir Henry Wood had made a dignified and enduring rather than brilliant record in London. Stokowski was thought to be under obligation to stand by Philadelphia, for which he left his former Cincinnati post a few years back. Two leading Parisians were already under American contracts—Monteux, at the Metropolitan, and Hasselmans, promised to the Chicago Opera next Fall.

The Boston Symphony players ended their home season last night, led, as for five weeks past, by Ernst Schmidt, one of their own number. The usual series of Summer "pops" was announced to begin tomorrow, under Agide Jacchia.

Philadelphians to Play Here.

The Philadelphia Orchestra is to give five subscription concerts in New York next season, playing as a regular visitor in Carnegie Hall on Tuesday afternoons, Nov. 19, Dec. 17, Jan. 21, Feb. 11, and March 11. This series, planned by the Philadelphia management independently without local subsidy, will take the place of single visits made annually for some years past, which were financed by the Friends of Music here in New York. In its home town on April 20 the orchestra ended its eighteenth season.

Fifty concerts were given in the Quaker series, with four extras or benefits, and forty-three on tour. Of the twenty-five programs, each twice performed in the famous old Academy of Music, the compositions credited to allied nations reached a remarkable figure, outnumbering those from Teutonic sources in the ratio of about 50 to 30 names. Four American works in the list were Kelley's "New England" symphony, Foote's "Omar Khayyam," Rubin Goldmark's "Samson," and Philip Goepp's "Heroic March."

Minneapolis Players on Tour.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, however moderate its home series, is now making one of the longest Spring tours undertaken by any organization this year. The fifteenth season ended with a twelfth and final symphony concert in the Auditorium of Minneapolis on March 27, when Mme. Galli-Curci was the star. A last appearance of the orchestra some days later was the nineteenth of a series of "pops," making thirty-one dates in the home town.

Conductor Emil Oberhoffer and his men began their twelfth annual tour on April 7, to continue until June 4, traveling as far south as Memphis and Little Rock, east to Findlay, Ohio, and west to Hutchinson, Kan. Mr. Oberhoffer's symphony series covered Teutonic and allied music in the ratio of twenty-one to twenty-eight. There were six Americans, Mrs. Beach, Borowski, Chadwick, MacDowell, Oberhoffer, and Oldberg.

Claudia Muzio, who sings at Cooper Union for People's Music League

Geraldine Farrar, who organized benefit for Stage Women's War Relief.

Lieut Sousa, who leads 350 "Jackies" at the Metropolitan tonight.

Chicago Orchestra's Season.

The Chicago Orchestra, supreme in the West and far too rarely heard anywhere in the East, completed on April 20 its twenty-seventh season, during which time it had but two conductors, the late Theodore Thomas and his former assistant and present successor, Fred Stock. Mr. Stock made a world's record by producing in practically every program played since America entered the war at least one work by an American composer, a formidable list already printed last Dec. 5 in THE TIMES.

Mr. Stock's Americans included Ballantyne, Borowski, Brune, Carpenter, Chadwick, Cole, Delamarter, Gilbert, Goldmark, Hadley, Herbert, Loeffler, MacDowell, Oldberg, Ottenstrom, Skilton, Smith, Sowerby, Stock, Strube, and Weidig. A comparison of allied and Teutonic music gave the figures 80 and 60, respectively. There were twenty-eight programs for the fifty-six concerts in the orchestra's own hall—others on tour not stated—and the Chicago series since these concerts began in 1891, fourteen years under Thomas and thirteen under Stock, reached a grand total of 1,324, exceeding the record of New York's oldest orchestra in America.

Cincinnati Welcomes Ysaye.

Since the appointment of Eugene Ysaye, the great Belgian violinist, as permanent conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, the position of the Ohio River town as a music centre has assumed a new interest. Dr. Kunwald, the former conductor, was about the first leading musician among enemy aliens interned by the Federal authorities last January. Mr. Ysaye will begin his term with the orchestra next Fall, but he is now in Cincinnati to direct it in that city's most famous festival.

The twenty-third of the Cincinnati biennial May festivals, founded by Theodore Thomas in 1873, will be held from Tuesday to Saturday of this week, May 7 to 11. The veteran chorus of 340 voices will be assisted by a thousand children from the public schools. Some of the works to be sung are Kelley's "The Pilgrim's Progress," for which the Music Hall is sold out in advance; Haydn's "The Seasons," Bach's "St. Matthew Passion," Rossini's "Stabat Mater," and Wolf-Ferrari's "La Vita Nuova" in conclusion.

Ann Arbor's May Festival.

Patriotic features will mark the twenty-fifth annual May festival at Ann Arbor, Mich., which completes a quarter century of activity on May 15 to 18 inclusive. Six concerts will engage stars of the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Companies, together with instrumental soloists, while the massed forces will include the University of Michigan Choral Union and a large chorus of children, as well as the Chicago Orchestra.

Cesar Franck's "The Beatitudes" will open the festival at Ann Arbor, and another principal production in concert form will be Bizet's "Carmen." A children's chorus will sing Benoit's cantata, "Into the World." Rudolph Ganz, pianist, will appear in the same program, and on the closing day there will be an organ recital by Joseph Bonnet.

Bethlehem Choir to Sing.

From all parts of the country there is demand for tickets for the 1918 Bethlehem Bach Festival, to be held May 24 and 25 at Lehigh University. Dr. J. Fred Wolle will lead the 250 singers, with the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Moravian Trombone Choir. Bach's "Ode of Mourning" is among the cantatas for the opening day, while two Saturday sessions will be devoted to the B minor Mass.

Norfolk Festival in June.

George W. Chadwick's "The Land of Our Hearts," a short choral work just published by the Boston Music Company, has been selected for performance at the Norfolk festival, to be held at Litchfield, Conn., in June.

10,000 to Sing in "Elijah."

Lieutenant Sousa is to lead a chorus of 10,000 in Mendelssohn's "Elijah" at the Polo Grounds on Sunday, June 2, in aid of the War Savings campaign. High school and college students and members of choral societies who will take part are now training under Dr. Frank R. Rix, George H. Gartlan, Louis Koemmenich, Edward G. Marquard, C. Mortimer Wiske of Newark, and T. E. Morgan. Among the stars announced to sing is Mme. Schumann-Heink.

THE CURTAIN FALLS ON CLAUDE DEBUSSY

MUSIC has its milestones, as peace has its victories, "no less renowned than war." The curtain falls on the season of 1917-18, a year of total eclipse for much that the world held precious in art and life. Yet one event stands out in a retrospect of these latter days, the death of the strangely silent Claude Debussy.

"What his own countrymen would say of him," remarks The London Times, "would be that he has spoken with the true voice of France, and we, using a slightly different expression, should say that he broke the yoke of German music. Future generations may look back on his pioneer work as we now look back on Claudio Monteverde."

Debussy's own view of his masterwork, "Pelléas et Mélisande," is told in a translated latter to a lifelong friend in England, a letter which The Daily Telegraph of London believes has not hitherto been published. The composer wrote that, on reflection, he found it rather difficult to speak of "Pelléas" and to underline its characteristic portions, so he begged his correspondent to excuse what follows:

"Before all, you will do well to eliminate from discussion the question whether there is, or is not, melody in 'Pelléas.' It must be decisively understood that melody—or song (Lied)—is one thing, and that lyrical expression is another. It is illogical to think that one can make a fixed melodic line hold the innumerable nuances through which a character passes. That is not only a mistake of taste, but a mistake of 'quantity.'

"If in 'Pelléas' the symphonic development has, on the whole, small importance, it is to react against the pernicious neo-Wagnerian aesthetic which presumes to render, at the same time, the sentiment expressed by the character and the inner thoughts which impel his actions. In my opinion, these are two contradictory operations, from a lyrical point of view, and, when united, can only weaken each other. Perhaps it is better that music should by simple means—a chord? a curve?—endeavor to render the successive impulses and moods as they are produced, without making laborious efforts to follow a symphonic development, foreseen, and always arbitrary, to which one will necessarily be tempted to sacrifice the emotional development. That is why there is no 'guiding thread' in 'Pelléas,' and its characters are not subjected to the slavery of 'Leit-motive.' Take note that the motive which accompanies 'Mélisande' is never altered. It returns in the fifth act unchanged at any point, because, in reality, Mélisande is always unchanged in herself, and dies without any one—or, perhaps, only old Arckel—ever having understood her.

"The simplicity of 'Pelléas' must be insisted upon. I spent twelve years in removing from it everything of a parasitic nature that might have crept into it. Never did I seek in it to revolutionize anything whatever. But the habit has grown of dragging music into places of ill-repute, or of making of it a game of skill that none can understand without hard training. I have endeavored to prove that people who sing can yet remain human and natural, without ever needing to resemble mndmen or puzzles. That at first disturbed the professionals, and also the simple public, who, accustomed to being moved by means as false as they were grandiloquent, did not at first understand that all that was being asked of it was a little good-will. That is all I can find to tell you. The rest belongs to anecdote, on which I am badly 'documented,'" was the composer's conclusion.

Ave atque Vale, Debussy.

James Huneker, writing in the Philadelphia Press of the recent passing of Claude Debussy, hailed him as "a musician doubled by a poet," the most subtle composer since Chopin, and, compared with Schoenberg and Stravinsky, almost a conservative. "In a decade he may be called a reactionary, for nowadays life is short and art is swift." Long before his death the gifted Frenchman had been critically ranged. It would be rash to say he had achieved his artistic apogee, as he might have had surprises in store; but it was safe to conclude that "Pelléas et Mélisande" was his lyric masterpiece, and that the dewy freshness of the "Apresnidi d'un Faune" would not be repeated.

"In 1903 I was introduced to Claude Achille Debussy one Summer evening in the Boulevard des Italiens. He spoke a few polite words, and impressed me as a man who had early used himself up because of his intense inner life. He wrote much musical criticism at one time, chiefly memorable for its unsympathetic attitude toward Schumann and Wagner, not because of reasons patriotic, but no doubt the result of a natural reaction against the chief educative forces in his development. Without 'Tristan and Isolde' there would be little of artistic novelty in 'Pelléas et Mélisande,' unless we include Moussorgsky and the whole-tone scale. Later, I asked of Maurice Maeterlinck his opinion of Debussy's musical setting to his play.

"It was an imprudent question, as I had forgotten the row over the opera. I knew that Maeterlinck's wife, Georgette Leblanc, sang the 'Mélisande,' but that Mary Garden ('Il faut cultiver notre Jardin,' Voltaire wrote in 'Candide,') had captured the rôle at the Opéra Comique. Now, Mr. Maeterlinck is a polite man and his answer was guarded, nevertheless his dislike of the music pierced his phrases. To him it was evident that his play needed no tonal embellishment, that it was more poetic and dramatic without the Debussy frame. He is right. Yet the combination of poet and composer is irresistible. Claude Achille Debussy is one of the rare Little Masters who suffered all his life from a nostalgia for the land that lies east of the sun and west of the moon, the land of fantasy and evanescent dreams. His music will live."

As to Pelleas and Melisande.

The music to "Pelléas et Mélisande," which America heard—"thanks to Oscar Hammerstein"—is, in Mr. Huneker's opinion, so absolutely wedded to the moods and situations that as absolute music it is unthinkable. And the moods are usually "con sordino." Notwithstanding his musicianship Debussy is obviously a "literary" composer; that is, his brain must be first excited by a dramatic situation, a beautiful bouquet of verse, the contemplation of a picture, or an episode in fiction. Why ask whether the initial impulse to his music be the Mona Lisa or a quatrain by Verlaine, a recondite mood of Baudelaire? Without anxious preoccupation, the composer has caught the exact note of Maeterlinck, and he maintains that note throughout the opera. As it is impossible to divorce music and text—Debussy seems to be Maeterlinck's musical other self—so it would be useless to allude to the characteristic qualities of the score. It is like some antique and lovely tapestry that hypnotizes you as it slowly moves across your consciousness.

"It is the dream-haunted atmosphere of Edgar Allan Poe, the Poe of the dark Tarn of Auber, of Ligiea and Eleonora, of Berenice and Helen, those frail apparitions who are as incorporeal as they are exotic. It is the complete envelopment of the poem by an atmospheric musical haze shot through with gleams of light never shown on land or sea that is fascinating. We forgive its drugged monotony, its occasional cacophony, its lack of action, its few stirring climaxes. After waiting for a passionate outburst, when it does come it is overpowering in its intensity. The fact of omission has never been pushed so far.

"In the piano partition little may be gleaned of its poetic fervor, its reticences, its delicate landscapes, psychological subtleties. The pattern is never in evidence, yet the web is spun exceeding fine. His orchestration reveals the silver grays of Monet and the fire-tipped iridescence of Monticelli. His musical palette proclaims Debussy a discreet impressionist, one in the key of Verlaine, who loved nuance, not flaunting brilliant colors. 'Pas la couleur, rien que la nnance . . . et tout le reste est littérature,' sang Paul of the asymetrical jaws and supernal thirst.

"Naturally this highly peptonized anral diet is not very nourishing. Like the poetry and prose-poems of Stephane Mallarme, a little of Debussy suffices. He is precious. His ideas are limited. Nevertheless, there is magic in his music, the magic of evocation which only the dozen 'superior persons scattered throughout the universe,' of whom Huysmans speaks, may understand."

Little wonder, exclaims Huncker, that he interpreted Mallarme, Verlaine, Maeterlinck, Baudelaire in tone. He was affiliated to that choir of sensitive souls, a poet himself if he had not written a bar of music.

Some Orchestral Echoes.

New York's orchestras had closed their season when Debussy's name flashed over the cables last month, but symphony hands in other cities were still active, and by coincidence the composer's first nocturne, "Clouds," was played in his memory both in Boston and Chicago. Philip Hale in the Eastern city wrote that it was a question which of Debussy's orchestral compositions would best illustrate his peculiar genius in a memorial service.

"There are some who say his indisputable genius shines brightest in his symphonic sketches, 'The Sea.' Would not 'The Afternoon of a Faun' or 'Iberia' be a fuller revelation? To us it seems that by these two compositions, the string quartet, some of the songs and piano pieces, and 'Pelléas and Mélisande' he will be known by the generations to come. For Debussy's place among the immortals is assured.

"William Wallace in a remarkable book maintains that we are only on the threshold of the temple where the muse is enthroned. There she waits patiently for her priests and worshippers. Debussy gave to musicians the keys to new chapels in this temple.

"For musiclovers he broadened the horizon. He suffered the fate of innovators; he was ridiculed, he was called a charlatan, a poseur—what was he not called? He has suffered, too, from imitators, suffered in this respect with Wagner and Richard Strauss.

"Young composers, forgetting that Debussy triumphed in the Paris Conservatory, where the strictest forms of composition are inexorably taught, having themselves little technical equipment, have produced vapid, chaotic works.

"On the other hand, he has influenced the mighty of his generation. The French, the Italians, even certain Germans and Englishmen, write now far otherwise than they would if Debussy had not shown the way."

Boston and the Ballet.

The Metropolitan ballet in Boston, by special arrangement, had a day to itself in the recent week's visit of New York's opera there. Rimsky-Korsakoff's revolutionary "Coq d'Or" had its first performance in the neighboring city, following a successful series here, and with it was seen Gilbert's "Dance in Place Congo," the work of a Bostonian, a prophet not without honor in his own country and his own place.

Mr. Hale, in The Boston Herald, said of "Le Coq d'Or" that children of 6 or 60 could see it, "unconscious of satirical intent or bitter application, as they read 'Gulliver's Travels' without thought of the Dean's terrible irony." Boston's blue spectacles played an odd trick when a critic wrote of the strange charm of the performance by singers who voiced the chief characters of the drama, "sitting side by side, dressed uniformly in drab." At the New York production these artists had certainly appeared in robes of red.

"Mme. Garrison sang the extremely difficult music of the Queen purely, fluently, and expressively. Mme. Howard and Messrs. Didur and Diaz displayed a fine appreciation of the ironical text. We mention them because on them rested the burden of song. And what shall be said of Mr. Bolm's King, Mr. Bartik's General, Mr. Bonfiglio's Astrologer, of Queenie Smith's Amelfa, so anxious about Dodon's 'peaceful sleep'? No description would do justice to their joyous folly.

"To attempt a description of the courtiers, attendants, Bojars, soldiers, or Queen's attendants would be as vain as an effort to picture in words the beauty of the costumes, the wild stage settings, the lighting, the evolutions, marches, and processions. Mme. Galli in repose and in movement was a delight to the eye. At the same time it must be said that the necessity of timing inexorably the action to the music in some instances gave the appearance of rigidity to principals and subordinates.

"Henry F. Gilbert's ballet, 'The Dance in Place Congo,' was performed for the first time in Boston. Mr. Monteux conducted. The chief dancers were Mme. Galli, as the quadroon girl, and Messrs. Bonfiglio and Bartik as the rival lovers. The scene was beautiful; the crowd was adroitly managed; there was vivid, turbulent action; but we were disappointed in the music. Mr. Gilbert is a composer of indisputable talent.

"There are some impressive pages in this score, but as a whole it is persistently boisterous, without relieving episodes. In spite of his Creole themes there is little true Southern color, nor is the sensuousness or sensuality of the quadroon girl found in the music itself. Mme. Galli danced and acted with savage fury. The rivals and the crowd were not far behind her in this respect,"

PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK.

WITH a program so filled by volunteers that Mr. Sousa is to start at 7:50 o'clock sharp, Geraldine Farrar has sold out the Metropolitan for tonight's "patriotic music festival" arranged by her for the benefit of the Stage Women's War Relief. The opera orchestra will open the program, and after "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" there will be a musket drill by fifty Naval Reserves from Pelham Bay and a signal drill by men from the Electrical School at the Navy Yard. Irene Franklin and Grace La Rue will sing, Robert Emmett Keane will speak, and Leon Rothier will give the "Marseillaise."

John McCormack will appear midway in the concert in a group of favorite songs. In the second part Miss Farrar will sing the second act of "Madama Butterfly," with Rita Fornia, Thomas Chalmers, Angelo Bada, Pietro Audisio, and Ella Bakos, conducted by Gennaro Papi. Efrem Zimbalist will play violin solos, and George M. Cohan will sing his marching song, "Over There."

Lieutenant Sousa will conduct 350 men of the massed bands from the Third Naval District. Richard Ordynski will muster 600 persons on the stage for "The Star-Spangled Banner." There will souvenir programs, with a portrait of Miss Farrar, the original painting to be sold at auction, being by Neysa McMein, a woman artist, who has been accepted as a volunteer with the American camouflage force in France.

Claudia Muzio, soprano of the Metropolitan, and Max Rosen, the violinist, will appear in a festival concert at Cooper Union tonight to celebrate the completion of six years' work by the People's Music League. Interest attaches to Rosen's appearance downtown, for he grew up on the east side, studied at the Music School Settlement, and appeared as a boy in Cooper Union before sailing for Europe to study under Auer.

The People's Music League was started six years ago by the People's Institute to bring good music to people who could not afford to pay concert prices. In the last year more than 200 concerts were given by the league, about 100 in the public schools, some twenty-five at Cooper Union, and seventy by neighborhood orchestras and choral societies founded by the league.

Since 1912 six orchestras have been organized—the Beethoven with 100 members, the Schubert with forty-five, the Mozart with thirty, the Cooper Union, the West Harlem, and the Harmony Band, as well as the Paole Zion Singing Society, which is devoted exclusively to Jewish music.

The Music School Settlement will hold its free monthly concert at the Settlement House, at 65 East Third Street, this afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Arthur Farwell will conduct the Senior Orchestra in Pergolesi's "Concertino" in F minor, Handel's "Pastoral Symphony" from "The Messiah," and the waltz from Tschaikowsky's "Serenade" for strings. The vocal ensemble, led by Laura Elliot, will sing Handel's "O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" and a "Hymn to the Madonna," arranged from an old folksong of the Netherlands.

Beth Levin Siegel, pianist, and Mary Levitt, soprano, will appear at the Young Women's Hebrew Association this evening for the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors' Welfare Fund. Miss Siegel will play music of Brahms, Chopin, Liszt, and MacDowell, and Miss Levitt will sing airs by Horsman, Mrs. Beach, and others from Tschaikowsky's "Jeanne d'Arc" and Catalani's "La Wally."

Hanna Brocks Oetteking, soprano, assisted by Umberto Martucci at the piano, will appear at the Young People's Branch of the Educational Alliance tonight in a program of songs by Carey, Handel, Debussy, Chausson, Mahler, Reger, Eugen Haile, Cecil Burleigh, Uda Waldrop, and W. Keith Elliott.

Karl Jorn, tenor, and Adamo Didur, bass, are announced to sing this afternoon at the Karl Marx celebration in Carnegie Hall.

May Peterson, Leon Rothier, Mischa Levitzki, and Sara Gurowitsch will assist at the Strand Theatre on Thursday afternoon in a benefit for the Ambulance Unit which the Women's Homeopathic Hospital is sending to France.

The Swedish Singing Society will give a concert in Carnegie Hall next Sunday.

FREE TO THE PUBLIC.

Samuel A. Baldwin at his free organ recital at the City College this afternoon will play preludes by Bach and Handel, a fugue of Buxtebude and a canon by Schumann, Nevin's "Will o' the Wisp," Rubinstein's "Melody in F," and the fifth organ symphony of Widor.

Debussy's "The Good Shepherd" is on Mr. Baldwin's program next Wednesday, with airs of Bach, Wagner, and Schubert, Becker's sonata No. 4, and the finale from the first symphony of Vierne.

Brooklyn Academy Concert.

Mathilde Charrot, soprano, will sing Wednesday evening at the Brooklyn Academy, presenting airs from "Aida" and "Traviata." Kathryn P. Gunn will play the violin obbligato in Gounod's "Ave Maria," and Emilia Quintero will assist at the piano.

People's Symphony Benefits.

Ethel Leginska, pianist, will give two recitals for the benefit of the People's Symphony Society on May 17 at the Brownsville Labor Lyceum, Brooklyn, and May 24 at Morris High School in the Bronx.

Singing for Boys Over There.

Some experiences of Americans now singing for the army in France are told in their letters to T. S. McLane of the entertainment section of the Y. M. C. A., the latest of these being from a New York choir singer, Beulah Dodge, who once succeeded Edna May in "The Belle of New York." Miss Dodge wrote:

"I strained my voice, and it was badly injured by singing in the thick cigarette smoke while I was having a heavy cold. The result was that I was completely disabled with an acute attack of laryngitis. I had resigned myself to never singing again, and really didn't much care, if I had given pleasure at all to the blessed boys who are giving all for us.

"For eight weeks I turned my attention to helping out in other ways at the Y. M. C. A. and at canteens. In the meantime, in spite of the attentions of three physicians, my voice—or a voice—returned, and I am again journeying about with the Liberty Quartet. I think it will be all right now, and I'll be more careful in the future.

"It was a joy to have Bill Janaushek finally catch up with us. It is impossible for an ensemble to do creditable work without an authoritative musical director. Bill is that, and we'll be mighty glad when he finishes his trip with Elsie Janis and returns to us, for we are sure enough going to pieces without him. The success of the quartet everywhere has been marked, and I am mighty glad to be with it again.

"We are all too happy for words, and not one bnt wishes to remain for two years, as you say, or for the duration of the war. I don't wish to return to America while there is one of our boys left here. I feel like mothering and sistering the whole army, and am dreading the future void when the great drama is finished and the curtain falls."

WARTIME MUSIC ACTIVITIES.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who is to appear at Camp Dix on May 8, has been devoting her season to singing in the American Army camps.

Elizabeth Tudor, soprano, will assist the Orpheus Club of Ridgewood in a concert tomorrow at Camp Merritt, N. J.

Lieutenant Fitzhugh Haensel has returned from France after several months' service with the Intelligence Department of the army.

Francis Rogers, with Mrs. Rogers, is returning from a tour of 100 concerts in the trenches in France for the Y. M. C. A.

David Bispham, the American baritone, is among the stars of music and drama who have offered their services to the theatre over there.

Captain Mario Guardabassi, once a singer at the Metropolitan, is now in this country with the Italian war mission to America.

Lucien Muratore, the French tenor of the Chicago Opera, has been singing the "Marseillaise" for the Liberty Loan.

Mischa Elman, the violinist, gave the use of his seven-passenger limousine for the Liberty Loan drive in New York.

Rudolph Ganz is going home to Switzerland for the Summer, playing on the way in Paris and in American camps in France.

War Tax Figures.

For the first time New York's annual outlay on a season's music may be verified or audited, so to speak, by comparison with the last year's reported collections of the war tax on theatres and amusements.

Unofficial figures credit the Metropolitan Opera with paying about $170,000 to the Government since last Fall, the concerts in Carnegie Hall, $40,000; the recitals in Aeolian Hall, $20,000, and other sources, $20,000 more. The total of $250,000 is one-tenth of the value of tickets sold or given away, so that the year's music stands the public and promoters about $2,500,000.

Statisticians have figured that the season of 1917-18 has included something like 200 opera performances, 132 symphony concerts, 128 song recitals, 100 miscellaneous benefits and private affairs, 85 piano recitals, 50 chamber music concerts, 38 violin recitals, 26 choral concerts, 10 'cello recitals, and a few scattering events, making the grand total around 800.

PLANS OF THE MUSICIANS.

Cantor Josef Rosenblatt of the Hungarian congregation Ohab Zedek, who recently refused a $1,000-a-night salary as tenor of the Chicago Opera, is to be heard in a series of song recitals throughout the country, making his first appearance at Carnegie Hall on Sunday afternoon, May 19, in a program of Russian, Hebrew, Italian, and English songs and operatic airs.

Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra of San Francisco, will give an orchestral concert of modern French music in Carnegie Hall on Friday evening, May 17, when he will present César Franck's symphony in D, Debussy's two nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals," the "Afternoon of a Faun," and Chabrier's "Spain."

Mischa Elman, the violinist, with Nina Morgana, soprano, and Morgan Kingston, tenor of the Metropolitan, will appear in the season's last concert under the auspices of the Brownsville Labor Lyceum, to be held Sunday evening, May 19, at the Hippodrome.

St. Mark's M. E. Church choir will give a concert Monday evening, May 20, in Carnegie Hall, presenting negro spirituals, arranged by E. A. Jackson, and "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," by Coleridge-Taylor.

Josef Hofmann has announced a piano recital on May 21 at Carnegie Hall for the Red Cross drive, with a brief address by Theodore Roosevelt.

Hugh Allen and Julia V. Grill will give late season song recitals at Aeolian Hall respectively on May 14 and 25.

The Music School Settlement for Colored People will hold a benefit concert on May 27 at Aeolian Hall.

Various Coming Events.

Anna Fitziu will sing an air from Hadley's "Azora," accompanied by the composer, at a concert of the American Music Optimists today at the Hotel Marseilles. There will be violin solos by Samuel Gardner.

Leah Melament, pianist, will play a concerto of Grieg this evening at the Waldorf-Astoria with the orchestra under Joseph Knecht.

THE MERRY MONTH OF MAY IN THE THEATRES

By JOHN CORBIN.

IT is very interesting, and rather surprising, the unanimity and the bland confidence with which those who do not happen to care for Ibsen dispose of him by quoting Henry James. Ibsen is the dramatist of Suburbia! The life he depicts is that of a small nation remote from cosmopolitan influences, and is therefore without interest for us.

Who are we—and who is Henry James? We are the nation that, caught in the throes of the world's profoundest agony, nourish our sonls on the graces of the "Oh!" school of musical comedy and on the jocularities of Potash and Perlmutter. Henry James is the novelist of the twilight zone. Once upon a time he lived in the sunnier edge of the human penumbra, and his novels were the delight of a certain rare and exquisite aristocracy of taste. Then he plunged into the remoter borders of night and was lost to all but the most intrepid explorer. Emerging from a foray into the pathless tangles of his syntax, Frank Moore Colby entitled his essay "In Darkest James." What he had found there was at once miasmic and innocuous. "A wraith meets a spook at a midnight supper. Adultery follows as a Q. E. D." But no one is shocked. For "Mr. James's style is its own sufficient figleaf."

And who is Ibsen? Few people have ever really liked his plays—certainly not I, who am rather amazed at finding myself their champion. Given a leisure evening and an alternative choice, most of us would instinctively turn from "Brand" to "The Tragic Muse," from "Ghosts" to "The Turn of the Screw." But the great world judges otherwise. In Middle Europe Ibsen's influence resulted in a new school of dramatists—Sudermann and Hauptmann, Schnitzler and Bahr. In England it worked profoundly upon Shaw and touched even Pinero to the development of all that is best in him. France, most impervious of all nations to outside forces, resisted Ibsen mightily, and yet was never again quite the same. Even among us, latest and most lethargic of peoples, there is a public not quite satisfied with a theatre which would ignore all that is grim and stirring in human life. And still we parrot the cry that Ibsen is the dramatist of Suburbia.

Dogma is, of course, to be avoided. Puddinhead Wilson was right: if it weren't for differences of opinion there wouldn't be horse racing. Much less dramatic criticism! But Ibsen is no longer a question of opinion; he is a matter of fact. Some playwrights are suburban. All but one are at best national. Ibsen alone among the men of two generations towers above local demarcations and is a world dramatist. To dispute this is not to err in judgment; it is to be faithless to fact.

By what virtue has he risen to this eminence? It was remarked some weeks ago in these columns that, though Ibsen is commonly identified with the modern social drama, he was not in any true sense of the word a social thinker. He lived in the generation that saw the first great spread of socialism, yet he ignored the movement quite, leaving it to his feebler followers to write plays of socialistic propaganda. No eye ever saw more clearly than his evils in the institution of marriage, yet he uttered not one word as to a means by which, as an institution, marriage may be bettered. Acclaimed as the champion of revolted woman, he steadfastly refused to declare himself a suffragist.

On this last point there is a certain confusion of evidence—which is, however, more apparent than real. In his "Samliv med Ibsen," John Paulsen relates that, under Mrs. Paulsen's influence, Ibsen became "to a certain degree a champion of woman's rights." Yet Paulsen himself records anecdotes that tell very clearly how "certain" the degree was. Ibsen denied to women even the small virtues usually granted to them. "No woman can write a good cookbook," he declared. His conviction that "no woman can sew on a button so it will stay on" was so profound that whenever his own buttons came off he went to his room and sewed them on himself. Paulsen relates that his wife would secretly go over the job and, if it were not done properly, finish it. "Don't destroy this illusion in him," she cautioned her husband, "it gives him so much happiness." The fact that such a woman could gain only a qualified approval of her cause needs no comment. In public Ibsen definitely refused adherence to it. His feminism bears a curious resemblance to that of another great dramatist, Euripides. He felt with equal keenness the hardships in the lives of women and the defects in their character; but he was indifferent to political "wrongs" and "rights."

The fact seems to be that Ibsen was utterly incapable of constructive social thinking. He himself said that he could follow out no thought to the end without coming upon self-contradictions. Nor was he able to see any constructive progress in the past of the human race. "There are actually moments," he wrote to Brandes, "when the whole history of the world appears to me like one gigantic shipwreck, and the only important thing seems to be to save one's self. From special reforms I expect nothing. The whole race is on the wrong track; that is the trouble." To such a mind the raw material itself out of which reforms are constructed was unintelligible—the common needs of our common humanity, the increase of happiness and power that come through social union. "I have never had any very firm belief in solidarity. . . . If one had the courage to throw it overboard altogether it is possible that one would be rid of the ballast which weighs down one's personality most heavily." In short, the radicalism which in the true sociologist is intellectual and constructive was in Ibsen emotional and destructive. He is commonly called an individualist, and that he assuredly was. But he was more than that. He was an individualist to the nth degree—in effect, an anarchist. And that is the true secret of the "self-contradiction" that beset his thinking. For no tyranny could be more destructive of individual self-realization than a world would be which had renounced all bonds of social organization. The thing which gives unity and meaning to "the whole history of the world" is the progressive effort to gain the larger life that comes through social "solidarity" without incurring the blight upon individuality that comes with over-organization and despotic control. This is a commonplace to the man in the street, but to Ibsen it was a concept undreamed of.

Though sociologically a child, however, Ibsen had one faculty in consummate force—the instinct for character. The world of his experience was small and provincial—suburban, if you will. But to despise it for that reason is to betray the complete and perfect snob—the snob social, the snob intellectual, and the snob spiritual. Henry James had a mind of the utmost rarity and delicacy of charm, a literary art of the most exquisite; but he willfully cut himself off from the main currents of human living, and so dwindled into a trafficker in wraiths and spooks, into a tormentor of our beautiful English speech. Ibsen took men and women as he found them—frankly, robustly, passionately—and made a language that had been unknown in the world of letters resound throughout the nations.

All about him men individually strong and pure of soul were cramped by organized wealth and commercial standards in living—and he gave us Stockmann, "An Enemy of the People." Yet, if "thought out to the end," Stockmann's revolt involved a "self-contradiction." Not all reforming individuals are made of heroic stuff. So Ibsen gave us Gregers Werle, and his piffling "claims of the ideal." Again, all about him women were struggling out of their narrower life of the era of household industries into the broader life of the era of the industrial revolution—and he gave us Nora, who left her "Doll's House" to find her soul in the new world. But not all women are sound and strong enough for this high quest—and so we have Hedda Gabler and her sterile, self-destructive hankering after a larger life. That Ibsen was intellectually conscious of economic and social changes that produced and gave meaning to these characters is more than doubtful. But he felt them keenly in the terms of concrete human life—and character, not ideas, is the stuff of which great drama is made. In all nations the world of his day was teeming with Stockmanns and Gregers Werles, with Noras and Heddas. Superficially the environment they live in may seem as uncouth as their Norwegian speech. But inwardly they are one with us, and they speak to us with the overpowering force of our common humanity.

It may be questioned, however, whether their interest for us is not, for the present at least, fading. Forty years ago the most moving of all impulses, outside of Germany, was that of individual self-realization, and of this Ibsen was the supreme exponent in the drama. Germany was experiencing the contrary impulse—the impulse toward the larger social organization. In one sense of the word—which now seems strange, but may soon become familiar — the Kaiser, no less than Karl Marx, is a Socialist. The one stands for autocratic power, whereas the other was a democrat; but both believe, or think they believe, in a State which is organized "all for each and each for all." Greater than the individual will, in the life of the bee, is the will of the hive—and the ideal of the pure Socialist is identical. Today the world knows the power of such social organization—is staggering beneath the weight of its onslaught. Practically we have found no surer means of resisting it than by an increase of "solidarity," a tightening of the social bonds—of which universal service is one incident among many. Spiritually also the world is in a ferment of social aspiration. That the essential liberties of mankind should be permanently abated is unthinkable. Pure socialism, whether autocratic or democratic, will doubtless remain the ideal of insects and Germans. But it is possible that we may come to realize that we can reach a higher development only through a somewhat less individualistic and somewhat more social organization. If this is indeed the trend of the modern impulse, then the days are numbered in which the message of Ibsen will seem to us vital and moving.

Nora and Nazimova.

NORA, who abandons her "doll's house," and with it her husband and children, is the type of feminine individualism—indeed of feminine anarchy. The drama of her revolt may seem to us today somewhat stale, for we are all too familiar with it. The present problem is how to reclaim the "free" woman to her high and exclusive destiny as mother of the race. The "miracle" which Nora dreamed lies far in the future. But dramatically the play still seems among the strongest works of Ibsen. Mme. Nazimova is at her best in it. Some of us may still find an insuperable obstacle in her harsh and inarticulate speech, her external and exaggerated "assumption" of character. But to those more tolerant souls to whom such things are negligible incidents, the performance may be commended. Her technical cleverness and the vigor of her personality have never been more fortunately in evidence.

Here Is the Cast Which the American Red Cross Has Recruited for the Three Weeks' Tour in J. Hartley Manners's "Out There," the Photograph Having Been Taken on the Stage of the Criterion Theatre Last Wednesday Afternoon, Upon the Occasion of the Second Rehearsal. The Confirmed Playgoer Will Probably Recognize All of Those in the Picture, but It Is Not Amiss to Mention Them. In the Top Row, Therefore, are George MacFarlane, Burr McIntosh, Laurette Taylor, H. B. Warner, George M. Cohan, Chauncey Olcott, Helen Ware and O. P. Heggie. In the Bottom One: Eleanora de Cisneros, Mrs. Fiske, George Arliss, Julia Arthur, James T. Powers, Rose Stahl, and James K. Hackett. Holding the Script is Mr. Manners. Since the Photograph Was Taken One Change Has Been Made in the Cast—the Substitution of the Well-Remembered Beryl Mercer for Rose Stahl. The Tour Will Begin in Washington a Week from Monday, and the New York Performances Will Be Given at the Century on May 17 and 18.

A Play for Men in Uniform

SOLDIERS and sailors are invited tonight to the Playhouse to witness a performance of "The Man Who Came Back," given under the joint auspices of the Stage Women's War Relief, the New York Community Service, and William A. Brady. All men in uniform will be admitted free of charge—that is, up to the capacity of the theatre. If previous entertainments of this sort are a criterion, which they indubitably are, it would be well for those desiring admission to arrive early. Only uniformed men will be admitted.

The play takes the place of the customary Sunday night vaudeville show at the Playhouse. This afternoon's vaudeville program for uniformed men, customarily given at the Casino, will be transferred today to the Astor.

ON THE LONDON STAGE

THEATRES in London are now required to close promptly at 10:30 o'clock, and as a result many of the performances begin as early as 7:30. The original order governing the closing of the theatres set 9:30 as the hour, but the united protests of the managers were successful in obtaining an hour's grace. The earlier closing, coupled with the activity on the Western front and the consequent fact that few leaves of absence are being granted at present, has resulted in a decided falling off in theatrical attendance. For the first time this season the London producer is finding but little difficulty in obtaining a theatre in which to exhibit his wares.

The most popular of the new pieces in London is "By Pigeon Post," a war melodrama by Austin Page. Most of the reviewers hail it as the best of the war plays, and in these circumstances it would be strange if it were not soon produced in New York, considering the success here of other war dramas of English extraction. The author of "By Pigeon Post" is a newcomer among playwrights, whose pseudonym, Austin Page, is said to conceal only partly the identity of a well-known London theatregoer.

These few words of description from The Daily Telegraph may be counted upon to whet the appetite of the lover of melodrama: "It (the play) has a good story, the action is rapid and direct, the tension is steadily maintained, while, although the serious interest largely predominates, there are, scattered about, pleasant little passages of comedy which serve admirably to lighten the graver aspects of the plot. 'By Pigeon Post' is a war play, and one of the most ingenious that the present struggle has produced. It brings us into close contact with actual or, at any rate, possible events. It helps us to realize something of the intricate and comprehensive nature of the machinery by means of which the great war game is carried on. The scene itself is suggestive. We are in the library of a peaceful old château situated on the borders of French Lorraine. Little of is original character or atmosphere remains, however. The place has suddenly been converted into a busy hive of martial activity; it has its wireless installation, carefully camouflaged, its pigeon post service, its secret doors and sliding panels; it is now the home of cypher codes, secret messages, phosphorescent writings—something of a novelty this, on the stage. In short, you have all the paraphernalia and mechanism needed to arouse the curiosity and arrest the attention of an eager and expectant audience."

An actor named Arthur Wontner has made a great success in the leading rôle, and Madge Titheradge is seen as the heroine. The play is running at the Garrick.

Of American plays in London there is literally no end. Max Marcin's "Cheating Cheaters" scored only an average success at the Comedy, and has already been succeeded by Eugene Walter's thriller, "The Knife," which appears to be highly popular. C. Aubrey Smith is playing the Robert Edeson rôle. At the Plymouth the Margaret Mayo-Salisbury Field farce, "Twin Beds," was produced successfully about the middle of April. The London censor, although he objected to "Twin Beds" as a title, saw fit to O. K. "Be Careful, Baby," and it is under this meticulous title that the piece is running. Helen Raymond, well known here as a farceuse, is the only American in the cast, and appears to have scored the success of the entertainment.

The Selwyn family is further represented in London by "The Naughty Wife," Fred Jackson's farce. Although the fact was never blazoned to the public on this side of the water, Edgar Selwyn was actively concerned in the writing of this piece, and the London programs announce that the play is "by Fred Jackson, elaborated and revised by Edgar Selwyn." It is running at the Playhouse, with Charles Hawtrey in the Charles Cherry part.

On April 20 Rida Johnson Young's farce, "Captain Kidd, Jr.," was produced at the Queen's Theatre, and jumped into immediate popularity. In London, for some reason, it is known as "Lot 79." The revival of "Peg o' My Heart," at the St. James a week ago, does not fall strictly within a list of American activities, but Mr. Manners's long residence in this country makes it permissible to include it. Moya Mannering is the present Peg.

Doris Keane and "Romance" have ended their engagement of nearly three years at the Lyric. "Inside the Lines" is gone from the Apollo. "Brewster's Millions" has halted, and "The Thirteenth Chair" is shortly to be withdrawn from the Duke of York's. Lest the number of American pieces be thought to be decreasing, however, it might be mentioned that "Going Up" will be produced at the Gaiety early in June, with Joseph Coyne in the Frank Craven part; that "Fair and Warmer" will be put on at the Prince of Wales some time this month, and that "Very Good Eddie," "Her Soldier Boy," "Nobody's Widow," "The Very Idea," and "The Man Who Came Back" are other American plays which London will see before long.

To say nothing of the fact that "Nothing but the Truth," at the Savoy, is one of the most substantial successes in London. A special performance was recently given for the Queen at another theatre, the entire production being moved over for the occasion.

Concerning "Belinda" it would not be fair to reveal too much, considering the fact that the American premiere of the piece is only thirty-six hours distant. Enough, then, that the London cast includes Irene Vanbrugh, Dion Boucicault, Dennis Neilson-Terry, and Ben Webster, and that The London Times hails the piece as "delightfully frivolous." It has been playing at the New Theatre since April 8, and is being preceded by a pantomime concocted by no less a person than Sir Arthur Wing Pinero. It is entitled "Monica's Blue Boy," and is reported to be charming throughout.

The new Israel Zangwill farce, "Too Much Money," came to the Ambassadors' a few weeks ago with a record of having vastly amused the provinces, just as pieces frequently are carried to New York over the prostrate bodies of out-of-town citizens who died laughing. And, as not infrequently happens here, the piece failed to impress the metropolis. The Telegraph finds that the play had "moments," but that for the most part it was "solemn stuff." Lillah McCarthy is the star.

The possibility of Jose Collins's appearing here next season in "The Maid of the Mountains," in which she has scored her great London hit, appears to have become considerably less by the engagement of Miss Collins to star at the London Daly's for three years. Incidentally, "The Maid of the Mountains" is still the attraction at Daly's and bids fair to go on indefinitely.

Other successes which continue are the Barrie play, "Dear Brutus," at Wyndham's; "The Boy," a musical version of Pinero's "The Magistrate," at the Adelphi; "A Little Bit of Fluff," at the Criterion; the Maugham comedy, "Love in a Cottage," at the Globe (soon to be withdrawn); "Chu Chin Chow," at His Majesty's; "Seven Days' Leave," at the Lyceum; "The Better 'Ole," at the Oxford (an American production of this is pending); Hall Caine's "The Prime Minister" (rewritten since its presentation here) at the Royalty, and Seymour Hicks in "Sleeping Partners," a French farce, at St. Martin's.

The Times, apropos of the death of Sir George Alexander, contains an interesting paragraphic census of the English actor-managers. Not only Sir George, but Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Kendal have recently died, and Sir Squire Bancroft, Sir Charles Wyndham, and Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson are in retirement. Of the remainder, Cyril Maude is devoting more of his time to America than to England, and Arthur Bourchier and Seymour Hicks are now acting under managements other than their own. There remain, therefore, as active actor-managers, only Gerald Du Maurier, Oscar Asche, Dennis Eadie, Percy Hutchinson, Gladys Cooper, and Marie Lohr—and the last two of these are not actor-managers at all, but actress-managers.

WHAT NEWS ON THE RIALTO?

REHEARSALS of "Out There," with its imposing Red Cross cast began on Tuesday at the Criterion, but it was not until Wednesday that the full company was assembled. When it gathered, at 1 o'clock on Wednesday, that the photograph which looks out immediately to the West might be duly taken, it undoubtedly constituted the most distinguished collection of talent which has appeared in any single cast in the history of the American theatre.

Not the least important fact to be chronicled in connection with the first rehearsal is that the last of the fifteen members of the cast arrived less than twenty minutes after the specified hour. This was George M. Cohan, who stole fifteen minutes from the urgent rewriting of a play to take part in the ceremony of the photograph.

Up to a late hour yesterday all had gone smoothly, despite the traditions having the quarrelsome habits of stars as their bases. As matters are now progressing, in fact, a great many people are destined to be disappointed. Among them is the newsgatherer who happened into George C. Tyler's office one day during the last week and inquired if the management of the troupe intended to publish a daily casualty list.

Although it is not possible, of course, to predict definitely the attitude of the Government toward German dramatic enterprises by the time next season rolls around, it is the present plan of Rudolf Christians and his company to continue to operate in this city next year. The news that the company was relinquishing the Irving Place Theatre at the end of this season, taken in connection with the closing of the German theatres in Milwaukee and other cities, had been construed to mean that there would be no further performances in German in this city for the duration of the war. Now comes the announcement, however, that the Germans will give their plays at the Garden Theatre next season. Mr. Christians, in announcing this fact in a curtain speech at the Irving Place last Tuesday, made mention of the "unending courtesy" of the American Government toward his enterprise.

The Plymouth Theatre has found its greatest prosperity through the series of Ibsen productions now being made at that house. Both "The Wild Duck" and "Hedda Gabler" did all but crowd the theatre during the weeks that they were played, and now "A Doll's House," wisely reserved for the climax, is actually packing the house to the final row. On several occasions during the week, in fact—notably the Wednesday matinée—the audience extended even back of the last row, which is but another way of saying that there was a row or so of standees. The run of "A Doll's House" is announced to continue for another two weeks, but the theatre's present prosperity—a prosperity which not even Mr. Housum's "Gipsy Trail" could induce—makes an extension of the engagement practically a certainty.

Lionel Adams, a recent addition to the cast of "A Pair of Petticoats," is the only actor except Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson who ever played the rôle of the Stranger in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." Adams played the part at the head of a Southern company which visited a variety of towns which Sir Johnston found it impossible to touch.

Speaking of Sir Johnston and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," what has become of the movie version of that play for which Sir Johnston posed many a long month ago? Is it, haply, being saved for the Forbes-Robertson tercentenary?

Australia is to have "The Thirteenth Chair," and with Margaret Wycherley in her original rôle, some time during the coming Summer. While on the subject of Australia, Guy Bates Post is now duly playing there in "The Masquerader," and unbiased reports are to the effect that all is well. Post will play eight weeks each in Sydney and in Melbourne, and will then go on tour in the piece in this country.

Approximately 1,400 players are reported to have offered their services to the executives of America's Over There League, expressing a willingness—a keen desire, as a matter of fact—to entertain American soldiers in France. It is unlikely that any but vaudevillians will be accepted; at best, a very few companies may make the trip, but composed only of players who are individual entertainers as well. The first players to go, according to the sleuths of Variety, will be Mrs. Vernon Castle, Irene Franklin and Burt Green, Walter C. Kelly, Swor and Avey, Mercedes and his enigmatical act, and Chief Caupolican, a real aborigine.

"The Maid of France," the Brighouse playlet now on the program at the Greenwich Village, is about to reach vaudeville with Josephine Victor as its star. An ex-Washington Square sketch, "A Private Account," will be played at the Palace this week under the title of "The Fine System," with José Rubin and Olive Wyndham in the play's only rôles. It was Mr. Ruben who acted it with the Washington Squarers, the other part being then taken by Margaret Mower. Also headed for vaudeville is the revised of the Spanish "Land of Joy" company, which will close in Chicago this week, and—perhaps—Conway Tearle in a sketch.

Helen Moeller, who created something approximating a sensation at her appearance at the Metropolitan not long ago, has become an actress. At all events, she will be in the cast of "His Host's Wife," a farce which A. H. Woods is about to produce. The supposition is that Miss Moeller will be called upon to dance some time during the action of the piece.

The Treasurers' Club, which lists New York's box office men among its members, will give its annual benefit performance at the Hudson Theatre tonight.

THE NEW PLAYS

A LITTLE new life will be infused into the theatrical season this week by the presentation of a pair of new pieces—one a comedy from London, to be acted by Ethel Barrymore, and the other a Summer musical show. In addition, a religious drama will begin a deferred engagement on Lexington Avenue tomorrow night.

BELINDA—Tomorrow night at the Empire Theatre.

Ethel Barrymore's third and probably last play of her Empire season is a comedy in three acts by A. A. Milne, a piece recently given its first production in London with Irene Vanbrugh in the leading rôle. The London production, however, is treated elsewhere in these pages; so far as New York is concerned it should be noted that Ethel Barrymore will be Belinda, and that her company will embrace Cyril Keightley, E. Lyall Swete, Richard Hatteras, Eva Le Gallienne, and Clara T. Bracy. The piece calls for a cast of but six.

As a curtain raiser the Barrie playlet, "The New Word," will be repeated, with Mr. Swete in the part taken by Norman Trevor when the piece was produced at the Empire a year ago as one of a trio of short Barrie plays.

This is a musical show by Glen MacDonough and Raymond Hubbell, the latter the Hippodrome composer, and will serve to bring forward as a musical comedy actress Fay Bainter, whose last appearance in these parts was in "The Willow Tree." The provinces have acclaimed the production with something more than their customary abandon, wherefore the impresarios of "The Kiss Burglar" feel confident that New York will do likewise. Be that as it may, the piece will begin its engagement here on Thursday at the George M. Cohan.

The title is explained by the fact that somebody steals a kiss from the Grand Duchess of Orly while she is visiting in New York—wherefore it will be seen that "The Kiss Burglar" is a Summer show. Assisting Miss Bainter will be Harry Clarke, Grace Field, Denman Maley, Cyril Chadwick, and Armand Kalisz. Julian Mitchell and Edgar MacGregor have attended to the staging.

"The Mystery of Life," the religious play which was to have been seen at the Lexington Theatre last night, will be revealed tomorrow night instead. The piece is the work of J. F. X. O'Conor, a well-known secular writer, and calls for a cast of more than 150. It will be played by professionals.

The Hippodrome will be devoted tonight to a program under the auspices of the Canadian Club of New York, the proceeds of which will go to the dependent families of soldiers from New York fighting with the Canadian Army.

After all, there will be another German production at the Irving Place Theatre before the season is brought to a close. This will be a musical comedy, "Der Bettelstudent," which will begin a brief engagement next Thursday night.

With the passing of the regular attractions the amusement parks will begin to come to the fore again. The first of these to announce its opening is Palisades Park, which will duly take up its task of amusing the multitude on Saturday night of this week.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE STAGE AND STAGEFOLK

WHEN THE HIP PACKS UP

CLOSING a show at the Hippodrome is almost as big a job as opening one. Next Saturday night the curtain will ring down—up, rather—for the last time on "Cheer Up," the current Hippodrome extravaganza, and when it does so the various Hippodrome departments will face the great task of dismantling the production and storing it away. When it is considered that no drop curtain at the Hippodrome is less than forty feet by a hundred, and that a single "prop," used for a minute, is likely to be fifty feet high, some idea of the magnitude of the task is realized.

Broadly speaking, there is nothing so dead as last year's Hippodrome production. Scenic effects which cost thousands of dollars to achieve become just so much wood and canvas the minute the season ends. In the case of almost any other theatre in the world there is still a use for the scenery; the flatter the failure, in fact, the better the producer's chances of disposing of the sets. But Hippodrome scenery fits only the Hippodrome. Once, a season or more ago, a Hippodrome show was taken on the road, but it is safe to predict that it will never happen again. Not that the experiment was a financial debacle, for it was not, but the expense of transportation, coupled with the fact that not half a dozen cities in the land had stages which could accommodate the show, made the tour anything but a success.

So now the Hippodrome scenery goes to the Hippodrome storehouses—there are two of them—and there it stays. The same with the costumes. What the use to which these things will eventually be put only Charles B. Dillingham and the United States Realty Company know. The costumes, of course, do not fall strictly within the same class as the scenery, for the Hippodrome chorus girl is no larger than the coryphee of the Globe. There is, however, an individuality about Hippodrome costumes which renders it difficult to use them in any other sort of attraction. The usual method pursued by producers of musical shews is to sell their old costumes to burlesque managers when they are finished with them, but it is difficult to follow even this plan in the case of the Hippodrome things. As for using them over again at the Hippodrome—even a year or two later, when they will probably be forgotten—that is out of the question. Everything must be new every year. Besides, your Hippodrome fan is a cagy bird—the sort of theatregoer who comes to New York, sees the Hippodrome show, and goes home again. What he sees, accordingly, he is likely to remember, and to risk even the slightest duplication would be dangerous.

The key is never turned in the Hippodrome door. As a matter of fact, spectacles overlap themselves by some six months at the Hippodrome, for the scenic and costume models for next year's show were constructed and approved as long ago as last January. This in turn presupposes that the ideas for next year's show have also been evolved and approved, which is also true. The evolvers are R. H. Burnside and Charles B. Dillingham, in the order named; the approvers are the same gentlemen, but in the opposite order.

Although the show proper will close in another week, the Hippodrome will continue to be occupied on Sundays for the rest of the month. Then it will be sealed to the public for about ten weeks, and during this time it becomes a laboratory out of which comes the succeeding show. The mezzanine floor, for example, is given over entirely to the wardrobe mistress and her staff of costume makers—a staff greatly augmented for the Summer, of course.

At 11 o'clock next Saturday night the packing up will begin. The sets will then be systematically dismantled: the columns, pillars, domes, masking pieces, wings, drops, borders, leaping boards, rakers, platforms, swings, locomotive, and transport will all be duly "struck." The 4,000 costumes will be redeemed from their wearers—this task alone represents a considerable labor of checking up—and stored away in order. The huge toy soldiers of the workshop scene—each forty feet high—will be carried ont; the lifesize elephant of the water scene, the numerous steps around the tank, the cruisers used in the transport scene, the wagons used in the comedy movers' scene—all of these must be taken care of. And at the same time, it must be remembered, plans are under way for the moving of even a greater multitude of stuff into the theatre, for each Hippodrome spectacle must be greater and bigger than its predecessor. That is the law.

The emptying of the tank, 96 feet long by 45 feet wide, containing 750,000 gallons of water, and all incidental hydraulic effects, are handled by the engineering departments. The removal and rehabilitation of lights, wiring, globes, cables, spotlights, bunchlights, striplights, effect lamps, miniature batteries and storage batteries are intrusted to the electrical department. This is the one department in the Hippodrome which is able to carry its material over from year to year. All such paraphernalia is stored at the Hip and not at the storehouses.

A great deal of the scenery and properties is suspended from the rigging loft—a vast area, 60 or 70 feet above the stage and extending from the Forty-third Street stage entrance to the Forty-fourth Street stage entrance—a distance of 200 feet. All this material must be cleared—"lifted out," as those back stage put it—before the scenery and properties for the next production can be brought in.

Then, too, the house itself receives a thorough overhauling every Summer. Auditorium, loges, boxes, balcony, and gallery are all subjected to the scrutiny of cleaner, repairer, and upholsterer. Walls are scraped and repainted, ceilings redecorated, and floors renewed.

Corresponding efforts are made by the scenic department, the property department, the engineering and electrical departments, when the new show begins to materialize. Mark Lawson, scenic painter for the Hip, spends most of his time toiling away at miniature scenes. After his consultation with Dillingham and Burnside as to the general nature of the scenes required for the next production, Lawson makes a little oil or water sketch, not more than 18 inches long and 10 inches wide. If this is satisfactory it forms the basis of all future operations. From it is made a top scene on a half-inch scale reproducing the exact proportions of the largest stage in the world. The carpentering department constructs the sets from this model. Once the framework is finished, Lawson puts his painters to work, and the product reaches its finished form. Over 100 carpenters are employed in this task and not less than twenty-four painters.

All "props" are made by the Hippodrome property department from specifications rendered by the director, and the painting is done by a man specially assigned to that department. The stupendous water effects for which the Hippodrome is noted are made possible by the engineering department, and its experiments continue without interruption throughout the Summer, as do the experiments of the electrical department. Weeks are consumed in this latter field achieving the effects sought by the director.

The run of the Hippodrome show this season has been the longest ever known at that playhouse without some special great feature or scene being added at a stated period to stimulate interest. "Cheer Up" opened on Aug. 23, and, with the exception of the brief period when the theatre was compelled to observe fuelless Tuesdays, it has been played twelve times weekly ever since then. About two and a quarter million persons have seen the show—thereby breaking all records. The highest previous figure was about 1,900,000. It cannot be stated that the present season is the most profitable that the Hippodrome has ever enjoyed, for the house has been under various managements in its thirteen years, but it is certainly far and away the most profitable of the three years during which it has been under the Dillingham management. And this in a season which has been one of the most uncertain in the history of the theatre.

In addition to performing its regular week-day labors the Hippodrome has had but one idle Sunday night since the beginning of the season. For the most part it has been used for patriotic purposes on this year's Sundays, with the result that about $150,000 has been realized for the various causes.

As for next year's Hippodrome show the powers in control are not revealing their secrets as yet. One single definite announcement has been made, and that is that Bluch Landolf, who came into national prominence as a clown at the Hippodrome this season by doing merely the same things that he had been doing in burlesque theatres for years, will be a feature of the new show. So, probably, will Belle Story; but that is not as yet settled. The Hippodrome, as is well known, has a habit of holding on to its successful entertainers, both out of gratitude and because the number of players who prove satisfactory at the Hippodrome is strictly limited. In view of these facts it seems likely that Harry Houdini will also be connected with the new show; but that also is as yet undecided.

Minute Visits in the Wings

IN view of certain comments made by Will Rogers at the opening of the present Midnight Frolic," began the interlocutor, "comments having as their basis the alleged parsimony of Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., is it or is it not true that there is to be a Billie Burke Theatre in this town before long?"

"Mr. Rogers is occasionally embarrassing," replied Billie Burke. "I am certainly going to have my own New York theatre, although, of course, it will not be possible to have it ready for next season. I have been longing for my own house for some time, and now, having seen Mr. Miller's theatre, I want my own more than ever."

"Then you will not simply lease a theatre already built, as reported?"

"Oh, no. I want my own. I could never be satisfied with just any theatre after seeing Henry Miller's Theatre."

"By the way, isn't 'A Marriage of Convenience' your first costume play?"

"It is my first in New York, but I played in one in London. It was one of the first things I did—with Charles Hawtrey in a piece called 'Mr. George.' It was set in the time of the Boston tea party—seventeen, er, seventeen—about that time."

"What do you expect to do prior to the erection of the Billie Burke Theatre?"

"Well, I have a play by Avery Hopwood for next season, you know."

"By Hopwood? A farce, then?"

"No. It's a comedy. 'The Little Clown' is the name of it. I'm to hear it read for the first time on Sunday—that is, I'm to hear it as a whole for the first time."

"Meanwhile, what about the movies?"

"The movies? Well, of course, they're not like the stage, are they? Not that they don't do plenty of things for you that the stage does not—they get you everywhere, and bring you letters from all the ends of the earth. But they're rather—well, demoralizing."

"Demoralizing?"

"Yes. They pay well, of course, but they are also tiring. They leave no time for anything else. I don't care much about them. The only good one I ever did was the first one, 'Peggy.'"

"But you will probably do more?"

"Oh, I suppose so. But only one thing will make me happy, and that is to own a theatre. It is wonderful to have your own theatre—you can do so many things. Special matinées, you know, and all that sort of thing. Just wait."

THE suggestion of the sinister generally attaching to George Probert's part in any given drama is the outgrowth of his success in a disagreeable part in "The Lure" some few seasons ago. Prior to that he had built up something of a reputation for himself both as a comedian and as a serious actor, quite without resorting to drugs or any of the other aids to nature without which a typically Probert part is at present incomplete.

Probert's first appearance in New York was on Good Friday, the 13th of April, 1900, following several years of trouping in melodramas and the like. On the aforesaid Good Friday he appeared in a play by Granville Barker, called "The Weather Hen," the company also including the late John Bunny. The piece was put on for one matinée only, and it turned out to be enough. The following season Probert played an important part in the original production of "David Harum," with William H. Crane, then took the leading part in "The Brixton Burglary," and finished the season as the young minister in "The Bonnie Brier Bush."

There followed several seasons of comedy rôles, the plays including "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," "Gallops," "The Wolf," and "Samson." His first association with the type of emotional rôle with which he is now identified was with Margaret Anglin in "The Awakening of Helena Richie," in which he played a hysterical young lover. There followed a return to comedy, however—the leading rôle in the Chicago company of "Baby Mine" and the serio-comic Steve in Margaret Illington's "Kindling."

Then came "The Lure"—season of 1913-14—and his work in this piece all but fixed his future dramatic orbit. The following season he attracted wide attention as the roué von Guggen in "Innocent." A period in the movies followed, and then came his appearance here as the villainous Japanese valet in "It," which served no particular purpose except to advance Probert in his profession. In the Ibsen series at the Plymouth Probert played the dissolute genius Eilert Lovborg in "Hedda Gabler," and is now Dr. Rank, again a person of evil tendencies in "A Doll's House."

There is now a possibility of his escape from these parts, however, for he recently played the leading rôle in the George Broadhurst play "The Woman on the Index," while that piece was being tried on the road. The play was deemed worthy of a Broadway hearing next Fall—which fact may or may not provide a way out for Probert.

JOBYNA HOWLAND in "Nancy Lee" is an actress who finds herself equally at home in musical and non-musical pieces, and who has appeared in a variety of each. One or two recent Broadwayites, having seen Miss Howland at the Winter Garden, expressed surprise at her appearance in a legitimate play; as a matter of fact, she played the Princess Flavia in the Hackett production of "Rupert of Hentzau," that being the play in which she first attracted attention.

Subsequently she appeared with Elsie Ferguson, Charles Cherry, Della Fox, and others in a revival of "Rosedale," and since that time she has appeared in plays without number. Among the comedians whom she has supported are Al Jolson, Sam Bernard, James T. Powers, Walter Jones, Taylor Holmes, McIntyre and Heath, Ralph Herz, and Marie Dressler.

Two years ago she retired from the stage, presumably permanently, but the success of her brother Olin in "Leave It to Jane" was at least indirectly responsible for her return. Prior to that time Olin had been known as Jobyna Howland's brother, but with his appearance as the country youth in "Leave It to Jane" Miss Howland began to hear herself referred to as Olin Howland's sister. Hence the effort to re-establish herself—an effort which spent its first energies vainly in "Follow the Girl," but which is now productive of greater results in Eugene Walter's play.

CERTAINLY not the least important dramatic event of the season is the transformation of Reginald (alias Reggie) Sheffield from child actor to juvenile. The playgoer with a memory is quite likely to recall Reggie Sheffield as the boy who scored a stupendous personal success in an English piece called "Evidence," produced about four seasons ago at the Lyric. Reggie's success in the piece, in fact, was such that the play itself, completely dwarfed, died shortly afterward.

In "Evidence" Reggie was a golden-haired child. Something of the child still lingered about Reggie two seasons ago, when he appeared with Sir Herbert Tree as the page in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." Now, after another hiatus of two years, Sheffield is again on Broadway, having joined the cast of "The Man Who Stayed at Home" a few days ago. Now, however, he is playing a Lieutenant in the army—and, consequently, a full-grown man.

Sheffield, wisely, has grown up away from Broadway, and accordingly probably will he accepted by Broadway as a grown person. Percy Helton, a few seasons ago, was compelled to abandon his rôle of the boy in "Young America" because he outgrew the part during its New York run. His appearance on Broadway in a boyish rôle, however, had been so recent that he found it difficult to get himself accepted immediately as a man. Of such are the perils of the stage child.

VIRGINIA FOX BROOKS, at present of the Winter Garden, is the daughter of the late Joseph Brooks, well known as a theatrical manager. The Winter Garden swallows leading men and leading women with equal ease, wherefore it probably will occasion no surprise to recall that Miss Brooks, three seasons ago, was Leo Ditrichstein's leading woman in "The Great Lover." As a matter of fact, her engagement at the Winter Garden marks the beginning of an attempt to beat back to her original field, for her stage preparation was along musical lines rather than dramatic.

Miss Brooks's earliest dramatic recollections are concerned with a school pantomime in which she appeared as a witch, incidentally incurring a painful half hour for herself by the fidelity with which she spread black sealing wax over all of her teeth but one. This was at the age of 12, and a few years later she was sent to Paris, where for four years she lived with Yvette Guilbert. Here she studied languages, dancing, and singing.

Her rôles in New York prior to the present engagement have been only three in number—in "The Great Lover" as Anne Page, in Tree's "Merry Wives of Windsor," and with Faversham in "Getting Married." As a preparation for the Winter Garden, however, she spent seventeen arduous weeks last Summer in the stock company which Edward H. Robins has made an annual part of life in Toronto, Ontario.

THE COMPLEAT CRITICIZER.

From an Unidentified Black River Falls (Wis.) Paper.

The piano recital by Harald Gulbrandson Friday evening was a financial as well as a musical success. It has been seldom that our people have witnessed anything in this line of a superior nature, even from professors in the art much older in years. He exhibited a talent that was surprising to the Black River Falls friends, and earnest appreciation was frequently made manifest throughout the entertainment. His fineness of touch was readily observed, while his calm and unostentatious vigor was the admiration of all observers, while in his violent passages, in which the keys were being touched off at the rate of 300 per minute, more or less, there was little swaying of the body, and about the only noticeable change of expression was a slight reddening of the facs and the tightening of the cords in the cheek and neck.

THE MUSICAL SHOWS ARE GETTING THEM

Being a Partial List of Players Leaving the Legitimate Stage for the Musical—Fay Bainter, Frank Craven, Sydney Greenstreet, Joseph Kilgour, John Cumberland, Florence Nash, Ann Andrews, et al.

THE coming to town this week of Fay Bainter in a musical show inspired a discussion in a group of theatrical people a few days ago which led to the unearthing of a variety of interesting data. The text of the discussion was the fact that the line between musical and nonmusical productions is becoming more and more nebulous, and that an increasing number of players are making the jump from one medium to the other these days. A decided tendency of legitimate players to turn to musical comedy was noted, rather than a marked going over of musical comedy performers to the straight drama. The general reason for this, it was agreed, is the fact that an increasing number of musical shows contains real stories and call for something approximating acting—this being generally due, in turn, to the fact that most of the present musical shows are made from last year's farces and comedies.

So far as could be learned, Miss Bainter's appearance in "The Kiss Burglar" marks her début in a musical piece, although in her long stock experience she may have dabbled with musical plays now and then. Another incoming musical piece which contains a couple of players new to the game is "Rock-a-Bye, Baby," the musicalized "Baby Mine." Playing the Walter Jones part in this piece is John Cumberland, late of "Fair and Warmer" and "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath," and in the leading rôle is Edna Hibbord. Miss Hibberd is not so well known in New York as she is on the road, where she played the Madge Kennedy rôle in one of the "Fair and Warmer" companies for a season or more.

Of players now in the city the most prominent example is Frank Craven, who never knew the musical stage until he went with "Going Up." Now that that piece is an established favorite, it is no breach of confidence to add that Craven fought hard against going with a musical show, and finally capitulated only because he had no other play which suited him. It is not unlikely, however, that the success of "Going Up" has done much to reconcile him.

In "The Rainbow Girl" is Sydney Greenstreet, hitherto almost exclusively a Shakespearean player, and now making his first appearance in a play with music. (It is to be noted in passing that the newcomers to musical comedy almost invariably give the best performances.) In "Oh, Look!" is Joseph Kilgour, playing the part which he created when "Oh, Look!" was "Ready Money," and also making his musical début. And at the Winter Garden is Virginia Fox Brooks, whose dramatic efforts have hitherto been confined to Shakespeare, Leo Ditrichstein, and William Faversham.

Florence Nash is soon to come to town in a musical version of "The Melting of Molly." Miss Nash has played in musical shows before, but they happened some years ago prior to her big hit in "Within the Law." Annie Hughes will be seen here in "It Pays to Flirt," a musical comedy, and Ann Andrews, recently Arnold Daly's leading woman, will make her musical début in the same piece. John Daly Murphy, best known as a legitimate actor, appeared for a time in "The Land of Joy," and will soon come back to Broadway in the latest Wodehouse-Bolton affair, "See You Later." Peggy Wood appears to have deserted the legitimate stage for the musical, and so do William Norris and George Hassell.

The most prominent member of the opposing faction—i. e., players who have left the musical stage for the nonmusical—is undonbtedly Ina Claire at the present moment. Eleanor Painter is another, although not now in the public eye, and Hazel Dawn will soon join the ranks by appearing in an A. H. Woods farce.

TORONTO AND THE DRAMA

SOMETHING of a tempest is raging in Toronto these days over the matter of dramatic censorship.

The recent appointment of two new censors has been followed by the banning of about seventy plays, included in which are a number of pieces which have been tried in New York and found quite harmless, even insipid. In several Canadian publications indignation over the situation has broken into print. "Since this city is the focal point from which managers book attractions for Eastern Canada," remarks Saturday Night, published in Toronto, "the effect of this prohibition is not merely local."

"Several plays which have already been seen in Toronto and which furnished innocent enjoyment," continues the writer in Saturday Night, "without apparently coming under the axe of the censor, are now included in the prohibited list. For instance, there is Somerset Maugham's delightful comedy, 'Caroline,' of which Margaret Anglin gave such a sparkling performance a year or more ago. Another is Louis N. Parker's 'Paganini,' which was not much of a play, but in which George Arliss gave an exquisite study of the famous violinist. Yet another is 'The Masquerader,' the entertaining melodrama which Guy Bates Post played here eighteen months ago, and which has been running all season in New York. For equally inexplicable reasons the harmless farce, 'A Pair of Queens,' which has been done here on two occasions, is now taboo. Most extraordinary of all these prohibitions is that placed upon 'The Three Bears,' an innocuous little comedy which Ann Murdock presented here last Autumn. If there is any author writing today whose work is absolutely free from the suspicion of taint, it is the author of this piece, Edward Childs Carpenter. Yet we note that another of his delicate fantasies, 'The Pipes of Pan,' is also prohibited, for reasons even a censor could not formulate. Thousands of local playgoers must have witnessed the first five plays named above, and failed to discover in them anything but innocent entertainment.

"We have spoken only of plays which are familiar to local playgoers, but the list also includes many that have not been sent to this city, but in which veteran critics like John Ranken Towse of The New York Evening Post and James S. Metcalfe of Life, than whom none is more zealous for the cleanliness and well-being of the stage, have found free from moral taint. For instance, there are the more recent comedies of George Bernard Shaw, who certainly cannot be accused of salaciousness, though for other reasons it would be difficult to draw an audience for his plays at the present juncture. There is 'Art and Opportunity,' the last word of Harold Chapin, a gifted young English writer who laid down his life for his country. There is 'The Country Cousin,' by all accounts a rather crude piece, but one which Colonel Roosevelt in a public speech commended to his fellow-Americans. There is 'L'Elsyation,' a French drama, which has been hailed by critics as an expression of the manner in which Parisian society has been purged and purified by war. There are several other pieces familiar to the writer in book form, which are sincere works of art with a distinctly sane and moral point of view, though they deal with serious subjects. That a play should possess any claims to literary merit is in itself a reason for banning it from the viewpoint of the censors. That a play is of foreign authorship is a further reason—consequently we find the 'Nu' plays of Japan condemned.

"The fatuity of condemning plays unsight, unseen, has been shown during the current week. The farce, 'What's Your Husband Doing?' was banned on its name some weeks ago. When the text was presented to the censor for examination, he could find nothing to justify its total prohibition. The same is probably true of at least one-half of the unknown pieces on the index.

"It is plain that an undiscriminating censorship cuts both ways. On the list we note 'Her Unborn Child,' and, judging by theme and title, we would not be disposed to indorse the play ourselves; yet in The Christian Guardian of April 10 we find a page of close print devoted to eulogy of this play as designed to teach a great moral lesson, which should have the support of all who wish the drama to be an agency of good. Another piece under the ban is a melodrama, 'The Man Who Came Back,' which is the story of the prodigal son in modern garb. It has been phenomenally successful of late in Boston despite the fact that it did not appeal to critics; and The Transcript of that city recently ascribed its vogue to the strong support it had received from the pulpit and the religious community generally. So much for the censorship as a moral agency!

"We fear that many readers will imagine that we are perpetrating a colossal hoax in our citations. Unfortunately, the allegations are but too true. The situation to which our censorship has reduced us is this: That anything goes in the movies and the leg shows, but productions of serious drama or legitimate comedy are condemned beforehand. If a play gets here at all, it comes on sufferance. Under the tests on which some of the plays above named have been condemned, no tragedy or comedy of Shakespeare could hope for toleration, and a play like Sheridan's 'School for Scandal' would not stand for an instant. If there were no modern plays to slay, our censors would no doubt get after the classics. Any game will do so long as these pot-hunters can show a good 'bag' in their annual report. If pieces like 'Paganini,' 'Caroline' and 'The Masquerader' are deemed morally harmful, then the logical course is to make a clean sweep of the drama altogether and confine theatrical entertainment to the vulgarities of burlesque and the sensationalism of the movies."

WRITTEN ON THE SCREEN

STRAND—Mary Pickford in "M'Liss."
RIVOLI—Jack Pickford in "Mile-a-Minute Kendall."
RIALTO—Charles Ray in "Playing the Game."
BROADWAY—Mae Murray in "The Bride's Awakening."
FORTY-FOURTH STREET—D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World."
EIGHTY-FIRST STREET—Bessie Barriscale in "Blindfolded" on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; Louise Glaum in "An Alien Enemy" on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday.

MARY PICKFORD no doubt will be welcomed to the Strand this week by as many of her multitude of admirers as can crowd into the theatre, and if advance notices have any value she will not be disappointing in "M'Liss." The play is an adaptation of Bret Harte's story of the same name and deals with Western life in which a likable but untamed girl, her dissipated father, and a young man who comes from the East to teach school—and refine the girl—figure. It is said to be full of melodramatic thrills and comedy situations. Frances Marion is the author of the scenario, and, acording to report, she has departed from Bret Harte's story in a number of directions.

In the cast with Miss Pickford are Theodore Roberts, Thomas Meighan, Tully Marshall, Helen Kelly, Winifred Greenwood, and Monte Blue.

The second installment of the Chester-Outing pictures, entitled "An ex-Cannibal Carnival," will be shown. James Montgomery Flagg's latest comedy of the series "Girls You All Know," captioned "The Good Sport," will be another number of the program, and the topical review will include pictures of the American Army at the front.

The Strand Symphony Orchestra will play "Gypsy Love," and Rosa Lind, Ralph Errole, and Irene Audrey will sing.

With Mary across the street at the Strand, Jack Pickford will be a counter-attraction at the Rivoli in "Mile-a-Minute Kendall," in which the high-geared son of a wealthy father has various adventures and misadventures. The play is based upon the novel by Owen Davis. Louis Huff and Lottie Pickford have the leading feminine rôles.

Lieutenant S. C. Hilliam of the Royal Canadian forces will sing "Freedom for All Forever," a song of his own composition, and the Rivoli Orchestra will play Grieg's "In Autumn," Opus 11., as an overture. Jeanne Gordon will be heard in "Pauline's Aria" from "Pique Dame," by Tschaikowsky.

The scenic feature of the bill will be "What the Ice Age Left," a Robert C. Bruce film, and "His Smothered Love," a Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy, will be offered.

Charles Ray's new piece at the Rialto this week, "Playing the Game," tells the story of a young man who begins brilliantly (as the white lights are brilliant) on Broadway and ends nobly (as popular novel heroes are noble) in the Far West, where he meets the girl who brings about his reformation after his life has been sufficiently intensified to be interesting for a time. The scenario was written by Julien Josephson and among those in the cast are Doris Lee, Billy Elmer, Robert McKim, and Melbourne MacDowell.

The Rialto Orchestra will play Rossini's "Semiramide" as its overture, Hugo Riesenfeld and Nat W. Finston conducting, and Gladys Rice and Riccardo Bonelli will sing.

Views in Spain will make up the scenic part of the program, and "Mutt and Jeff" will provide what comedy they can.

The new film at the Broadway Theatre, "The Bride's Awakening," with Mae Murray in the leading rôle, is the story of a wealthy girl who marries a worthless villain anxious for her money and in love with another man's wife. The scenario was written by F. McGrew Willis and the production of the play was directed by Robert Leonard.

The Fadettes, the women's orchestra from Boston, will remain at the Broadway, and Miss Rumsey Smith, a contralto, will sing.

Clara Kimball Young in "The Reason Why," from Elinor Glyn's novel, will be the attraction at Loew's New York Theatre and Roof tomorrow and Tuesday. Douglas Fairbanks in "Mr. Fix It" and the final episode of "The Son of Democracy" will be shown Wednesday. Other offerings of the week are: Gladys Brockwell in "Her One Mistake," on Thursday; Ruth Clifford in "The Guilt of Silence" and Claire Anderson in "Mlle. Paulette," on Friday; Ethel Clayton in "Journey's End," on Saturday, and Francis X. Bushman and Beverly in "Cyclone Higgins," on Sunday.

The week's bill at the Plaza Theatre will be: Theda Bara in "Cleopatra" and an episode of former Secret Service Chief Flynn's "The Eagle's Eye," tomorrow and Tuesday; "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," on Wednesday and Thursday, and William S. Hart in "The Bandit and the Preacher" and Toto in "His Busy Day" on Friday and Saturday.

The scheduled opening of William A. Brady's film "Stolen Orders" at the Casino Theatre last Thursday night did not take place because, according to Mr. Brady, there was a disagreement about the arrangement for the theatre. Negotiations are in progress for the use of another theatre in the near future, it is said.

Opposition on general principles to arbitrary censorship of moving pictures by police and other authorities and definite attacks in particular on the claim of official censors to jurisdiction over patriotic and war films, even though they have been approved by agents of the Federal and allied Governments, have developed out of the activities of censors in Chicago and Pennsylvania, who have insisted upon deletions from D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

Censor Major Funkhouser of the Chicago police was the first to act against the film. When it was shown in Chicago recently he ordered that the scenes showing an orgy of Prussian officers and a German in the act of stabbing a French soldier be cut out. As soon as he heard of this, Morris Gest of Elliott, Comstock & Gest, exhibitors of the film, protested to President Wilson, and took other steps to overcome the censor's order. Last week the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors ruled that seven excisions must be made from the film before it could be shown in Philadelphia. They followed the direction of Major Funkhouser, and went further. Mr. Gest began his fight on the board by exhibiting the picture in Philadelphia on Tuesday to invited guests, who paid no admission. The exhibition was thus taken out of the board's jurisdiction, and Mr. Gest was able to obtain the verdict of a popular gathering, which, according to reports, voted almost unanimously that the film should be shown in full.

Following up this start, Mr. Gest advertised widely in the Philadelphia papers that he would fight the censors in the courts, and quoted a number of leading citizens as indorsing "Hearts of the World." It is said that forces are being mobilized for a determined attack upon the State and municipal censors which will seek to prevent their tampering with patriotic and war films. The Exhibitors' Trade Review launched a drive against the censors in its issue of yesterday, and promises not to let up until its purpose is accomplished. There seems to be an increasing belief that if nothing else happens, the Federal Government will step in and exercise such supervision of war films as shall make them immune from the power of local censors.

Charges of pro-German leaning have been made against censors involved in the "Hearts of the World" case, but this is not the main point made by the majority of those attacking local censorship. Their contention is that after Federal and allied Government authorities have co-operated in the making of a picture and permitted it to go out with their expressed or implied indorsement, local censors, whose horizons are usually limited, are not competent to pass judgment upon the film.

Variety offers the reminder that the fortieth anniversary of the first taking of moving pictures will occur on May 18. Edward Muybridge, a photographer, is credited with making the picture on the Leland Stanford race track at Oakland, Cal., on May 18, 1878.

The first picture to be put out by the Committee on Public Information, entitled, "Pershing's Crusaders," was shown in Cincinnati last week. According to reports, the committee plans to go extensively into moving picture production and distribution for purposes of patriotic propaganda, and will release a number of features from time to time. "Pershing's Crusaders" will be shown here soon, according to present plans.

The report persists that Mary Pickford will take a rest when her contract with Paramount expires next June and will not renew the contract as it stands. The rumor is that she will form her own company and enter into a working agreement with Paramount calling for a division of profits that will net her more than she now receives on a guarantee profit-sharing basis.

The Educational Films Corporation of America makes two interesting announcements. It has completed arrangements, according to the first, for the production of a seven-reel spectacle to be entitled "The Romance of Coal," the scenes of which will be made in the coal fields of West Virginia, with the authorization of the State Council of National Defense and John J. Cornwell, Governor of the State. The idea of using the coal fields as the background for an educational film originated with Miss Caroline Gentry, a native of West Virginia, and was taken up by E. W. Hammons, Managing Director of the Educational Films Corporation, who engaged Frederick A. Thomson to make the picture. William Addison Lathrop was employed to write a scenario that should give the film a story, but, it is said, the story will be used merely as a vehicle for a study of the methods and conditions of coal production. Life at the mines as well as the processes of mining will be shown in the picture.

The Educational's second announcement is that "Your Fighting Navy at Work and Play," a multiple-reel picture showing the navy as it is today, is soon to be released for presentation in New York and later throughout the country. Every form of naval activity—guns at work, battle evolutions of the fleet, the operations of submarines and destroyers, the firing of torpedoes, and the building up of smoke-screens—is illustrated in the film in addition to views of sailors following the routine of their work and at play.

Secretary Daniels has commended the film, writing to the producers, saying: "Those who are so fortunate as to see the navy at work and at play, as you have portrayed it, will have a high appreciation of its strength and power."

Lieutenant Henry Reuterdahl has written a running story of titles to accompany the pictures.

Guy Bolton, the author of a number of stage successes, has turned his hand to scenario writing and produced "Marriage," which will be the second picture from the Frank A. Keeney Corporation. Catherine Calvert will appear in the leading woman's part.

Anita Stewart will start work this week at the Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn on the first of a special series of features, according to an announcement made by Albert E. Smith, President of the company. Her first production will be under the direction of Wilfrid North, who directed "Over the Top" with Sergeant Empey, and Mr. Smith will personally supervise her pictures. Miss Stewart's first vehicle will be "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl," by Sir Arthur W. Pinero, in which Billie Burke was seen on the stage some seasons ago.

The patriotic entertainment of the Woman's Forum announced to take place at the Rivoli next Thursday has been postponed until May 28.

J. A. Berst, formerly of the Pathe organization, was elected President of United Picture Theatres of America at a meeting of the Directors held on April 27. Lee A. Ochs retains his place on the Board of Directors, serving hereafter as Vice President.

Forced by trouble with her eyes to withdraw temporarily from the production pictures, Mme. Olga Petrova is planning an extensive tour to promote the sale of war savings stamps. She expects to speak in moving picture theatres all over the country, beginning her trip as soon as her next picture, "Patience Sparhawk," now nearly done, is completed.

According to an announcement by Pathe, the Rialto has booked for early exhibition the screen version of A. H. Woods's "The Yellow Ticket," in which Fannie Ward, Warner Oland, Milton Sills, Helene Chadwick, J. H. Gilmour, and Nicholas Dunaew will appear.

George Le Guere of "Business Before Pleasure," Harry Benham of "The Rainbow Girl," and Edward O'Connor of "Sick-a-Bed" will be seen in the photodramatization of Katherine Hall-land Taylor's novel, "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," in which Marion Davies of "The Century Girl" will be the star. Julius Steger is making the picture at the Biograph Studio in East 175th Street.

Mabel Normand of Goldwyn has made a film for the United States Food Administration which will be exhibited in news weeklies throughout the country.

The General Film Company is releasing weekly pictures in which all of the characters are negroes. They are known as Ebony Comedies.

Select Pictures Corporation announces three productions to be released this month, "The Lesson," with Constance Talmadge; "De Luxe Annie," with Norma Talmadge, and "The Ordeal of Rosetta," with Alice Brady. These three pictures, with Clara Kimball Young's "The Renson Why," which was ready for distribution the last day of April, will represent the Select output for the next thirty days.

Diana Allen, formerly of the "Ziegfeld Follies" and of the "Miss 1917" company, is now being starred in a series of one-reel comedies by the Diamond Film Company of New Orleans for General Film Company release. Miss Allen is supported by Lou Marks, Oom Paul, and Irving Browning.

World Pictures will release "The Interloper," a new Kitty Gordon photoplay, on June 3. This is the first completed product of Oscar Apfel under the World Pictures trade-mark.

Nearly seventy-five O. Henry stories in screen form have been distributed by the General Film Company, it is said.

Klaw & Erlanger and the Shuberts are becoming rivals in the booking of motion picture films as well as in the routing of theatrical companies, it is reported.

Myrtle Stedman, who is sometimes seen on the musical comedy stage as well as on the screen, has turned her hand to cooking, and offers the following recipe for butterscotch pie, which, she says, would meet with Mr. Hoover's approval:

"One cup brown sugar, 2 rounding tablespoonfuls of butter, the same of flour, yolks of 2 eggs, and 1 cup of milk. Cream brown sugar, butter, and flour together. Mix eggs and milk together and heat to boiling. Remove from fire and pour over the sugar, butter, and flour. Mix all together and let come to a boil until thick. Pour into crust, which has been browned; beat whites of eggs and spread over the top, adding a little sugar."

Instructive films are finding a wide use in Canada, especially in the Province of Ontario, according to The Moving Picture World, which reports that the Provincial Government has adopted moving pictures for extensive public work. More than 10,000 feet of film has been used to show what Canada is doing for the reconstruction and re-education of disabled soldiers, and the Ontario Department of Agriculture sends educational pictures throughout the province which instruct the farmers in scientific agriculture. Meetings held during four weeks of last Winter where these films were shown were attended by more than 67,000 farmers, and in three weeks at least 1,500 women saw farm household pictures at meetings held by the Women's Institute of Simcoe County. Films showing road building, work in mines, and the advantages of Ontario for settlers have been distributed and exhibited before thousands. Returned soldiers who have taken up farming for the first time have learned much about their new work from the pictures.

The Fox Film Corporation, which is producing "The Caillaux Case," staged the execution of Bolo Pacha in New York on the same day that the man was shot in France, according to an announcement. Anticipating the execution, Richard Stanton, the director of the film, had the set of the prison yard at Vincennes made and the actors in the scene selected. As soon as the news of Bolo's death was published, the director obtained all available press reports, assembled his actors, and staged the execution according to his best information about what had occurred in France. The scene will be part of "The Caillaux Case."

The Vitagraph Company of America has filed suit in the Superior Court at Boston for $250,000, naming Louis B. Mayer, Colman Levin, and J. Robert Ruben as defendants. Albert E. Smith, President of the Vitagraph Company, has engaged Daniel H. Coakley of Boston to handle the case, which is an outgrowth of the litigation started by Mr. Smith to prevent Anita Stewart from leaving Vitagraph and entering the employ of Mayer.

The complaint of Vitagraph charges Mayer and his codefendants with conspiracy in attempting to entice Miss Stewart away from the company. The action is expected to have an important influence on the motion picture industry, whichever side wins. The defendants, of course, deny the allegations of the Vitagraph Company.

Enid Bennett is working on "The Desert Mating," a new Paramount picture by J. G. Hawks. Jack Holt is her leading man.

REELS FOR ANGLERS.

"Fishes and Fishing" Delights Fishermen and Makes Others Want to Go Fishing.

SELDOM have moving pictures been received with the keen interest and enthusiasm that welcomed "Fishes and Fishing," a selection of films shown at Carnegie Hall last Monday evening under the auspices of the American Angler. The big hall was nearly filled with people who had come at the invitation of the magazine, and, as might be supposed, many devotees of the rod, reel, and line were in the crowd. To these the pictures seemed almost as good as a fishing trip, and in others present not numbered among the piscatorially elect the pictures stirred a yearning to be somewhere in a rocking boat with a searching line overboard or standing up to the knees in the water of a rushing stream whipping the surface with a piece of string.

The spectators seemed almost to forget that they were watching a screen, and a good part of the delight of more or less detached persons present was to observe the reactions of many who threw themselves into the activities of the photographed fishermen with spontaneous participating interest. At one point, for example, when the pictures showed a man standing on the bank of a stream trying to land a large salmon without a net, several of the spectators, after watching anxiously while the angler drew the fish within reach and made a number of vain efforts to seize him, shouted simultaneously, "Gill him! Gill him!" and when the fisherman missed the gills and the salmon finally got away, there were exclamations of disappointment from a number who felt that they had been personally concerned in the tragedy of loosing a fish once hooked.

The films in general were the result of good photographic work, and their variety kept the program from becoming at any time monotonous. Some of the subjects included were: "The Conservation and Propagation of Fish in New York," "Sword fishing in the Pacific," "Indians Fishing on the Columbia River," "Salmon Propagation," "Salmon Fishing in New Brunswick," "An Alligator Hunt in Florida Swamps," "Strange Sea Life," "The Fisher-Folk of Japan," "Shark Fishing Off the Coast of Florida," and "Angling for Steelhead Trout."

A number of the pictures showed exciting scenes of contest between men and sharks, alligators and sword-fish, and half a dozen of the films were the product of the natural color photography of Prizma, Inc., which has been developed to a high degree of excellence.

It is the plan of the American Angler to send the pictures on a tour of the country, the purpose being to interest fishermen, to encourage others to take up fishing, and to add to the public's knowledge of fish and what is being done for their conservation and propagation. The pictures should do much to accomplish this threefold object.

In criticism of the presentation in Carnegie Hall it may be said that the movement of the pictures was too rapid. As the lecturer of the evening Dr. Allen S. Williams gave the impression that he was a good fisherman.

SUMMER MUSIC PLANS.

Summer concerts on the green at Columbia University are announced by the New York Military Band under Edwin Franko Goldman. Ten weeks of concerts are planned, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights, beginning June 10. The midweek concerts will include community singing, and the Friday programs will introduce guest composers, on June 14 Percy Grainger and June 21 Henry Hadley.

Music in the parks this Summer may be affected by a recent proposal to reduce the city's appropriation for that purpose, a reduction against which C. M. Tremaine of the National Bureau for Advancement of Music has sent a letter of protest to the Board of Estimate and Mayor Hylan. Mr. Tremaine points out that there has been an increase of public musical activities since the war in both England and Canada.

The Symphony Society announces that Willem Willeke, formerly of the Kneisel Quartet, has been engaged as first 'cellist in place of Engelbert Roentgen, now with the 305th Infantry at Camp Upton. Alexander Saslavsky, the first violin, has resigned after twenty years. Victor Kolar, assistant conductor, will devote the Summer to composition.

Red Cross and War Benefits.

John McCormack, the tenor, is now nearing the completion of a $100,000 tour for the Red Cross, which he began last December at Washington, Philadelphia, and Boston, and continued on a March roundup of Cleveland, Salt Lake, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Denver. A concert May 20 in Chicago is expected to fill out the six figures promised, and after this obligation is paid off, the tenor has offered to raise $50,000 for the Knights of Columbus war camp fund. Besides recent benefits for the 9th Massachusetts Regiment, the 69th New York, the French tuberculous soldiers and the poor of Athlone, he is now planning to sing in the American army camps.

INSTRUCTION—Swimming.
SAVED!
Do not make the mistake of going away this summer without knowing how to swim.
Our ten-lesson course will make you proficient in this necessary art. Tiled, daylight pools—competent instructors. The only school in the city that has taught swimming scientifically for nineteen years. If this means anything to you, send for Booklet T.

PRUSSIAN MANNERS

How Civilized Usages Have Been Disregarded by Invaders in the Occupied Districts of France.

By C. JOURNELLE.

From an Article in The Atlantic Monthly.

LIFE in the invaded provinces of France, during the years 1914 and 1915, remained under a pall of mysery and silence; one would have said that that strip of our territory had fallen into an abyss, so rigorously did the Germans keep our compatriots in secret durance. It was not until after a year of this seclusion that some repatriated persons began to emerge—at first at rare intervals, then in frequent batches; but in what a state of pallid exhaustion! • • • They all looked as if they had escaped from a torture chamber. • • •

Indeed, as we shall see, the German tyranny does not consist simply in an exorbitant application of the dogma of might. It has special mortifications, peculiar to the race, which make it even more painful, if that is possible. It is not inspired solely by the systematic despotism and immorality cynically adopted by Germany; it is not a pure, unalterated application of any doctrine; it springs from a genuine lack of morality, from a well-spring of vicious animalism, which psychologists have so often detected in the German blood.

Not that I am so foolish as to hold that all Germans are low, malignant, and brutal; but it can be said without hesitation that such is, generally speaking, their psychical type, more or less emphasized; that such are their racial characteristics, as appears from innumerable facts gathered from the lips of our repatriates of every locality.

One of the most amazing manifestations of the Germanic spirit, in invaded France, is the compulsory salutation which the officers impose upon all males, and, by a refinement of tyranny, upon the women and girls. Even in ancient Latium, at the Caudine Forks, only men were made to pass under the yoke, and that but once. But the Teuton, in his insensibility to human dignity, is never weary of trampling upon other men's souls and of treating man like a beast of the field.

This enforced tragi-comic salute to the invaders and intruders naturally wounded to the quick the high sense of their own dignity and of the truth characteristic of Frenchmen. Resistance appeared on all sides. Force was necessary to gratify a caprice that Gessler might have delighted in. At Noyon, at Vergnier, in hundreds of places, those who infringed the regulation were thrown into jail. Sexagenarian priests who had neglected to bare their heads before Sub-Lieutenants were dragged away to prison beyond the Rhine. Officers did not blush to horsewhip passers-by who did not salute them, or who did not bow low enough. At Etreux a blind man was struck by a Colonel whom he could not see.

Above all, the salute exacted from women displays to the full an innate vulgarity peculiar to the German. We recall our own Louis XIV., always the first to salute the women in his service, absolute master as he was. Our secular French tradition of courtesy and chivalry rises in revolt. But nothing is more German than to lay the heavy hand of oppression on women.

Why, at St. Quentin, in 1915, an elderly woman, in her terrified haste to salute an officer and make way for him on the sidewalk, fell and broke her leg. Sometimes this female salute is elaborated; women are compelled to smile when bowing. These anxious and grief-stricken women, torn from their husbands and children and brothers, these women who are robbed and whose homes are constantly searched and tossed and turned over like the bedding of cattle, are commanded to smile upon the invaders!

It is not the salute alone which shows us the Germans engaged in actively persecuting women. In September, 1914, the troops constantly pointed their guns at Frenchwomen to force them to wait upon them; the officers as constantly had their revolvers in their hands. In the districts where game is abundant girls, whatever their station in life, act as beaters when the officers hunt, and those who refuse are imprisoned in a cellar three days for each such refusal.

The period of actual assaults has passed, but there remains the pleasant pastime of frightening young girls by discharging firearms at close range, and firearms held in whose hands—in those of the assassins of Tamines and Dinan!

Since Jan. 1, 1917, the civil mobilization has exhibited this female slavery in all its hideousness. Even before that the women had been forced to wait upon the officers at table and to wash their linen. The German authorities had already laid upon them all possible tasks—taking no account of social position or of physical strength. Middle-class women of Lille and La Fère were sent to dig potatoes a hundred kilometers from their homes. The widow of a French Colonel killed in action was in turn chambermaid and farm laborer in Germany. In the region about Laon one could see women working under the lash. Worse still, they are sent out to work in close proximity to the firing line, where the Germans themselves find it unsafe to go. Or again, when aircraft are passing over the women are forbidden to leave their work, while their keepers run to cover. Mrs. Edith Wharton even saw elderly women whose arms or legs boche officers had broken with cabres.

The harassing and insulting of women take also another turn. Women and girls of good social position are compelled to undress on the pretext of search or medical examinations. The German has no respect for girls; he has torn them from their families by thousands. • • •

What shall we say of the requisition itself, and, worse yet, of the enforced labor of our people upon German munitions. In very truth, the enrollment of captive Frenchmen in the enemy munition factories has enlarged the confines of human degradation. French and Belgians who refused to lay aside their moral obligations have been deprived of food, or have been immersed for hours at a time, in Winter, in pools of ice-cold water, or bound to trees and flogged, until they were changed into mere beasts of burden. • • •

The barbarians carry their outrages so far as to cast obloquy upon our reverence for our dead. Not content with erecting over the charnelhouses of the battlefield carved monuments insulting to our gallant troops, they even profane the cemeteries and mar them with obscenities; they empty graves by the thousands, in order to carry pillage to the limit. At Laon they actually stole the flowers which the people had laid on the coffins of three children killed in a bombardment from the air on Dec. 21, 1916.

The dignity of the priesthood in its turn has been dragged into the mire, with the same craving to outrage sentiments most worthy of respect. In October, 1915, they derisively enveloped in a green gown, and sentenced to hard labor, the curé of Saint-Michel, in whose house they had found the toy rifle of a child! So, too, in 1914 the curé of Le Catelet, having been maltreated and beaten on a false suspicion of assault, had to look on while the soldiers arrayed a dead horse in his priestly robes amid laughter and hooting. • • •

It would have been natural—or so it seems—that in the officers at least a more fully developed intellectuality would counterbalance these degrading tendencies. But no, nothing of the sort. Their intellectuality has no other effect than to lead them to acknowledge with pride, and to display more fully, their racial deformities.

Still imbued with the feudal spirit, they assume their station openly, without shame or reserve, on an Olympus of good living, of material indulgence and rapine, above the mass of common soldiers and the suffering people. Everywhere, in the zone of cantonment, private casinos afford them abundance and comfort. Notably at Laon, their requisitions of plate and glass bear witness to their tempestuous revels, wherein one can detect the survival of their primitive mental state when they were rushing toward Paris, like gigantic Saturnalian worms; for numerous officers carried away in their trunks the smoking paraphernalia of the theatres and private supper parties, and others lay dead drunk under the tables at their halting places.

They arrange casinos and private apartments at their pleasure, tearing down such walls or houses as happen to be in their way, seizing furniture on all sides, drawing upon each town as upon an immense free warehouse. Factories supply them with electric light at the cost of the inhabitants. Cattle and fowl, left behind on the farms, are hardly numerous enough to satisfy them. They requisition these fowl at the expense of the people, who are left to starve. They leave for the children only an infinitesimal quantity of milk. The butter of the dairies is also reserved for them, and even the private soldiers are allowed to buy only the skim milk that remains.

At the beginning of the occupation certain officers maintained some reserve and some appearance of decency in the French households in which they had their billets. But as time passed they all sank deeper into iniquity, and stood less and less upon ceremony. • • •

In Roubaix • • • the Kommandantur orders all the young and good-looking women to report at the officers' quarters, and punishes recalcitrants with three months in a German fortress. Failing to find sufficiently effective panders in destitution and terror, Germany does not shrink from subjecting virtue to the ordinary penalties of vice, and thus allows her latent criminal frenzy to appear in a new aspect. • • •

The first thought of these Kommandants in the way of police regulation was to forbid the inhabitants to have weapons of any sort, and to confiscate them all most painstakingly. In carrying out this order they displayed the same frenzy of fear which has often led them to extreme measures. The most harmless steel instrument in the drawer of a solitary old woman made them wince. There is no town, no district, in which one or more civilians have not paid with their lives for the imprudence of keeping in their house some musket from an old stand of arms dating back to the seventeenth century, or a paltry shotgun which they thought of no consequence. The boche has so rudimentary a sense of equity that these civil murders were often attended with the most revolting cruelty.

At St. Quentin one of the victims, a woman, did not even know that the weapon was in the house, of which she was only temporarily in charge. Another was a gunsmith, in whose shop some shotgun powder was found, and who was shot for the offense. A miller of Vendhuile, who had used his revolver, it is true, upon two brutal, thieving soldiers, was smeared with kerosene and burned alive. Other engines of war—or what were so designated—pigeons, and telephone wires afforded an excuse for much slaughter of the innocent. A schoolboy of St. Quentin was on the point of being shot simply for having waved his handkerchief when an airplane passed over almost too high to be visible. • • •

And signs of approbation from the authorities fall in showers: fines on every pretext, imprisonment, deportation, sentence of death. These penalties are often imposed on persons simply under suspicion, especially on many priests, imprisoned for no cause. "No one can be sure of tomorrow," says one of the repatriated. A word too outspokenly French in sympathy may send you to a prison cell. At Bohain the prisons are overflowing with civilians condemned for trifles; a convict gang has been formed of inhabitants alleged to be refractory. In certain communes regular prisons have been built, as the cellars were too small. For, in most cases, the cellars, long ago emptied of their contents, are used as jails in the villages, and jails where the inmates are kept on a bread and water diet. And all this aside from blows and insults.

A shopkeeper at Hirson, the mother of three children, was shot because she went into Belgium to buy goods. Young deportees, who are employed in digging and who drop their shovels from weariness, are shot at point-blank range by the sentries. At Vauresis, on Sept. 18, 1914, ten people were shot for going out at night with lanterns, as was their custom.

The readiness of the Germans to shoot inoffensive persons has manifested itself a thousand times. How many—how many women have been victims of drunken or brutal soldiers! How many others have fallen under the fire of sentries because they had ventured into the street after 6 o'clock at night to fetch a doctor for a sick person, or to look for a child who had not come home!

And there is no real protection against the excesses either of the private soldier or of the Kommandant. The former, if any one dares to complain of him, avenges himself by pillage or by some foul blow. The Kommandant, from whose decree an appeal is taken to the commanding General, wreaks his vengeance at once by requisitions, expulsions, or burnings. • • •

The bare definition of the proscribed offenses shows us upon what a vicious and disgraceful plan the arbitrary power of the Kommandanturs is exercised. Their agents themselves, with sober faces, call the householder who tries to conceal his property from them a "notorious thief." In their eyes the father of a family is a criminal who hides his silverware in his cellar—a crime, it would seem, which confers upon the invaders the absolute right to seize the property. A criminal, too, is the faithful wife who gives shelter to her husband who has eluded their pursuit; so, too, the girl who refuses to be dishonored. And it is a crime to give a bit of bread to an unfortunate prisoner.

Pillage, requisition, destruction, go side by side, look alike, and run in harness together, like a fraternal team of apocalyptic monsters.

But, concurrently with these direct methods, the occupying forces seek also to increase their prizes by oblique devices. They assume the mask of commerce, the mask of industry, to say nothing of the judicial mask, which enables them to glut themselves with fines without number. In the dairy country, in 1915, they requisitioned all the butter, paid for it at the rate of 15 cents a pound, and sold it at double the price to the inhabitants. • • •

All the brutality, perfidy, and savagery manifested by Germany from day to day is not to be explained by any philosophic theory, or as a systematic policy. Temperament is an essential part of it. Moreover, there must be a special lack of the moral sense, an inherent deficiency of the sentiments of justice, honor, and charity. There must be an hereditary perversity.

Every Woman's Shoe Problems Solved By These Soles

How to save money on shoes and still have her feet smartly clad—

How to keep her feet dry on wet days and still have her foot gear as trim-looking as on dry days—

These are the two greatest shoe problems for every woman.

In the solution of both these problems Neōlin Soles fit amazingly well.

Saving shoe money is largely a question of getting shoes with soles that wear longer, for sole wear is the greatest factor in shoe cost.

And Neōlin Soles, though they cost no more to start with, are so durable that they wear longer and so cut shoe bills down.

You have just as good-looking shoes as before, but pay less for them, by the year, because you need fewer pairs.

Having the feet trim on wet days is merely a matter of dispensing with rubbers.

When your shoes have Neōlin Soles it is safe to go without rubbers, unless you walk in puddles or mud that reaches to the upper, for Neōlin Soles are absolutely waterproof.

Yet wear and waterproofness are but two of the important virtues of Neōlin Soles. They are exceedingly comfortable—easy as an old shoe from the first moment of wear, not a bit of breaking-in required.

And they make walking safer and easier by providing a better grip on walking surfaces.

Don't you think that you should wear Neōlin Soles, now that you know these facts?

Get them on the new shoes you buy, or have your worn shoes re-soled with them.

Get them also for others in your family. They are available everywhere, on new shoes or as re-soles, for men, women and children.

But when you buy Neōlin Soles be sure you see the Neōlin trade mark underneath. If it is not there the sole is not Neōlin. Mark that mark; stamp it on your memory: Neōlin—

SOUTHERN SLAVS WIN RECOGNITION

The Differences of Jugoslavs and Italy Harmoniously Settled at Meeting of Congress of Subject Races in Rome.

By WALTER LITTLEFIELD.

UNIQUE among the congresses of the war and of a political and diplomatic, if not of a military, importance surpassed by few, was the Subject Races Confsrence held in Rome on April 9-11. Here the representatives of several "little nations," now subject to Austria-Hungary, or occupied by her soldiers, and the representatives of Italy, France, England, and the United States, met to see if a way could be found to recognize the "Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes," whieb has existed on paper ever since the Declaration of Corfu, on July 20, 1917. The results of the gathering may be all the more significant because of last week's persistent rumors of disaffection among Czech-Slavic soldiers in the Austro-Hungarian Army.

It was natural that the meeting should have taken place under the auspices of the Italian Government, for, of all the Allies, Italy would be chiefly concerned in the outcome; in the past her interests have clasbed with those of the "little nations" concerned when put forward by the Vienna Government, and, at all events, she must make her position in the Adriatic secure, where Austria's industrial and commercial cupidity has brought about the development of Trieste, Pola, and Fiume at the expense of Venice, Ancona, and Brindisi, and where the rock-bound eastern shore, with its deep harbor and natural fortifications, has given Austria a dominating military advantage over the low shores and shallow harbors of the Italian side. Moreover, much of the eastern littoral, ever since 1866, has justly been considered, on ethnic as well as historical grounds, "Italia Irredenta."

It may be said at once that, at the congress just held in Rome, Italy retired from the extremes of the position she had found it necessary to maintain so long as the inhabitants of the eastern shore were de jure as well as de facto Austrian snbjects, and accepted in principle tbe Declaration of Corfu, which denounced their de jure adhesion and obligations to the Dual Monarchy.

Italy also undertook to aid with every possible war measure the efforts of the "Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes" to establish their independence from the Hapsburgs, and to espouse their political claims before her allies when the territorial and political entity of the new kingdom should have become an established fact by the military defeat of Austria-Hungary.

On the first day of the congress a President was elected and Vice Presidents were chosen from each of the nationalities rspresented. Senator Ruffini was elected President and Signor Andrea della Torre, proprietor of the Corriere della Sera of Milan, who last August started the campaign in favor of recognizing the independence of Austria's Southern Slav subjects, was chosen to represent Italy. M. Franklin-Bouillen represented France, Wickham Steed England, and Nelson Gay the United States.

The Jugoslavs were represented by Dr. Ants Trumbic, President of the Southern Slav Committee, who with Nikola Pachitch, Premier and Foreign Minister of Serbia, had signed the Declaration of Corfu. M. Benes was chosen for the Czecho-Slovaks, M. Draghicesco for the Rumanians, and M. Zamorski for the Poles. Signor Giovanni Amendola, the Rome correspondent of the Corriere della Sera, was made Secretary General of the congress.

Marchese Guglielmi Quaestor of the Italian Cbamber of Deputies welcomed the delegates, and among the most important demonstrations was tho adhesion by acclamation of the Parliamentary National Defense Group of 125 Senators and 160 Deputies. Another important adhesion was that of tbe Italian Irredentist Political Association, which thereby, like the Italian Government itself, placed itself on record as being willing to modify its conception of the Adriatic question.

The work of the Congress was divided among four committees for the purpose of studying the ethnic, historical, political, geographical, and military problems involved. But the greatest problem of all was to reconcile the secret treaty which Italy made on April 26, 1915, with Russia, Great Britain, and France, with the famous Declaration of Corfu of July 20, 1917, for the treaty and the declaration clashed on one important point. It was, therefore, in a spirit of mutual concession that the delegates approached this problem.

This was the secret treaty given out for publication in a garbled version by the Bolshevist Government of Russia on Nov. 23, 1917. It had brought dismay to the Jugoslavs all over the world until they were reassured by the Italian Government, whose good-will had already been brought under suspicion by Italy's declaration of the independence of Albania on the previous June 3, a declaration which had seemed to make serious inroads on the Jugoslav territory as it was then being defined.

It was very easy, however, for that section of the Italian press interested in healing the breach to convince people that Italy had negotiated the treaty under the régime of the "old diplomacy" and on the principle of reciprocal guarantees and concessions on the part of her allies. Moreover, the provisions objected to by the Jugoslavs were directed against the Austro-Hungarian Empire and not against the "Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenss," wbich had no existence, even on paper, when Italy was preparing to enter tho war and signed the treaty in April, 1915.

What measurably served to restore the confidencs of all concerned—for the Jugoslavs, on their side, owing to some ill-advised propaganda, had been suspected of playing the game, if not of the Hapsburgs, at lesst of Vienna and Budapest politicians—was an interview which took place in London late last January between Signor Orlando, the Italian Premier, and Dr. Trumbic, and the statement issued by the latter.

This was tho first occasion that thera had bsen any contact between the Italian Government and the committee of which Dr. Trumbic is the President. Tha doctor's statement is as fellows:

"My conference with Signor Orlando was long, cordial, and open-hearted. The points of difference between the Italians and the Jugoslav nations do not result from a real conflict of interests, but from a point of view, and it is desirabla that they should be elimlnated, for our mutual interests are closely connected now and must remain so after the war.

"At present it is sufficient to emphasize the fact that Austria-Hungary is our common enemy. She holds in slavery 7,000,000 of her Jugoslav subjects—Serbians, Croats, and Slovenes—and she is menacing tho security of Italy.

"If Austria-Hungary should continue to exist after the war, she will keep our nation in slavery and will be a permanent menace to Italian independence and free development. Therefore, the Italians and the Jugoslavs should coma to an understanding directed against Austria-Hungary; they should also come to an understanding with other nationalities subject to Austria-Hungary in order to act with united forces for tha liberation of these nationalities from Austro-Hungarian domination. This is the great common interest of our nation and Italy, and is also the general interest of the Allies.

"Austria is now under the domination of Germany, and will be still mors so after the war. It is, therefore, of capital interest to the Allies to work for the independence of the nationalities which suffer real servitudo under the Austro-Magyars. I do not know what the future may bring, but in any cass tha fact that this meeting between the Chief of the Italian Government and the President of the Jugoslav Committee, of which I retain the most sympatbetic impression, has tsken place is a happy omen."

That the omen was not misleading was proved by the meeting of the Congress at Rome on April 9.

With the Constitution of the "Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes," and the title of the sovereign designated in the Declaration of Corfu as "King of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes," neither Italy ner her allies has any concern. Nor has she nor have they any concern if the "little nations" directly interested shall later see fit to alter their agreement wherein it pertains to themselves. These things are "self-determining."

Article 9 of the Declaration, however, is a different matter, for it says:

"In the interests of freedom and of the equal rights of all nations, the Adriatic Sea shall be free and open to all."

Thia required qualification, as the Jugoslav delegates at tho Rome congress were not loath to acknowledge; just as the Italian delegates acknowledged that the cohesion of Montenegro and Serbia and the subject nations of Croats and Slovenes, Czechs and Slovacs and the Poles, with the idea of obtaining their independenca from Austria-Hungary, imposed certain changes in the treaty which Italy had mada with her allies—without, however, lessening her obligations toward those allies.

With the matter of the Trentino and its "unredeemed Italians" conceded to Italy in the treaty, the congress had nothing to do. Nor was it concerned with tha claims of Italy to the coastlands of Gorizia and Gradisca. It acknowledged Italy's right to Trieste and to part of the peninsula of Istria, the northeastern boundary of which would be subject to post-belium adjustment.

On the other hand, both the Italian and Jugoslav delegates acknowledged that if the Allies insisted that the littoral from Fiume south to and including the northern part of Dalmatia should become internationalized they would offer no opposition—otherwise, it should belong to the Croats, who predominated there.

To the middle part of Dalmatia and certain adjacent islands Italy necessarily laid claim on strategic and ethnic grounds, as a protection for the opposite shore, while, through the southern part, Serbia is to have her "window on the sea," as far as the frontier of Montenegro, later to be adjusted. The Montenegrin-Albanian frontier was also considered capable of adjustment. Bosnia and Herzegovina were acknowledged to be Serbian on account of the Serbian preponderance there.

The question of how Italy may still further protect her western shore from Montenegro southward on the eastern littoral did not enter into the work of the congress, for that concerns Italy, the Indepondent State of Albania, and Greece.

It is unnecessary to go further into these ramifications of the Adriatic question. Enough has been said to show that tha Rome Congress recognized the existence of a definite body of "little nations" in their revolt against Austria-Hungary; that tbe differences between this revolting body and the Italian Government were amicably settled, and that an Italian Adriatic-Balkanic program, really clear and harmonious, might shortly be expected as one of tha most powerful weapons against Austria-Hungary. And such a program would be doubly useful; it would convince the Allies that the Adriatic mandate of Italy is in good bands, and it would secure to Italy the support hitherto held back by timidity and doubt.

The congress at Rome is a fitting diplomatic sequel to the military recovery on tbe Piave.

JUGOSLAVS WANT ITALY'S BACKING

By BOGUMIL VOSNJAK,
Member of the Jugoslav Committee.

MAZZINI, the great fighter for Italian and for human freedom, would be happy were he alive today. An important event, which will be remembered in the future history of the dismemberment of the Hapsburg Empire, has happened.

The Eastern neighbors of Italy are the Jugoslavs. Twelve million Jugoslavs—Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes—are today subject to the misrule of the Hapsburgs. Mazzini, nearly a half century ago, predicted the dismemberment of the Austrian Empire as both inevitable and necessary.

In this great war drama of the present, we forget the seers of the past. Of these was Mazzini. His work was for humanity, not for Italy alone. Not only as an Italian did he despise Austria-Hungary. He saw in this unspeakable empire the instrument of human oppression, the breeder of human slavery.

The collapse of Turkey, Mazzini said, will mean the death agony of Austria-Hungary. "Austria is the China of Europe: Turkey is the Austria of the Orient." The fate of Austria and of Turkey will be identical, for their social basis is identical. They live by the exploitation of subject races. Before the Balkan wars be declared, "The Turkish and the Austrian Empires are condemned to death. The instrument of their death is in the hands of the Slavs."

Mazzini foresaw the necessity of a free Jugoslavia, a united country of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes. But to this new commonwealth Italy must be a friend. There must be an Italo-Jugoslav alliance. After the French defeat of 1870 Mazzini saw plainly the great danger of Pan Germanism, and said frankly: "Slavdom is destined to hinder every German dream of conquest." The Jugoslavs are today the real bulwark against Pan Germanism. Italy alone could not stand against the push of Germany. Only with a Jugoslav alliance can she do that.

Nearly three years ago, in a Paris hotel, representative Jugoslavs gathered from Austria-Hungary—Slavs, Croats, and Slovenes. Among them were members of the Parliaments and Diets, political leaders and other public men. They drafted the first revolutionary program of the nations of Austria-Hungary, based on the dismemberment of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, the unification of the Jugoslavs of Serbia and Montenegro on a basis of absolute equality of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, and of religious equality of the Roman and Orthodox churches. This program aroused fanatic enthusiasm among the Jugoslavs.

If Emperor Charles, in bis letter to Prince Sixtus de Bourbon of March 31, 1917, charged, as newspaper accounts report, that Serbia and her revolutionary groups had labored for the disintegration of the empire and were the cause of the revolutionary movement of the Jugoslavs of Austria-Hungary, he is absolutely mistaken. The movement for the liberation of the Jugoslavs from the tyranny of Austria was not instituted by Serbia, but was the product of internal conditions within the Austro-Hungarian Empire. The movement would exist had there never been a Serbia on Austria's frontiers.

Today we will make no accusations; we will not cite the articles of the secret London treaty of April, 1915. Who is responsible that this treaty was ever signed? Imperial, autocratic Russia, which exists no longer. This secret treaty, guaranteeing to Italy the privilege of annexing nearly a million Jugoslavs, lost all power with the collapse of imperial Russia and the entrance of America into the world conflict. This treaty also provided that Croats and Serbs should be kept separate, thus perpetuating, through the separata existence of Montenegro, the bad political traditions of the past. The treaty was a work of secret diplomacy. When, in 1915, the Jugoslav Committee denounced this treaty as a negation of the principle of nationality and the self-determination of nations, it served the cause of all democracy.

Two years later a delegation of the Jugoslav Committee, acting with the Serbian Government and representatives of Serbian political parties not in power, at the headquartsrs of the Serbian Government on the island of Corfu, drew up a document known as the Declaration of Corfu, and, in America, as the Jugoslav Declaration of Independence. The Declaration of Corfu is, first of all, an enlargement of the Paris program of the Jugoslav Committee, a program now officially recognized by the Serbian Government and by it submitted to the European powers as a diplomatic note. At once, therefore, the Jugoslav question became an international problem.

Everywhere the Declaration of Corfu is recognized as a history-writing document. It was called, erroneously, the pact of Corfu. A pact presumes a compromise between people formerly differing in opinion. This is not true of the Declaration of Corfu. From the first moment when the movement was got under way until the hour when the document was signed there have been neither disagreements nor quarrels among us. Rather we have been like brothers, meeting together far from home, discussing experiences, and planning the steps necessary to save our fathers' home from usurpation. This evidence of deep brotherly feeling is the best proof of our fitness to be a free and united nation.

In August, 1917, the Italian press was in a curious state of nervous excitement. Tho Nationalist press attacked the Jugoslav Committee with great violence. But already two leading articles had been published in the well-known Corriere della Sera, entitled "Our Responsibility" and "Discussions on the Pact of Corfu." Those two articles will be quoted by the historians of the future. They indicate a change in public opinion in Italy. The first expressed the feeling that it was the duty of Italy to seek from the Allies the only possible solution of the Austrian problem—the dismemberment of the empire as suggested in the declaration. It reminded the people that no longer must secret diplomacy be the guide, and that the cause of Italy itself must be rooted in the conscience of the nations. Future settlements in war-torn Europe, it added, must harmonize Italian interests with those of other nations, (undoubtedly the Jugoslav nation is meant.) Far more outspoken was the second article, in wbich Italy was warned against following the Austrian policy of "Divide et Impera."

There is no solution of the problem except that advocated by the Declaration of Corfu. Italy must aid the Jugoslavs in achieving political unity, and public opinion in Italy has grown more and more favorable to the Declaration of Corfu.
